A DIALOGUE

CONTAINING THE NUMBER OF THE EFFECTUAL PROVERBS IN THE ENGLISH TONGUE

PART I. THE PREFACE

Among other things profiting in our tongue—
Those which much may profit both old and young,

Such as on their fruit will feed or take hold—
Are our common plain pithy proverbs old.
Some sense of some of which, being bare and rude,

Yet to fine and fruitful effect they allude.
And their sentences include so large a reach,
That almost in all things good lessons they teach. [why?

This write I, not to teach, but to touch: for Men know this as well or better than I.

But this, and this rest, I write for this, Rememb'ring and considering what the pith
is:

That, by remembrance of these, proverbs may grow.

In this tale, erst talked with a friend, I show
As many of them as we could fitly find Falling to purpose, that might fall in mind;
To th'intent that the reader readily may Find them, and mind them, when he will always.

Finis.

CHAPTER I.

Of mine acquaintance a certain young man (Being a resorter to me now and than) Resorted lately, showing himself to be Desirous to talk at length alone with me.
 And, as we for this a meet place had won,
 With this old proverb this young man begun.
Whoso that knew what would be dear,
Should need be a merchant but one year.
 Though it, (quoth he), thing impossible be
 The full sequel of present things to foresee,
 Yet doth this proverb provoke every man
 Politically, (as man possible can),
 In things to come after to cast eye before,
 To cast out, or keep in, things for fore store;
 As the provision may seem most profitable,
 And the commodity most commendable.
 Into this consideration I am wrought
 By two things, which fortune to hands hath brought.
 Two women I know, of which twain the tone
 Is a maid of flowering age, a goodly one;
 Th'other a widow, who so many years bears,
 That all her whiteness lieth in her white hairs.
 This maid hath friends rich, but riches hath
 she none,
 Nor none can her hands get to live upon.
 This widow is very rich, and her friends bare,
 And both these, for love, to wed with me fond
 are. [worse;
 And both would I wed, the better and the
 The tone for her person, the tother for her purse. [woo.
 They woo not my substance, but myself they Goods have I none and small good can I do.

On this poor maid, her rich friends, I clearly know, [bestow,
 (So she wed where they will), great gifts will
 But with them all I am so far from faver,
 That she shall sure have no groat, if I have
 her. [swear,
 And I shall have as little, all my friends
 Except I follow them, to wed elsewhere.
 The poor friends of this rich widow bear no sway,
 But wed her and win wealth, when I will I may.
 Now which of these twain is like to be dearest?
 In pain or pleasure to stick to me nearest?
 The depth of all doubts with you to confither,
 The sense of the said proverb sendeth me
 hither, [scan'd,
 The best bargain of both quickly to have
 For one of them, think I, to make out of hand.

CHAPTER II.

Friend, (quoth I), welcome! and with right good will,
 I will, as I can, your will herein fulfil.
 And two things I see in you, that show you wise.
 First, in wedding, ere ye wed to ask advice.
 The second, your years being young it appears,
 Ye regard yet good proverbs of old ferne years.
 And, as ye ground your tale upon one of them,
 Furnish we this tale with everychone of them,
 Such as may fitly fall in mind to dispose.
 Agreed, (quoth he). Then, (quoth I), first this disclose— [maid,
 Have you to this old widow, or this young
 Any words of assurance ere this time said?

Nay, in good faith ! said he. Well then, (said I),

I will be plain with you, and may honestly
And plainly too speak : I like you, (as I said),
In two foretold things ; but a third have I weighed

Not so much to be liked, as I can deem ;
Which is, in your wedding, your haste so extreme.

The best or worst thing to man, for this life,
Is good or ill choosing his good or ill wife.
I mean not only of body good or bad,
But of all things meet or unmeet to be had ;
Such as at any time by any mean may,
Between man and wife, love increase or decay.
Where this ground in any head gravely
grateth,

All fiery haste to wed, it soon rebateth.

Some things that provoke young men to wed
in haste,

Show, after wedding, that haste maketh waste.
When time hath turned white sugar to white salt, [malt.

Then such folk see, soft fire maketh sweet
And that deliberation doth men assist,

Before they wed, to beware of Had I wist.

And then, their timely wedding doth clear appear

That they were early up, and never the near.

And once their hasty heat a little controlled,

Then perceive they well, hot love soon cold.

And when hasty witless mirth is mated weele,
Good to be merry and wise, they think and feel.

Haste in wedding some man thinketh his own avail,

When haste proveth a rod made for his own ¹⁰⁴ tail.

And when he is well beaten with his own rod,
Then seeth he haste and wisdom things far
odd. [need,

And that in all, or most things, wisht at Most times he seeth, the more haste the less speed. [hasty man's foe,

In less things than wedding haste show'th
So that the hasty man never wanteth woe.

These sage said saws if ye take so profound,
As ye take that by which ye took your ground,
Then find ye grounded cause by these now here
told,

In haste to wedding your haste to withhold.

And though they seem wives for you never so fit, [wit

Yet let not harmful haste so far outrun your
But that ye hark to hear all the whole sum That may please or displease you in time to come. [cheap

Thus, by these lessons, ye may learn good
In wedding and all thing to look or ye leap.

Ye have even now well overlooked me, (quoth
he),

And leapt very nigh me too. For, I agree
That these sage sayings do weightily weigh Against haste in all thing, but I am at bay
By other parables, of like weighty weight,
Which haste me to wedding, as ye shall hear straight.

CHAPTER III.

*He that will not when he may,
 When he would he shall have nay.
 Beauty or riches, the tone of the twain
 Now may I choose, and which me list obtain.
 And if we determine me this maid to take,
 And then tract of time train her me to forsake,
 Then my beautiful marriage lieth in the dike;
 And never for beauty shall I wed the like.
 Now if we award me this widow to wed,
 And that I drive off time, till time she be dead,
 Then farewell riches, the fat is in the fire,
 And never shall I to like riches aspire.
 And, a thousandfold would it grieve me more
 That she, in my fault, should die one hour before [voke,
 Than one minute after; then haste must pro-
*When the pig is proffered to hold up the poke.
 When the sun shineth make hay; which is to* say, [away.
 Take time when time cometh, lest time steal
 And one good lesson to this purpose I pike
 From the smith's forge, when th'iron is hot,
 strike! [man;
 The sure seaman seeth, the tide tarrieth no
 And long delays or absence somewhat to scan, Since that, that one will not another will—
 Delays in wooers must needs their speed spill.
 And touching absence, the full accompte who summeth
 Shall see, as fast as one goeth another cometh.
Time is tickle; and, out of sight, out of mind.
 Then catch and hold while I may: fast bind,
 fast find. [bleared.
 Blame me not to haste for fear mine eye be*

And thereby the fat clean flit from my beard.
Where wooers hop in and out, long time may bring

Him that hoppeth best at last to have the ring.
I hopping without for a ring of a rush,
And while I at length debate and beat the bush,
There shall step in other men and catch the birds.

And by long time lost in many vain words,
Between these two wives make sloth speed
confound; [ground.

While, between two stools, my tail go to
By this, since we see sloth must breed a scab, Best stick to the tone out of hand, hab or nab.
Thus, all your proverbs inveighing against haste, [placed.

Be answered with proverbs plain and promptly
Whereby, to purpose all this no further fits,
But to show so many heads so many wits.

Which show, as surely in all that they all tell,
That in my wedding I may even as well
Tarry too long, and thereby come too late,
As come too soon by haste in any rate.

And prove this proverb, as the words thereof
go—

Haste or sloth herein work nother wealth nor
Be it far or nigh, wedding is destiny. [woe—
And hanging likewise, saith that proverb, said
I.

Then wed or hang, (quoth he), what helpeth in the whole,

To haste or hang aloof, happy man happy dole.
Ye deal this dole, (quoth I), out at a wrong
dur;

For destiny, in this case doth not so stir
Against man's endeavour, but man may direct

His will, for provision to work or neglect.
 But, to show that quick wedding may bring good speed, [deed.
 Somewhat to purpose your proverbs prove in-Howbeit, whether they counterpoise or outweigh
 The proverbs which I before them did lay,
 The trial thereof we will lay a water
 Till we try more. For trying of which matter Declare all commodities ye can devise
 That, by those two weddings, to you can rise.

CHAPTER IV.

I will, (quoth he), in both these cases straight show [grow.
 What things, (as I think), to me by them will
 And, where my love began, there begin will I
 With this maid, the piece peerless in mine eye;
 Whom I so favour, and she so favoureth me,
 That half a death to us ['tis] asunder to be.
 Affection, each to other, doth us so move
 That well nigh, without food, we could live by love. [sight,
 For, be I right sad, or right sick, from her
 Her presence absenteth all maladies quite;
 Which seen, and that the great ground in marriage
 Standeth upon liking the parties personage,
 And then of old proverbs, in opening the pack,
 One sheweth me openly, in love is no lack.
 No lack of liking, but lack of living
 May lack in love, (quoth I), and breed ill chieving.
 Well, as to that, (said he), hark this othing :
 What time I lack not her, I lack nothing.

But though we have nought, nor nought we can geat,

*God never sendeth mouth but he sendeth meat;
And a hard beginning maketh a good ending;
In space cometh grace, and this further amending—*

*Seldom cometh the better, and like will to like;
God sendeth cold after clothes; and this I pike,
She, by lack of substance, seeming but a spark,*

Steinth yet the stoutest: for a leg of a lark
Is better than is the body of a kite;

And home is homely though it be poor in sight.
These proverbs for this part show such a flourish,

And then this party doth delight so nourish;
That much is my bow bent to shoot at these marks, [have larks.

And kill fear: when the sky falleth we shall
All perils that fall may, who feareth they fall shall,

Shall so fear all thing, that he shall let fall all;
And be more fraid than hurt, if the things were doone; [moon;

Fear may force a man to cast beyond the
Who hopeth in God's help, his help cannot start:

Nothing is impossible to a willing heart.

And will may win my heart, herein to consent,
To take all things as it cometh, and be content.
And here is, (q'he), in marrying of this maid,
For courage and commodity all mine aid.

Well said, (said I), but awhile keep we in quench [wench.

All this case, as touching this poor young
And now declare your whole consideration;

What manner things draw your imagination Toward your wedding of this widow, rich and old?

That shall ye, (q'he), out of hand have told.

CHAPTER V.

This widow, being foul, and of favour ill,
In good behaviour can very good skill;
Pleasantly spoken, and a very good wit;
And, at her table, when we together sit,
I am well served—we fare of the best;
The meat good and wholesome, and whole-somely dressed; [shift—
Sweet and soft lodging, and thereof great This felt and seen; with all implements of thrift, [coffers;
Of plate and money such cupboards and
And that without pain I may win these proffers.
Then covetise, bearing Venus's bargain back, Praising this bargain saith, better leave than lack.

And greediness, to draw desire to her lore,
Saith, that the wise man saith, store is no sore.
Who hath many peas may put the mo in the pot; [in lot.
Of two ills, choose the least, while choice lieth
Since lack is an ill, as ill as man may have,
To provide for the worst, while the best itself save.

Resty wealth willeth me this widow to win,
To let the world wag, and take mine ease in mine inn— [chin;
*He must needs swim, that is hold up by the
He laugheth that winneth.* And this thread finer to spin,

Maister promotion saieth : make this substance
sure ;

If riches bring once portly countenance in ure,
Then shalt thou rule the roost all round about ;
And better to rule, than be ruled by the rout.

It is said : be it better, be it worse,
Do ye after him that beareth the purse.

Thus be I by this once le senior de graunde,
Many that commanded me I shall command.
And also I shall, to revenge former hurts, Hold their noses to grindstone, and sit on their skirts

That erst sat on mine. And riches may make Friends many ways. Thus, better to give than
And, to make carnal appetite content, [take.
Reason laboureth will, to win will's consent,
To take lack of beauty but as an eye fore,
The fair and the foul by dark are like store ;
When all candles be out all cats be grey ;
All things are then of one colour, as who say.
And this proverb saith, for quenching hot desire

Foul water as soon as fair will quench hot fire.
Where gifts be given freely—east, west, north or south—

No man ought to look a given horse in the mouth. [tail—

And though her mouth be foul she hath a fair
I conster this text, as is most my avail.

In want of white teeth and yellow hairs to behold,

She flourisheth in white silver and yellow gold.
What though she be toothless, and bald as a coot ?

Her substance is shoot anker, whereat I shoot.
Take a pain for a pleasure all wise men can—

What? hungry dogs will eat dirty puddings, man!

And here I conclude, (quoth he), all that I know

By this old widow, what good to me may grow.

CHAPTER VI.

Ye have, (quoth I), in these conclusions found
 Sundry things, that very savourly sound;
 And both these long cases, being well viewed,
 In one short question we may well include;
 Which is : whether best or worse be to be led
 With riches, without love or beauty, to wed;
 Or, with beauty without riches, for love.
 This question, (quoth he), inquireth all that I move.

It doth so, (said I), and is neerly couched,
 But th'answer will not so briefly be touched;
 And yourself, to length it, taketh direct trade.
 For to all reasons that I have yet made,
 Ye seem more to seek reasons how to contend,
 Than to the counsel of mine to condescend.
 And to be plain, as I must with my friend,
 I perfectly feel, even at my finger's end,
So hard is your hand set on your halfpenny,
 That my reasoning your reason setteth nought
 But, reason for reason, ye so stiffly lay [by.
 By proverb for proverb, that with you do
 weigh,

That reason only shall herein nought move you To hear more than speak; wherefore, I will prove you

With reason, assisted by experience, [hence,
 Which myself saw, not long since nor far
 In a matter so like this fashioned in frame

That none can be liker—it seemeth even the same;

And in the same, as yourself shall espy,
Each sentence suited with a proverb well nigh;
And, at end of the same, ye shall clearly see How this short question shortly answered may be. [prick;

Yea, marry! (quoth he); now ye shoot nigh the Practise in all, above all toucheth the quick.

Proof upon practise, must take hold more sure
Than any reasoning by guess can procure.

If ye bring practise in place, without fabling,
I will banish both haste and busy babling.

And yet, that promise to perform is mickle,
For in this case my tongue must oft tickle.

Ye know well it is, as telleth us this old tale,
Meet that a man be at his own bridal. [were;

If he wive well, (quoth I), meet and good it
Or else as good for him another were there.

But for this your bridal, I mean not in it That silence shall suspend your speech every whit.

But in these marriages, which ye here meve,
Since this tale containeth the counsel I can give,

I would see your ears attend with your tongue;
For advice in both these weddings, old and young. [to talk,

In which hearing, time seen when and what
When your tongue tickleth, at will let it walk.

And in these bridals, to the reasons of ours,
Mark mine experience in this case of yours.

In them to me, that deed, word, ne well nigh thought

Chanced among them, whatever it were, [ear.
But one of the four brought it straight to mine Whereby, between these twain, and their two wives, [lives.

Both for wealth and woe, I knew all their four
And since the matter is much intricate,
Between side and side, I shall here separate
All matters on both sides, and then sequesterate Th'one side, while th'other be full rehearsed, in rate,

As for your understanding may best stand.
And this young poor couple shall come first in hand

Who, the day of wedding, and after a while,
Could not look each on other but they must smile;

As a whelp, for wantonness, in and out whips,
So played these twain, as merry as three chips.
Yea, there was God, (quoth he), when all is doone.

Abide! (quoth I), it was yet but honey moon;
The black ox had not trod on his nor her foot.
But ere this branch of bliss could reach any
root,

The flowers so faded that, in fifteen weeks
A man might espy the change in the cheeks, Both of this poor wretch, and his wife, this poor wench—

[French.
Their faces told toys, that Tott'n'am was turned
And all their light laughing turn'd and translated

Into sad sighing; all mirth was amated.
And, one morning timely, he took in hand
To make, to my house, a sleeveless errand;

Hawking upon me, his mind herein to break,
Which I would not see till he began to speak,
Praying me to hear him : and I said, I would ;
Wherewith this that followeth forthwith he told.

CHAPTER VIII.

I am now driven, (quoth he), for ease of my heart

To you, to utter part of mine inward smart.
And the matter concerneth my wife and me,
Whose fathers and mothers long since dead
be ;

But uncles, with aunts and cousins, have we Divers, rich on both sides ; so that we did see
If we had wedded, each where each kindred would,

Neither of us had lacked either silver or gold.
But never could suit, on either side, obtain
One penny to the one wedding of us twain.

And since our one marrying, or marring day,
Where any of them see us, they shrink away,
Solemnly swearing, such as may give ought,
While they and we live, of them we get right nought. [get,

Nor nought have we, nor no way ought can we Saving by borrowing till we be in debt

So far, that no man any more will us lend ;
Whereby, for lack, we both be at our wits'
end.

Whereof, no wonder ; since the end of our good,

And beginning of our charge, together stood.

But wit is never good till it be bought.

Howbeit, when bought, wits to best price be brought ;

Yet is one good forewit worth two after wits.
This payeth me home, lo! and full mo folly hits;

For, had I looked afore, with indifferent eye,
Though haste had made me thirst never so dry,
Yet to drown this drought, this must I needs think:

As I would needs brew, so must I needs drink.
The drink of my bride cup I should have for-borne,

Till temperance had tempered the taste beforne.
I see now, and shall see while I am alive,
Who weddeth or he be wise shall die or he thrive.

I sing now in this fact, factus est repente,
Now mine eyes be open I do repent me:
He that will sell lawn before he can fold it,
He shall repent him before he have sold it.
Some bargains dear bought, good cheap would be sold;

No man loveth his fetters, be they made of gold;

Were I loose from the lovely links of my chain,
I would not dance in such fair fetters again.

In house to keep household, when folks will needs wed, [bed.

Mo things belong than four bare legs in a
I reckoned my wedding a sugar-sweet spice;
But reckoners without their host much reckon
twice. [twain,

And, although it were sweet for a week or Sweet meat will have sour sauce, I see now
Continual penury, which I must take, [plain.
Telleth me: better eye out than alway ache.

Boldly and blindly I ventured on this;
Howbeit, who so bold as blind Bayard is?

And herein, to blame any man, then should I rave
 For I did it myself : and self do, self have.
 But, a day after fair cometh this remorse
 For relief : for, though it be a good horse
That never stumbleth, what praise can that avouch [touch?
 To jades that break their necks at first trip or
 And before this my first foil or breakneck fall, Subtilly like a sheep, thought I, I shall Cut my coat after my cloth when I have her.
 But now I can smell, nothing hath no savour ;
I am taught to know, in more haste than good
How Judicare came into the Creed. [speed,
 My careful wife in one corner weepeth in care,
 And I in another ; the purse is threadbare.
 This corner of our care, (quoth he), I you tell,
 To crave therein your comfortable counsel.

CHAPTER IX.

I am sorry, (quoth I), of your poverty ;
 And more sorry that I cannot succour ye ;
 If ye stir your need mine alms to stir,
 Then of truth ye beg at a wrong man's dur.
There is nothing more vain, as yourself tell can,
Than to beg a breech of a bare-arsed man.
 I come to beg nothing of you, (quoth he),
 Save your advice, which may my best way be ;
 How to win present salve for this present sore.
 I am like th'ill surgeon, (said I), without store
 Of good plasters. Howbeit, such as they are,
 Ye shall have the best I have. But first declare Where your and your wife's rich kinfolk do dwell. [well,
 Environed about us, (quoth he), which showeth

The nearer to the church, the farther from God.
Most part of them dwell within a thousand rod;
And yet shall we catch a hare with a taber
As soon as catch aught of them, and rather.
Ye play cole-prophet, (quoth I), who taketh in hand

To know his answer before he do his errand.
What should I to them, (quoth he), fling or flit?
An unbidden guest knoweth not where to sit.
I am cast at cart's arse, some folk in lack Cannot prease: a broken sleeve holdeth th'arm back;

And shame holdeth me back, being thus forsaken.

Tush, man! (quoth I), shame is as it is taken;
And shame take him that shame thinketh ye think none.

Unminded, unmoaned, go make your moan;
Till meat fall in your mouth, will ye lie in bed?
Or sit still? nay, he that gapeth till he be fed
May fortune to fast and famish for hunger.
Set forward, ye shall never labour younger.
Well, (quoth he), if I shall needs this viage make

With as good will as a bear goeth to the stake,

I will straight weigh anchor, and hoist up sail;
And thitherward hie me in haste like a snail;
And home again hitherward quick as a bee:
Now, for good luck, cast an old shoe after me.
And first to mine uncle, brother to my father,
By suit I will assay to win some favour.
Who brought me up, and till my wedding was done

Loved me, not as his nephew, but as his son;
And his heir had I been, had not this chanced,

Of lands and goods which should me much avanced. [bones

Trudge, (quoth I), to him, and on your mary-
 Crouch to the ground, and not so oft as once Speak any one word him to contrary.

I cannot tell that, (quoth he), by Saint Mary!

One ill word axeth another, as folks spake.

Well! (quoth I), better is to bow than break—

It hurteth not the tongue to give fair words;

The rough net is not the best catcher of birds.

Since ye can nought win, if ye cannot please,

Best is to suffer: for of sufferance cometh ease.

Cause causeth, (quoth he), and as cause causeth
 me,

So will I do: and with this away went he.

Yet, whether his wife should go with him or no,

He sent her to me to know ere he would go.

Whereto I said, I thought best he went alone.

And you, (quoth I), to go straight as he is gone,

Among your kinsfolk likewise, if they dwell
 nigh.

Yes, (quoth she), all round about, even here
 by.

Namely, an aunt, my mother's sister, who well, (Since my mother died), brought me up from the shell,

And much would have given me, had my wedding grown

Upon her fancy, as it grew upon mine own.

And, in likewise, mine uncle, her husband, was
 A father to me. Well, (quoth I), let pass;

And, if your husband will his assent grant,

Go, he to his uncle, and you to your aunt.

Yes, this assent he granteth before, (quoth
 she),

For he, ere this, thought this the best way to be. [none
But of these two things he would determine
Without aid : for two heads are better than one.
With this we departed, she to her husband,
And I to dinner to them on th'other hand.

CHAPTER X.

When dinner was done I came home again
To attend on the return of these twain.
And ere three hours to end were fully tried, Home came she first : welcome, (quoth I), and well hied !

Yea, a short horse is soon curried, (quoth she) ;
But the weaker hath the worse we all day see.
After our last parting, my husband and I
Departed, each to place agreed formerly.
Mine uncle and aunt on me did lower and glome ; [welcome.

Both bade me God speed, but none bade me
Their folks glomed on me too, by which it appeareth :

The young cock croweth, as he the old heareth.
At dinner they were, and made, (for manners' sake),

A kinswoman of ours me to table take ;
A false flatt'ring filth ; and, if that be good,
None better to bear two faces in one hood.
She speaketh as she would creep into your bosom ; [bottom

And, when the meal-mouth hath won the
Of your stomach, then will the pickthank it tell
To your most enemies, you to buy and sell.
To tell tales out of school, that is her great lust ;

Look what she knoweth, blab it wist, and out it must.

There is no mo such titifils in England's ground,
To hold with the hare, and run with the hound.
Fire in the tone hand, and water in the tother,
The makebate beareth between brother and brother.

She can wink on the ewe and worry the lamb ;
She maketh earnest matters of every flimflam.
She must have an oar in every man's barge ;
And no man may chat ought in ought of her charge.

Coll under canstick, she can play on both hands ;

Dissimulation well she understands.

She is lost with an apple, and won with a nut ;
Her tongue is no edge tool, but yet it will cut.
Her cheeks are purple ruddy like a horse plum ;
And the big part of her body is her bum.

But little tit-all-tail, I have heard ere this,
As high as two horse-loaves her person is.
For privy nips or casts overthwart the shins,
He shall lese the mastery that with her begins.
She is, to turn love to hate, or joy to grief,
A pattern as meet as a rope for a thief.
Her promise of friendship for any avail,
Is as sure to hold as an eel by the tail.
She is nother fish, nor flesh, nor good red herring.

She is a ringleader there ; and I, fearing
She would spit her venom, thought it not evil
To set up a candle before the devil.
I clawed her by the back, in way of a charm
To do me, not the more good, but the less harm ;

Praying her, in her ear, on my side to hold ;

She thereto swearing, by her false faith, she would.

Straight after dinner mine aunt had no choice,
But other burst, or burst out in Pilate's voice:
Ye huswife, what wind bloweth ye hither this night? [is light.

Ye might have knocked ere ye came in; leave
Better unborn than untaught, I have heard
say;

But be ye better fed than taught, far away;
Not very fat fed, said this flebergebet; [jet.
But need hath no law; need maketh her hither
She cometh, niece Alice, (quoth she), for that is her name, [shame.

More for need than for kindness, pain of Howbeit, she cannot lack, for he findeth that seeks;

Lovers live by love, yea, as larks live by leeks,
Said this Alice, much more than half in mock-age.

Tush! (quoth mine aunt), these lovers in dotage [courage

Think the ground bear them not, but wed of
They must in all haste; though a leaf of borage
Might buy all the substance that they can sell.
Well, aunt, (quoth Alice), all is well that ends
well. [end;

Yea, Alice, of a good beginning cometh a good
Not so good to borrow, as be able to lend.

Nay indeed, aunt, (quoth she), it is sure so;
She must needs grant she hath wrought her own woe. [stone,

She thought, Alice, she had seen far in a mill.
When she gat a husband, and namely such one,
As they by wedding could not only nought win,
But lose both living and love of all their kin.

Good aunt, (quoth I), humbly I beseech ye,
 My trespass done to you forgive it me.
 I know, and knowledge I have wrought mine
 own pain;

But things past my hands, I cannot call again.
 True, (quoth Alice), things done cannot be un-
 done,

Be they done in due time, too late, or too soon;
 But better late than never to repent this.

Too late, (quoth mine aunt), this repentance showed is :

When the steed is stolen shut the stable durre.
I took her for a rose, but she breedeth a burr;
She cometh to stick to me now in her lack;
Rather to rent off my clothes fro my back,
Than to do me one farthing worth of good.
I see day at this little hole. For this bood
Showeth what fruit will follow. In good faith,
 I said,

In way of petition I sue for your aid.

Ah, well! (quoth she), now I well understand
The walking staff hath caught warmth in your hand.

A clean-fingered huswife, and an idle, folk say,
And will be lime-fingered, I fear, by my fay!

It is as tender as a parson's leman— [than?
Nought can she do, and what can she have
As sober as she seemeth, few days come about
But she will once wash her face in an ale clout.
And then between her and the rest of the rout,
I proud, and thou proud, who shall bear
 th'ashes out? [breathe,

She may not bear a feather, but she must
She maketh so much of her painted sheath.

She thinketh her farthing good silver, I tell you;

But, for a farthing, whoever did sell you Might boast you to be better sold than bought.
And yet, though she be worth nought, nor have nought,

Her gown is gayer and better than mine.
At her gay gown, (quoth Alice), ye may repine,
Howbeit, as we may, we love to go gay all.
Well, well! (quoth mine aunt), pride will have a fall; [after.

For pride goeth before, and shame cometh
Sure, (said Alice), in manner of mocking laughter, [worse

There is nothing in this world that agreeth
Than doth a lady's heart and a beggar's purse.
But pride she showeth none, her look reason alloweth, [mouth.

She looketh as butter would not melt in her
Well, the still sow eats up all the draf, Alice;
All is not gold that glitters, by told tales.

In youth she was toward and without evil:
But soon ripe, soon rotten; young saint, old devil— [horns.

Howbeit, Lo God sendeth the shrewd cow short While she was in this house she sat upon thorns,

Each one day was three till liberty was borrow,
For one month's joy to bring her whole life's sorrow. [well;

It were pity, (quoth Alice), but she should do
For beauty and stature she beareth the bell.

Ill weed groweth fast, Alice: whereby the corn is lorne;

For surely the weed overgroweth the corn.

Ye praise the wine before ye taste of the grape:
But she can no more harm than can a she ape.
It is a good body, her property preves

She lacketh but even a new pair of sleeves.
 If I may, (as they say), tell truth without sin,
 Of truth she is a wolf in a lamb's skin.
 Her heart is full high when her eye is full low—
 A guest as good lost as found, for all this show—

But many a good cow hath an evil calf.
 I speak this, daughter, in thy mother's behalf,
 My sister, (God rest her soul!) whom, though I boast,

Was called the flower of honesty in this coast.
 Aunt, (quoth I), I take for father and mother
 Mine uncle and you, above all other.

When we would, ye would not be our child, (quoth she), [we;
 Wherefore now when ye would, now will not Since thou wouldst needs cast away thyself thus,

Thou shalt sure sink in thine own sin for us.
 Aunt, (quoth I), after a doting or drunken deed,

Let submission obtain some mercy or meed.
He that killeth a man when he is drunk, (quoth
 she),

Shall be hanged when he is sober; and he,
Whom in itching no scratching will forbear,
He must bear the smarting that shall follow
there.

And thou, being borne very nigh of my stock, Though nigh be my kirtle, yet near is my smock—

I have one of mine own whom I must look to.
 Yea, aunt, (quoth Alice), that thing must ye needs do;

Nature compelleth you to set your own first up;
 For I have heard say, it is a dear collop

That is cut out of th'own flesh. But yet, aunt,
So small may her request be, that ye may grant

To satisfy the same, which may do her good,
And you no harm in th'avancing your own blood. [crave,

And cousin, (quoth she to me), what ye would Declare, that our aunt may know what ye would have.

Nay, (quoth I), be they winners or losers, Folk say alway beggars should be no
choosers. [please;

With thanks I shall take whatever mine aunt
Where nothing is, a little thing doth ease;
Hunger maketh hard beans sweet; where saddles lack, [back.

Better ride on a pad than on the horse bare
And by this proverb appeareth this o'thing:
That alway somewhat is better than nothing.
Hold fast when ye have it, (quoth she), by my life! [wife,

The boy thy husband, and thou the girl, his Shall not consume that I have laboured for.
Thou art young enough, and I can work no more.

Kit Callot, my cousin, saw this thus far on,
And in mine aunt's ear she whispereth anon,
Roundly these words, to make this matter
whole:

Aunt, let them that be a-cold blow at the coal.
They shall for me, Alice, (quoth she), by God's blis!

She and I have shaken hands: farewell, un-kissed!

And thus, with a beck as good as a dieu gard,
She flang fro me, and I from her hitherward.

Begging of her booteth not the worth of a bean; [mean.

Little knoweth the fat sow what the lean doth Forsooth! (quoth I), ye have bestirred ye well— [fell?

But where was your uncle while all this fray
 Asleep by, (quoth she), routing like a hog;

And it is evil waking of a sleeping dog.

The bitch and her whelp might have been asleep too,

For ought they in waking to me would do.

Fare ye well! (quoth she); I will now home straight, [wait.

And at my husband's hands for better news

CHAPTER XI.

He came home to me the next day before noon :
 What tidings now, (quoth I), how have ye doon?

Upon our departing, (quoth he), yesterday, Toward mine uncle's, somewhat more than midway,

I overtook a man, a servant of his,
 And a friend of mine; who guessed straight with this

What mine errand was, offering in the same
 To do his best for me; and so, in God's name
 Thither we went; nobody being within

But mine uncle, mine aunt, and one of our kin—

A mad knave, as it were a railing jester,
 Not a more gaggling gander hence to Chester.

At sight of me he asked, who have we there?

I have seen this gentleman, if I wist where;

Howbeit, lo! seldom seen, soon forgotten.

He was, (as he will be), somewhat cupshotten :
Six days in the week, beside the market day,
Malt is above wheat with him, market men say.
But forasmuch as I saw the same taunt
Contented well mine uncle and mine aunt,
And that I came to fall in and not to fall out,
I forbear; or else his drunken red snout
I would have made as oft change from hue
to hue

As doth the cocks of Ind; for this is true :
It is a small hop on my thumb; and Christ wot,
It is wood at a word—little pot soon hot.
Now merry as a cricket, and by and by Angry as a wasp, though in both no cause why.
But he was at home there, he might speak his will :

Every cock is proud on his own dunghill.
I shall be even with him herein when I can.
But he, having done, thus mine uncle began :
Ye merchant ! what attempteth you to attempt us,

To come on us before the messenger thus?
Roaming in and out, I hear tell how ye toss ;
But son, the rolling stone never gathereth
moss.

Like a pickpurse pilgrim ye pry and ye prow!
At rovers, to rob Peter and pay Poule.
Iwys, I know, or any more be told,
That draf is your errand, but drink ye wolde.
Uncle, (quoth I), of the cause for which I come

I pray you patiently hear the whole sum.
In faith ! (quoth he), without any more summing,

I know to beg of me is thy coming.
Forsooth ! (quoth his man), it is so, indeed ;

And I dare boldly boast, if ye knew his need,
 Ye would of pity yet fet him in some stay.
 Son, better be envied than pitied, folk say;
 And for his cause of pity, (had he had grace),
 He might this day have been clear out of the case; [frog—

But now he hath well fished and caught a Where nought is to wed with, wise men flee the clog.

Where I, (quoth I), did not as ye willed or bad,
 That repent I oft, and as oft wish I had.

Son, (quoth he), as I have heard of mine olders, Wishers and woulders be no good householders:

This proverb for a lesson, with such other.

Not like, (as who sayeth), the son of my brother,

But like mine own son, I oft before told thee
 To cast her quite off; but it would not hold thee
 When I willed thee any other where to go—Tush! there was no mo maids but malkin
though

Ye had been lost to lack your lust when ye list,
 By two miles trudging twice a week to be kissed.

I would ye had kissed—well I will no more stir :
It is good to have a hatch before the dur.

But who will, in time present, pleasure refrain Shall, in time to come, the more pleasure obtain.

Follow pleasure, and then will pleasure flee;
Flee pleasure, and pleasure will follow thee.

And how is my saying come to pass now?

How oft did I prophesy this between you
 And your ginifinee nycebecetur? [petre?

When sweet sugar should turn to sour salt-

Whereby ye should in saying that ye never saw,

Think that you never thought yourself a daw.
But that time ye thought me a daw, so that I Did no good in all my words then, save only
Approved this proverb plain and true matter :
*A man may well bring a horse to the water,
But he cannot make him drink without he will.
Colts, (quoth his man), may prove well with tatches ill,*

For of a ragged colt there cometh a good horse—

If he be good now of his ill past no force. [he],
Well, he that hangeth himself a Sunday, (said
Shall hang still uncut down a Monday for me.
I have hanged up my hatchet, God speed him well ! [tell :

A wonder thing what things these old things
Cat after kind good mouse hunt ; and also Men say, kind will creep where it may not go.
Commonly all thing showeth fro whence it came ;

*The litter is like to the fire and the dam ;
How can the foal amble if the horse and mare
trot ?*

These sentences are assigned unto thy lot,
By conditions of thy father and mother,
My sister-in-law, and mine own said brother.
Thou followest their steps as right as a line.
For when provender prickt them a little tyne,
They did as thy wife and thou did, both dote
Each one on other ; and being not worth a groat, [last,
They went (witless) to wedding ; whereby, at They both went a-begging. And even the like cast

Hast thou; thou wilt beg or steal ere thou die—

Take heed, friend, I have seen as far come as nigh.

If ye seek to find things ere they be lost,
Ye shall find one day you come to your cost.

This do I but repeat, for this I told thee;
And more I say; but I could not then hold thee;
Nor will not hold thee now; nor such folly feel,
To set at my heart that thou settest at thy heel.

And as of my good ere I one groat give,
I will see how my wife and myself may live.

Thou goest a-gleaning ere the cart have carried;
But ere thou glean ought, since thou wouldst be married, [then?

Shall I make thee laugh now, and myself weep Nay, good child! better children weep than old men. [upon fools;

Men should not prease much to spend much
Fish is cast away that is cast in dry pools.

To flee charge, and find ease, ye would now here host—

It is easy to cry ble at other men's cost.

But, a bow long bent, at length must wear weak: [break.

Long bent I toward you, but that bent I will Farewell, and feed full, that love ye well to do;
But you lust not to do that longeth thereto.

The cat would eat fish and would not wet her feet; [in heat.

They must hunger in frost that will not work
And he that will thrive must ask leave of his wife; [life,

But your wife will give none: by your and her
It is hard to wive and thrive both in a year.

Thus, by thy wiving, thriving doth so appear,

That thou art past thrift before thrift begin.
But lo! will will have will, though will woe
win;

Will is a good son, and will is a shrewd boy;
And wilful shrewd will hath wrought thee this toy.

A gentle white spur, and at need a sure spear;
He standeth now as he had a flea in his ear.

Howbeit, for any great courtesy he doth make,
It seemeth the gentle man hath eaten a steak.

He beareth a dagger in his sleeve, trust me,
To kill all that he meeteth prouder than he.

He will perk: I here say he must have the bench— [French.

Jack would be a gentleman if he could speak
He thinketh his feet be where his head shall never come;

He would fain flee, but he wanteth feathers,
some.

Sir, (quoth his man), he will no fault defend,
But hard is for any man all faults to mend—

He is lifeless, that is faultless, old folks thought. [nought.

He hath, (quoth he), but one fault, he is Well, (quoth his man), the best cart may over-

Carts well driven, (quoth he), go long upright,
But, for my reward, let him be no longer tarrier,
I will send it him by John Long the carrier.

O! help him, sir, (said he), since ye easily may.
Shameful craving, (quoth he), must have shameful nay. [one yea.

Ye may, sir, (quoth he), mend three nays with
Two false knaves need no broker, men say, (said he).

Some say also, it is merry when knaves meet;

But the mo knaves, the worse company to greet; [craveth.

The one knave now croucheth while th'other

 Or during my life: had I this hall hept [eat
 With gold, he may his part on Good Friday
 And fast never the worse, for ought he shall geat. [son:

These former lessons conned, take for this,
Tell thy cards, and then tell me what thou hast won.

Now, here is the door, and there is the way;
 And so, (quoth he), farewell, gentle Geoffrey!
 Thus parted I from him, being much dismayed,
 Which his man saw, and (to comfort me) said:
 What, man, pluck up your heart, be of good cheer!

After clouds black, we shall have weather clear.
 What, should your face thus again the wool be shorn

For one fall? What, man, all this wind shakes no corn!

Let this wind overblow; a time I will spy
 To take wind and tide with me, and speed thereby. [small roast

I thank you, (quoth I), but great boast and Maketh unsavoury mouths, wherever men host.
 And this boast very unfavourably serveth;

For while the grass groweth the horse sterveth;
Better one bird in hand than ten in the wood.
Rome was not built in one day, (quoth he), and yet stood

Till it was finished, as some say, full fair.
Your heart is in your hose, all in despair;
 But, as every man sayeth, a dog hath a day—

Should you, a man, despair then any day?
nay!

*Ye have many strings to the bow, for ye know,
Though I, having the bent of your uncle's bow,
Can no way bring your bolt in the butt to stand;
Yet have ye other marks to rove at hand.*

The keys hang not all by one man's girdle, man; [can

Though nought will be won here, I say, yet ye
Taste other kinsmen; of whom ye may geat
Here some, and there some: many small make a great. [curses,

For come light winnings with blessings or Evermore light gains make heavy purses.

Children learn to creep ere they can learn to go;

And, little and little, ye must learn even so.

Throw no gift again at the giver's head;

For, better is half a loaf than no bread.

I may beg my bread, (quoth I), for my kin all That dwelleth nigh. Well, yet, (quoth he),
and the worst fall,

Ye may to your kinsman, hence nine or ten mile,

Rich without charge, whom ye saw not of long while.

That benchwhistler, (quoth I), is a pinchpenny,
As free of gift as a poor man of his eye.

I shall get a fart of a dead man as soon

As a farthing of him; his dole is soon done.

He is so high in th'instep, and so straight-laced,

That pride and covetise withdraweth all repast,
Ye know what he hath been, (quoth he), but i-wis,

Absence sayeth plainly, ye know not what he is.

Men know, (quoth I), I have heard now and then,

How the market goeth by the market men.

Further it is said, who that saying weigheth,
It must needs be true that every man sayeth.

Men say also : children and fools cannot lie—

And both man and child sayeth, he is a heinsby.

And myself knoweth him, I dare boldly brag,

Even as well as the beggar knoweth his bag.

And I knew him not worth a grey groat ;

He was at an ebb, though he be now afloat,

Poor as the poorest. And now nought he setteth

By poor folk, *For the parish priest forgetteth
That ever he hath been holy water clerk.*

By ought I can now hear, or ever could mark,

Of no man hath he pity or compassion.

Well, (quoth he), every man after his fashion ;

He may yet pity you, for ought doth appear,

It happeth in one hour that happeth not in seven year.

Forspeak not your fortune, nor hide not your need ;

*Nought venture, nought have ; spare to speak,
spare to speed ;*

Unknown, unkissed ; it is lost that is unsought.

As good seek nought, (quoth I), as seek and find nought.

It is, (quoth he), ill fishing before the net.

But though we get little, dear bought and far fet

Are dainties for ladies. Go we both two ;

I have for my master thereby to do.

I may break a dish there ; and sure I shall

And I will hang the bell about the cat's neck,

For I will first break and jeopard the first

And for to win this prey, though the cost be Let us present him with a bottle of wine.

What should we, (quoth I), grease the fat sow in th'arse,

We may do much ill, ere we do much wars.

It is, to give him, as much alms or need,
As cast water in Thames, or as good a deed
As it is to help a dog over a stile. [while.

Then go we, (quoth he), we lese time all this
To follow his fancy we went together, [thither,
And toward night yesternight when we came
She was within, but he was yet abroad. [toad,
And straight as she saw me she swelled like a Pattering the devil's Pater noster to herself :

God never made a more crabbed elf !

She bade him welcome, but the worse for me ;
This knave cometh a-begging by me, thought

I smelled her out, and had her straight in the
She may abide no beggars of any kind.

They be both greedy guts all given to get
They care not how : all is fish that cometh to

They know no end of their good ; nor begin-
Of any goodness : such is wretched winning.

Hunger droppeth even out of both their noses.
She goeth with broken shoon and torn hoses ;
But who is worse shod than the shoemaker's
wife,

With shops full of new shoes all her life ?
Or who will do less than they that may do
most ?

And namely of her I can no way make boast.
She is one of them to whom God bade ho ;

She will all have, and will right nought forego;
She will not part with the paring of her nails;
She toileth continually for avails;
Which life she hath so long now kept in ure,
That for no life she would make change, be sure.

But this lesson learned I, ere I was years seven :
They that be in hell ween there is none other heaven.

She is nothing fair, but she is ill favoured;
And no more uncleanly than unsweet favoured;
But hackney men say at mangy hackney's hire, [squire.

A scald horse is good enough for a scabbed
He is a knucklebone-yard, very meet
To match a minion nother fair nor sweet.
He winketh with the tone eye and looketh with the tother;

I will not trust him though he were my brother.
He hath a poison wit, and all his delight
To give taunts and checks of most spiteful spite.

In that house commonly, such is the cast,
A man shall as soon break his neck as his fast;
And yet, now such a gid did her head take,
That more for my mate's than for manner's
sake,

We had bread and drink, and a cheese very great;

But the greatest crabs be not all the best meat.
For her crabbed cheese, with all the greatness,
Might well abide the fineness, or sweetness.

Anon he came in; and when he us saw,
To my companion kindly he did draw;
And a well favoured welcome to him he yields,
Bidding me welcome strangely over the fields

With these words: Ah, young man! I know your matter;

By my faith! you come to look in my water;
And for my comfort to your consolation,
Ye would buy my purse—give me a purgation!
But I am laxative enough there otherwise.
This, (quoth this young man), contrary doth rise;

For he is purse-sick, and lacketh a physician;
And hopeth upon you in some condition,
Not by purgation, but by restorative,
To strength his weakness to keep him alive.
I cannot, (quoth he), for though it be my lot
To have speculation, yet I practise not.
I see much, but I say little, and do less
In this kind of physic—and what would ye guess:

Shall I consume myself to restore him now?
Nay, backare! (quoth Mortimer to his sow);
He can, before this time, no time assign,
In which he hath laid down one penny by mine,
That ever might either make me bite or sup.
And by'r lady, friend! nought lay down, nought
take up;

Ka me, ka thee; one good turn asketh another;
Nought won by the tone, nought won by the

To put me to cost, thou camest half a score
Out of thine own nest, to seek me in these out

Where thou wilt not step over a straw, I think,
To win me the worth of one draught of drink,
No more than I have won of all thy whole stock.

I have been common Jack to all that whole

When ought was to do I was common

*Thou hast stricken the ball under the line.
I pray you, (quoth I), pity me, a poor man,
With somewhat till I may work as I can.
Toward your working, (quoth he), ye make such tastings,*

*As approve you to be none of the hastings.
Ye run to work in haste as nine men held ye;
But whensoever ye to work must yield ye,
If your meet-mate and you meet together,
Then shall we see two men bear a feather;
Recompensing former loitering life loose,
As did the pure penitent that stole a goose
And stack down a feather. And, where old

Till time ye be as rich as a new shorn sheep.
Howbeit, when thrift and you fell first at a fray,* [away.

*You played the man, for ye made thrift run
So help me God! in my poor opinion,
A man might make a play of this minion,*

And fain no ground, but take tales of his own friends :

I suck not this out of my own fingers' ends.

And since ye were wed, although I nought gave you, [you!

Yet pray I for you, God and Saint Luke save
And here is all: for what should I further wade?

I was neither of court nor of council made;

And it is, as I have learned in listening,

A poor dog that is not worth the whistling.

A day ere I was wed, I bade you, (quoth I).

Scarb'rough warning I had, (quoth he), where-

I kept me thence, to serve thee according. [by

And now, if this night's lodging and boarding

May ease thee, and rid me from any more charge, [large.

Then welcome! or else get thee straight at

For of further reward, mark how I boast me,

In case as ye shall yield me as ye cost me,

So shall ye cost me as ye yield me likewise;

Which is, a thing of nought rightly to surmise.

Herewithal, his wife, to make up my mouth,

Not only her husband's taunting tale avoweth,

But thereto deviseth to cast in my teeth

Checks and choking oysters. And when she seeth

Her time to take up, to show my fare at best:

Ye see your fare, (said she), set your heart at rest.

Fare ye well! (quoth I), however I fare now;

And well mote ye fare both when I dine with you.

Come, go we hence, friend! (quoth I to my mate)—

And now will I make a cross on this gate.

And I, (quoth he), cross thee quite out of my book

Since thou art cross failed; avail, unhappy hook!

*By hook or crook nought could I win there;
men say:*

He that cometh every day, shall have a cockney; [hen.

*He that cometh now and then, shall have a fat
But I gat not so much in coming seeld when,
As a good hen's feather, or a poor eggshell:
As good play for nought as work for nought,
folk tell.*

Well, well! (quoth he), we be but where we were;

*Come what come would, I thought ere we came
there,*

*That if the worst fell, we could have but a nay.
There is no harm done, man, in all this fray;
Neither pot broken, nor water spilt.*

*Farewell, he! (quoth I), I will as soon be hilt
As wait again for the moonshine in the water.
But is not this a pretty piked matter?*

To disdain me, who muck of the world hoardeth not,

*As he doeth; it may rhyme but it accordeth not.
She foameth like a boar, the beast should seem bold;*

For she is as fierce as a Lion of Cotsolde.

She frieth in her own grease, but as for my part,

If she be angry, beshrew her angry heart!

Friend, (quoth he), he may show wisdom at will, [still:

*That with angry heart can hold his tongue
Let patience grow in your garden alway.*

Some loose or odd end will come, man, some one day

From some friend, either in life or at death.

Death! (quoth I), take we that time to take a breath?

*Then graft we a green graft on a rotten root:
Who waiteth for dead men shoes shall go long barefoot.*

Let pass, (quoth he), and let us be trudging
Where some nippy ale is, and soft sweet lodging.

Be it, (quoth I), but I would very fain eat;
At breakfast and dinner I eat little meat,
And two hungry meals make the third a glutton.
We went where we had boiled beef and bake
Whereof I fed me as full as a tun; [mutton,
And a-bed were we ere the clock had nine run.
Early we rose, in haste to get away;
And to the hostler this morning, by day,
This fellow called, What ho! fellow, thou knave!

I pray thee let me and my fellow have
A hair of the dog that bit us last night—
And bitten were we both to the brain aright.
We saw each other drunk in the good ale glass,
And so did each one each other, that there was,
Save one; but old men say that are skilled:
*A hard foughten field where no man scapeth
unkilled.* [the shot;

The reckoning reckoned, he needs would pay
And needs he must for me, for I had it not.
This done we shook hands, and parted in fine;
He into his way, and I into mine.

But this journey was quite out of my way:
Many kinsfolk and few friends, some folk say;
But I find many kinsfolk, and friend not one.

Folk say—it hath been said many years since gone— [deed,

*Prove thy friend ere thou have need; but, in-
A friend is never known till a man have need.*

Before I had need, my most present foes [goes :
Seemed my most friends; but thus the world
Every man basteth the fat hog we see;
But the lean shall burn ere he basted be.

As sayeth this sentence, oft and long said
before :

He that hath plenty of goods shall have more ;

He that hath but a little, he shall have less ;

He that hath right nought, right nought shall possess. [what obtain,

Thus, having right nought, and would some-
With right nought, (quoth he), I am returned again.

CHAPTER XII.

Surely, (quoth I), ye have in this time, thus worn,

Made a long harvest for a little corn !

Howbeit, comfort yourself with this old text,
That telleth us, when bale is hekst, boot is next ;

Though every man may not sit in the chair,

Yet alway the grace of God is worth a fair.

Take no thought in no case, God is where he was.

But put case, in poverty all your life pass,

Yet poverty and poor degree, taken well,

Feedeth on this : he that never climbed, never fell. [somewhere,

And some case, at some time, showeth prefe
That riches bringeth oft harm, and ever fear,

*Where poverty passeth without grudge of grief.
 What, man! the beggar may sing before the
 And who can sing so merry a note [thief;
 As may he that cannot change a groat?*

Yea, (quoth he), beggars may sing before thieves, [greeves.

*And weep before true men, lamenting their
 Some say, and I feel, hunger pierceth stone wall;*

*Meat, nor yet money to buy meat withal,
 Have I not so much as may hunger defend Fro my wife and me. Well! (quoth I), God will send [see.*

Time to provide for time, right well ye shall God send that provision in time! (said he.)

*And thus, seeming well-nigh weary of his life,
 The poor wretch went to his like poor wretched wife: [their knees;*

From wantonness to wretchedness, brought on Their hearts full heavy, their heads be full of bees.

*And after this a month, or somewhat less,
 Their landlord came to their house to take a stress*

*For rent; to have kept Bayard in the stable—
 But that to win, any power was unable.*

*For, though it be ill playing with short daggers,
 Which meaneth, that every wise man staggers,
 In earnest or boord to be busy or bold*

*With his biggers or betters, yet this is told:
 Whereas nothing is, the king must lose his right. [quight.*

*And thus, king or keyser, must have set them
 But warning to depart thence they needed none;
 For, ere the next day, the birds were flown,
 each one*

To seek service; of which, where the man was sped,

The wife could not speed; but, maugre her head, [nigh,

She must seek elsewhere, for either there or Service for any suit she none could espy.

All folk thought them, not only too lither

To linger both in one house together;

But also, dwelling nigh under their wings,

Under their noses they might convey things—

Such as were neither too heavy nor too hot—

More in a month than they their master got

In a whole year. Whereto folk further weighing,

Receive each of other in their conveying,

Might be worst of all; for this proverb preeves :

Where be no receivers, there be no thieves.

Such hap here hapt, that common dread of such gyles

Drove them and keepeth them asunder many miles.

Thus, though love decree departure death to be,
Yet poverty parteth fellowship, we see;

And doth those two true lovers so dissever,

That meet shall they seeld when, or haply never.

And thus by love, without regard of living,

These twain have wrought each other's ill
chieving; [friends,

And love hath so lost them the love of their

That I think them lost; and thus this tale ends.

CHAPTER XIII.

Ah, sir ! (said my friend), when men will needs marry,

I see now, how wisdom and haste may vary :
Namely, where they wed for love altogether.
I would for no good, but I had come hither.
Sweet beauty with sour beggary ! nay, I am
gone

To the wealthy withered widow, by Saint John !
What ! yet in all haste, (quoth I) ? Yea ! (q. he) ;
For she hath substance enough ; and ye see
That lack is the loss of these two young fools.
Know ye not, (quoth I), that, after wise men's schools,

A man should hear all parts ere he judge any ?
Why axe ye that (quoth he) ? For this, (quoth
I) :

I told you, when I this began, that I would Tell you of two couples ; and I, having told
But of the tone, ye be straight starting away,
As I of the tother had right nought to say ;
Or, as yourself of them right nought would hear. [clear

Nay, not all so, (quoth he), but since I think
There can no way appear so painful a life Between your young neighbour and his old rich wife,

As this tale in this young poor couple doth
show ;

And that the most good or least ill ye know
To take at end, I was at beginning bent,
With thanks for this and your more pain to prevent,

Without any more matter now revolved,

I take this matter here clearly resolved ;
 And that ye herein award me to forsake
 Beggarly beauty, and rivalled riches take.
That's just, if the half shall judge the whole,
 (quoth I); [try.
 But yet, hear the whole, the whole wholly to
 To it (quoth he) then, I pray you, by and by.
 We will dine first, (quoth I), it is noon high.
 We may as well, (quoth he), dine when this is done ;
The longer forenoon, the shorter afternoon—
All cometh to one, and thereby men have guessed,
Alway the longer east, the shorter west.
 We have had, (quoth I), before ye came, and syne,
Weather meet to set paddocks abroad in:
Rain more than enough; and when all shrews
have dined,
Change from foul weather to fair is oft inclined.
 And all the shrews in this part, saving one wife That must dine with us, have dined, pair of my life ! [ing
 Now, if good change of ill weather be depend-
 Upon her diet, what were mine offending
 To keep the woman any longer fasting?
 If ye, (quoth he), fet all this far casting
 For common wealth, as it appeareth a clear case, [place.
 Reason would your will should, and shall take

THUS ENDETH THE FIRST PART.

PART II

CHAPTER I.

*Diners cannot be long where dainties want ;
Where coin is not common, commons must be scant.*

In post pace we passed from potage to cheese,
And yet this man cried : Alas, what time we lese !

He would not let us pause after our repast ;
But apart he plucked me straight, and in all haste, [maid,
As I of this poor young man, and poor young
Or more poor young wife, the foresaid words had said,

So prayeth he me now the process may be told,
Between th'other young man, and rich widow
old.

If ye lack that, (quoth I), away ye must wind,
With your whole errand, and half th'answer
behind. [you loth,

Which thing to do, since haste thereto showeth
And to haste your going, the day away goeth ;
And that time lost, again we cannot win :
Without more loss of time, this tale I begin.

In this late old widow, and then old new wife,
Age and appetite fell at a strong strife :

Her lust was as young as her limbs were old.

The day of her wedding, like one to be sold,
She set out herself in fine apparel.

She was made like a beer pot, or a barrel;
A crooked hooked nose, beetle browed, blear eyed.

Many men wished, for beautifying that bride,
Her waist to be gird in, and for a bon grace,
Some well favoured visor on her ill favoured
But with visorlike visage, such as it was, [face.
She smirked, and she smiled, but so lisped this lass, [alone

That folk might have thought it done only
Of wantonness, had not her teeth been gone.

Upright as a candle standeth in a socket
Stood she that day, so simper-de-cocket.

Of ancient fathers she took no cure nor care,
She was to them as coy as a croker's mare.

She took th'entertainment of the young men
All in dalliance, as nice as a nun's hen.

I suppose that day her ears might well glow,
For all the town talked of her, high and low.

One said, a well favoured old woman she is;
The devil she is, said another; and to this,
In came the third, with his five eggs, and said,
Fifty year ago I knew her a trim maid.

Whatever she were then, (said one), she is now
To become a bride, as meet as a sow

To bear a saddle. She is, in this marriage,
As comely as is a cow in a cage.

Gup! with a galled back Gill, come up to supper! [crupper!

What? mine old mare would have a new
And now mine old hat must have a new band!

Well, (quoth one), glad is he that hath her in
A goodly marriage she is, I hear say. [hand;
She is so, (quoth one), were the woman away.

Well, (quoth another), fortune this moveth;
And in this case every man as he loveth
Quoth the good man when that he kissed his cow. [a vow!

That kiss, (quoth one), doth well here, by God
But how can she give a kiss, sour or sweet?—
Her chin and her nose within half an inch
God is no botcher, sir! said another; [meet.
He shapeth all parts as each part may fit
other. [scanning;

Well, (quoth one), wisely, let us leave this God speed them! be as be may is no banning.
That shall be, shall be; and with God's grace they shall

Do well, and that they so may, wish we all.
This wonder, (as wonders last), lasted nine days; [their ways,

Which done, and all guests of this feast gone
Ordinary household this man straight began Very sumptuously, which he might well do than. [was set

What he would have, he might have; his wife
In such dotage of him, that fair words did fet Gromwell-seed plenty; and pleasure to prefer,
She made much of him, and he mocked much of her.

I was, (as I said), much there, and most of all
The first month; in which time such kindness did fall

Between these two counterfeit turtle birds;
To see his sweet looks, and hear her sweet words, [ure,

And to think wherefore they both put both in
It would have made a horse break his halter sure. [taught

All the first fortnight their ticking might have Any young couple their love ticks to have wrought. [is green.

Some laughed, and said : all thing is gay that Some thereto said : the green new broom sweepeth clean.

But since all thing is the worse for the wearing,
Decay of clean sweeping folk had in fearing.
And indeed, ere two months away were crept,
And her biggest bags into his bosom swept,
Where love had appeared in him to her alway
Hot as a toast, it grew cold as a kay.

He at meat carving her, and none else before,
Now carved he to all but her, and her no more.
Where her words seemed honey, by his smiling cheer, [hear.

Now are they mustard, he frowneth them to
And when she saw sweet sauce began to wax sour,

She waxed as sour as he, and as well could lower.

So turned they their tippets by way of exchange, [range

From laughing to lowering, and taunts did so
That in plain terms, plain truth to you to utter,
They two agreed like two cats in a gutter.

Marry, sir ! (quoth he), by scratching and biting [citing.

Cats and dogs come together, by folks re-Together by the ears they come, (quoth I), cheerly ;

Howbeit those words are not void here clearly.
For, in one state they twain could not yet settle,

But wavering as the wind : in dock, out nettle.
Now in, now out ; now here, now there ; now sad,

Now merry; now high, now low; now good,
now bad.

In which unsteady sturdy storms strainable,
To know how they both were irrefrainable,
Mark how they fell out, and how they fell in:
At end of a supper she did thus begin.

CHAPTER II.

Husband, (quoth she), I would we were in our nest; [rest.

When the belly is full, the bones would be at
So soon upon supper, (said he), no question
Sleep maketh ill and unwholesome digestion:
By that diet a great disease once I gat. [that.
And burnt child fire dreadeth; I will beware of What, a post of physic, (said she)? Yea, a post;

And from post to pillar, wife, I have been tossed
By that surfeit. And I feel a little fit
Even now, by former attempting of it.

Whereby, except I shall seem to leave my wit
Before it leave me, I must now leave it.

I thank God, (quoth she), I never yet felt pain
To go to bed timely; but rising again,
Too soon in the morning, hath me displeased.
And I, (quoth he), have been more diseased
By early lying down, than by early rising.

But thus differ folk, lo! in exercising:

That one may not, another may.

Use maketh maistry; and men many times say
That one loveth not, another doth; which hath sped

All meats to be eaten, and all maids to be wed.
Haste ye to bed now, and rise ye as ye rate;

While I rise early, and come to bed late.
 Long lying warm in bed is wholesome, (quoth she); [(quoth he).

While the leg warmeth, the boot harmeth,
 Well, (quoth she), he that doeth as most men do,
Shall be least wondered on; and take any two
 That be man and wife, in all this whole town,
 And most part together they rise and lie down.
When birds shall roost, (quoth he), at eight,
 nine, or ten, [hen?

Who shall appoint their hour—the cock, or the
 The hen, (quoth she); the cock, (quoth he);
 just, (quoth she), [(quoth he).

As Germans lips. It shall prove more just,
 Then prove I, (quoth she), the more fool far away;

But there is no fool to the old fool, folk say.
 Ye are wise enough, (quoth he), if ye keep ye warm.

To be kept warm, and for none other harm,
 Nor for much more good, I took you to wed.
 I took not you, (quoth he), night and day to bed.

Her carrain carcase, (said he), is so cold
 Because she is aged, and somewhat too old,
 That she killeth me: I do but roast a stone
 In warming her. And shall not I save one,
 As she would save another? Yes, by Saint John!

Ah, sir! (quoth she), marry! this gear is alone.
Who that worst may shall hold the candle; I see [me.

I must warm bed for him should warm it for This medicine thus ministered is sharp and cold; [told.

But all thing that is sharp is short, folk have

This trade is now begun, but if it hold on,
Then farewell my good days ! they will be soon gone. [break.

Gospel in thy mouth, (quoth he), this strife to Howbeit, all is not gospel that thou dost speak.
But what need we lump out love, at once lashing [for dashing?

As we should now shake hands? what ! soft
The fair lasteth all the year ; we be new knit,
And so late met that I fear we part not yet,
Quoth the baker to the pillory. Which thing,
From distemperate fonding, temperance may bring ; [strong,

And this reason to aid, and make it more
Old wise folk say : love me little, love me long.
I say little, (said she), but I think more ; Thought is free. Ye lean, (quoth he), to the wrong shore.

Brawling booted not, he was not that night bent
To play the bridegroom : alone to bed she went.
This was their beginning of jar. Howbeit,
For a beginning, this was a feat fit,
And but a fleabiting to that did ensue—
The worst is behind ; we come not where it grew.

How say you, (said he to me), by my wife?
The devil hath cast a bone, (said I), to set strife
Between you ; but it were a folly for me
To put my hand between the bark and the tree ;
Or to put my finger too far in the fire
Between you, and lay my credence in the mire.
To meddle little for me it is best ;
For of little meddling cometh great rest.
Yes, ye may meddle, (quoth he), to make her
wise,

Without taking harm, in giving your advice.

She knoweth me not yet; but if she wax too wild [child.
 I shall make her know an old knave is no
 Slugging in bed with her is worse than watching; [ing.
 I promise you an old sack axeth much patch-
 Well, (quoth I), to-morrow I will to my beads
 To pray, that as ye both will, so ache your heads;
 And in meantime, my aching head to ease,
 I will couch a hogshead. Quoth he, when ye please.
 We parted; and this, within a day or twain,
Was raked up in th'ashes, and covered again.

CHAPTER III.

These two days past, he said to me, when ye will [have Jill.
 Come chat at home; all is well—Jack shall
Who had the worst end of the staff, (quoth I),
 now? [you?
Shall the master wear a breech, or none? say
 I trust the sow will no more so deep root.
 But if she do, (quoth he), you must set in foot;
 And whom ye see out of the way, or shoot wide,
 Over-shoot not yourself any side to hide;
 But shoot out some words, if she be too hot.
 She may say, (quoth I), a fool's bolt soon shot.
 Ye will me to a thankless office hear;
 And a busy officer I may appear;
 And, Jack out of office, she may bid me walk;
 And think me as wise as Waltham's calf, to talk

Or chat of her charge, having therein nought to do.

Howbeit, if I see need, as my part cometh too,
Gladly between you I will do my best.

I bid you to dinner, (quoth he), as no guest,
And bring your poor neighbours on your other side.

I did so. And straight as th'old wife us espied,
She bade us welcome, and merrily toward me :
Green rushes for this stranger, straw here,
(quoth she).

With this, apart she pulled me by the sleeve, Saying in few words : my mind to you to meve,

So it is, that all our great fray, the last night,
Is forgiven and forgotten between us quite ;
And all frays by this I trust have taken end,
For I fully hope my husband will amend.

Well amended, (thought I), when ye both relent, [ment.

Not to your own, but each to other's mend-
Now, if hope fail, (quoth she), and chance bring about

Any such breach, whereby we fall again out,
I pray you tell him he's pars vers, now and than,

And wink on me. Also hardly, if ye can Take me in any trip. Quoth I, I am loth
To meddle commonly. For as this tale go'th, Who meddleth in all thing may shoe the gosling. [bring

Well ! (quoth she), your meddling herein may
The wind calm between us, when it else might rage.

I will, with good will, (quoth I), ill winds to swage,

Spend some wind at need, though I waste wind in vain.

To table we sat where fine fare did remain;
Merry we were as cup and can could hold;
Each one with each other homely and bold.
And she for her part, made us cheer heaven
high—

The first part of dinner merry as a pie:
But a scald head is soon broken; and so they,
As ye shall straight hear, fell at a new fray.

CHAPTER IV.

Husband, (quoth she), ye study, be merry now;
And even as ye think now, so come to you.
Nay, not so, (quoth he), for my thought to tell right,

I think how ye lay groaning wife, all last night.
Husband! a groaning horse, and a groaning
wife, [life.

Never fail their master, (quoth she), for my
No, wife! a woman hath nine lives like a cat.

Well, my lamb! (quoth she), ye may pick out of that,

As soon goeth the young lamskin to the market
As th' old ewe's. God forbid, wife! ye shall first jet.

I will not jet yet, (quoth she), put no doubting:
It is a bad sack that will abide no clouting.

And, as we oft see, the lothe stake standeth
long,

So is it an ill stake, I have heard among,
That cannot stand one year in a hedge.

I drink! (quoth she). Quoth he, I will not pledge.

What need all this? *a man may love his house
well*

Though he ride not on the ridge, I have heard tell. [stinketh;

What? I ween, (quoth she), proffered service
But somewhat it is, I see, *when the cat
winketh,* [shun;

And both her eyne out; but further strife to Let the cat wink, and let the mouse run.

This passed, and he cheered us all, but most cheer

On his part, to this fair young wife did appear.

And as he to her cast oft a loving eye,

So cast her husband like eye to his plate by;

Wherewith in a great musing he was brought.

Friend! (quoth the good man), a penny for your thought. [dish.

For my thought, (quoth he); that is a goodly
But of truth I thought: better to have than wish. [(quoth he)?

What! a goodly young wife, as you have,
Nay, (quoth he), goodly gilt goblets, as here
be. [show,

By'r lady, friends! (quoth I), this maketh a

But, by your words, (except I wrong under-
Each other's birds or jewels, ye do weigh Above your own. True, (quoth the old wife), ye say!

But my neighbour's desire rightly to measure,
Cometh of need, and not of corrupt pleasure;
And my husband's more of pleasure, than of need. [best feed;

And some say, change of pasture maketh fat calves.

As for that, reason, (quoth she), runneth to halves :

As well for the cow calf as for the bull.

And though your pasture look barrenly and dull,

Yet look not on the meat, but look on the man ;

And whoso looketh on you, shall shortly skan.

Ye may write to your friends that ye are in health ;

But all thing may be suffered saving wealth.

An old said saw : itch and ease can no man please ;

Plenty is no dainty ; ye see not your own ease.

I see, ye cannot see the wood for trees. [sees

Your lips hang in your light ; but this poor man

And that you rose on your right side here right ;

And might have gone further and have faren worse.

I wot well I might, (quoth he), for the purse ;

But ye be a baby of Belsabub's bower. [sour ;

Content ye, (quoth she) ! take the sweet with the Milk, (q' he), is white, } But all men know it

And lieth not in the dike. } good meat.

Ink is all black, } No man will it drink
And hath an ill smack. } nor eat.
Thy rhyme, (quoth he), is much older than mine;
But mine, being newer, is truer than thine.
Thou likenest now, for a vain advantage, [age,
White snow to fair youth, black pepper to foul
Which are placed out of place here, by rood!
Black ink is as ill meat, as black pepper is

it,
That as well agreeeth thy comparison in these,
As alike to compare in taste, chalk and cheese;
Or alike in colour to deem ink and chalk.
Walk, drab, walk! Nay, (quoth she), walk,
knave, walk!
Sayeth that term. Howbeit, sir, I say not so,
And best we lay a straw here, and even there,
ho!
Or else this gear will breed a pad in the straw;
If ye haul this way, I will another way draw.
Here is God in th'ambry (quoth I)! Quoth he,
Nay!
Here is the devil in th'orologe, ye may say.
Since this, (quoth I), rather bringeth bale than boot,
Wrap it in the cloth, and tread it under foot.
Ye harp on the string that giveth no melody;

Your tongues run before your wits, by Saint Antony ! [(quoth he);

Mark ye, how she hitteth me on the thumbs,
 And ye taunt me tit over thumb, (quoth she).
 Since tit for tat, (quoth I), on even hand is set,
Set the hare's head against the goose gibleet.
 She is, (quoth he), bent to force you, perforce
 To know that the grey mare is the better horse.
She choppeth logic, to put me to my clargy:
 She hath one point of a good hawk; she is hardy.

But wife, the first point of hawking is hold fast.
 And hold ye fast, I rede you, lest ye be cast
 In your own turn. Nay, she will turn the leaf;
 And rather, (quoth I), take as falleth in the
sheaf [too bold.

At your hands; and let fall her hold, than be Nay, I will spit in my hands, and take better hold.

He, (quoth she), that will be angry without cause,

Must be at one, without amends; by sage saws.
Tread a worm on the tail, and it must turn
again.

He taketh pepper in the nose, that I complain
 Upon his faults, myself being faultless;

But that shall not stop my mouth, ye may well guess. [good;

Well, (quoth I), too much of one thing is not Leave off this! Be it! (quoth he), fall we to our food;

But sufferance is no quittance in this daiment.
 No, (quoth she), nor misreckoning is no pay- ment. [friend;

But even reckoning maketh long friends, my
 For alway own is own at the reckoning's end.

This reckoning thus reckoned, and dinner once
done,
We three from them twain departed very soon.

CHAPTER V.

This old woman, the next day after this night,
Stale home to me, secretly as she might,
To talk with me; in secret counsel, (she said),
Of things which in no wise might be bewrayed.
We twain are one too many, (quoth I), for men
say :

Three may a-keep counsel, if two be away.
But all that ye speak, unmeet again to tell,
I will say nought but mum, and mum is counsel.
Well then, (quoth she), herein avoiding all fears, [ears.

Avoid your children : small pitchers have wide
Which done, (she said), I have a husband, ye know, [show.

Whom I made of nought, as the thing self doth
And for these two causes only, him I took—

First, that for my love, he should lovingly look
In all kind of cause, that love engender might
To love and cherish me by day and by night;
Secondly, the substance, which I to him brought, [nought.

He rather should augment, than bring to But now my good, shall both be spent, ye shall see,

And it in spending sole instrument shall be
Of my destruction, by spending it on such As shall make him destroy me; I fear this much. [hoop;

He maketh havoc, and setteth cock on the

He is so lavish, the stock beginneth to droop;
 And as for gain is dead and laid in tomb,
When he should get aught, each finger is a thumb;

Each of his joints against other justles,
As handsomely as a bear picketh muscles.
 Flattering knaves and flearing queans being the mark, [wark.

Hang on his sleeve: many hands make light
He hath his hawks in the mew; but, make ye
 sure,

With empty hands men may no hawks allure.
There is a nest of chickens, which he doth brood, [hood.

That will sure make his hair grow through his
They can curryfavel; and make fair weather While they cut large thongs of other men's leather.

He maketh his marts with merchants likely
To bring a shilling to sixpence quickly.
 If he hold on awhile as he begins,
We shall see him prove a merchant of eel-skins—

A merchant without either money or ware.
 But all be bug's words, that I speak to spare.
Better spare at brim than at bottom, say I.
Ever spare and ever bare, (saith he), by and by.
Spend, and God shall send, (sayeth he), saith
 th' old ballet,

What sendeth he, (say I), a staff and a wallet?
 Then up goeth his staff, to send me aloof;
He is at three words up in the house roof.
 And herein to grow, (quoth she), to conclusion,
 I pray your aid, to avoid this confusion;
 And for counsel herein, I thought to have gone
 To that cunning man, our curate, Sir John.

But this kept me back : I have heard, now and then,

The greatest clerks be not the wisest men.

I think, (quoth I), whoever that term began,
Was neither great clerk, nor the greatest wise man.

In your running from him to me, ye run

Out of God's blessing into the warm sun.

Where the blind leadeth the blind, both fall in the dike ;

And, blind be we both, if we think us his like.
Folk show much folly, when things should be sped,

To run to the foot that may go to the head.

Since he best can, and most ought, to do it,
I fear not, but he will, if ye will woo it.

There is one let, (quoth she), mo than I spake on :

My husband and he be so great, that the ton
Cannot piss but the tother must let a fart.

Choose we him aparty, then farewell my part ;
We shall so part stake, that I shall lese the whole. [sole.

Folk say of old : the shoe will hold with the

Shall I trust him, then? nay, in trust is treason.

But I trust you, and come to you this season
To hear me, and tell me, what way ye think best

To hem in my husband, and set me in rest.

If ye mind, (quoth I), a conquest to make

Over your husband, no man may undertake

To bring you to ease, nor the matter amend

Except ye bring him to wear a cock's comb at end.

For, take that your husband were, as ye take him,

As I take him not, as your tale would make him,

Yet were contention like to do nought in this
But keep him nought, and make him worse than he is. [clear,

But, in this complaint for counsel quick and
A few proverbs for principles, let us hear :

Who that may not as they would, will as they may; [obey.

And this to this : they that are bound must Folly it is to spurn against a prick ;

To strive against the stream, to winch or kick
Against the hard wall. By this ye may see,
Being bound to obedience, as ye be,

And also overmatched, sufferance is your dance.

He may overmatch me, (quoth she), perchance
In strength of body, but my tongue is a limb
To match and to vex every vein of him.

*Tongue breaketh bone, itself having none,
(quoth I); [awry.*

*If the wind stand in that door, it standeth
The peril of prating out of tune by note,*

Telleth us that a good bestill is worth a groat ;

In being your own foe, you spin a fair thread.

Advise ye well, for here doth all lie and bleed ;

Flee th'attempting of extremities all.

Folk say : better sit still than rise and fall.

For little more or less no debate make ;

At every dog's bark seem not to awake.

And where the small with the great cannot agree,

The weaker goeth to the pot, we all day see.

So that alway the bigger eateth the bean—

Ye can nought win, by any wayward mean.

Where the hedge is lowest men may soonest over :

Be silent ! let not your tongue run at rover ;
Since by strife ye may lose, and cannot win,
Suffer ! it is good sleeping in a whole skin.
If he chide, keep you bill under wing mute ;
Chatting to chiding is not worth a chut.
We see many times, might overcometh right—
Were not you as good then to say the crow is white ?

And so, rather let fair words make fools fain,
Than be plain without pleats, and plant your
own pain.

For, were ye as plain as Dunstable highway,
Yet should ye that way rather break a love day,
Than make one thus ; though ye perfectly knew
All that ye conjecture to be proved true.

Yet better dissemble it, and shake it off,
Than to broid him with it in earnest or scoff.
If he play falsehed in fellowship, play ye
See me and see me not ; the worst part to flee.
Why, think ye me so white-livered, (quoth she), [ye

That I will be tongue-tied ? Nay, I warrant
They that will be afraid of every fart Must go far to piss. Well, (quoth I), your part

Is to suffer (I say) ; for ye shall preeve Taunts appease not things ; they rather agrieve.

But for ill company, or expense extreme,
I here no man doubt, so far as ye deem ;
And there is no fire without some smoke, we
see. [she) ;

Well, well ! make no fire, raise no smoke, (said
What cloak for the rain soever ye bring me, Myself can tell best where my shoe doth wring
me.

To tick and laugh with me he hath lawful leave.
To that I said nought, but laughed in my sleeve;

But when she seemed to be fixed in mind,
Rather to seek for that she was loth to find,
Than leave that seeking, by which she might find ease,

I fained this fancy, to feel how it would please.
Will ye do well? (quoth I), take pain to watch him;

And if ye chance in advoutry to catch him,
Then have ye him on the hip, or on the hurdle;
Then have ye his head fast under your girdle;
Where your words now do but rub him on the gall, [wall.

That deed without words shall drive him to the
And further than the wall he cannot go,

But must submit himself; and if it hap so
That at end of your watch he guiltless appear,
Then all grudge, grown by jealousy, taketh end clear. [she);

Of all folks I may worst watch him, (said
For of all folks himself most watcheth me;

I shall as soon try him, or take him this way,
As drive a top over a tiled house: no, nay!

I may keep corners or hollow trees with th' owl,
This seven years, day and night to watch a bowl,

Before I shall catch him with undoubted evil.

He must have a long spoon shall eat with the
And the devil is no falser than is he. [devil;

I have heard tell, it had need to be [ear—

A wily mouse that should breed in the cat's Shall I get within him then? nay, ware that gear!

It is hard halting before a cripple, ye wot;

A falser water drinker there liveth not.

When he hunteth a doe that he cannot avow,

All dogs bark not at him, I warrant yow.

Namely not I, I say, though as I said,

He sometime, though seldom, by some be bewrayed. [loweth;

Close hunting, (quoth I), the good hunter al-

But, be your husband never so still of mouth,

If ye can hunt, and will stand at receipt,

Your maid examined, maketh him open straight. [preef,

That were, (quoth she), as of my truth to make

To axe my fellow whether I be a thief.

They cleave together like burrs; that way I shall Pike out no more than out of the stone wall.

Then like ye not to watch him for wife nor maid? [I said;

No! (quoth she). Nor I, (quoth I), whatever

And I mislike not only your watch in vain,

But also, if ye took him, what could ye gain?

From suspicion to knowledge of ill, forsooth!

Could make ye do but as the flounder doeth—

Leap out of the frying pan into the fire;

And change from ill pain to worse is worth small hire. [doubt;

Let time try! Time trieth truth in every

And deem the best till time hath tried the truth out.

And reason sayeth: make not two sorrows of one;

But ye make ten sorrows where reason maketh none. [wink

For where reason, (as I said), willeth you to (Although all were proved as ill as ye think),

Contrary to reason ye stamp and ye stare;

Ye fret and ye fume, as mad as a March hare,
Without proof to his reproof, present or past,
But by such report as most prove lies at last.
And here goeth the hare away; for ye judge all,
And judge the worst in all, ere proof in ought fall. [saws;

But blind men should judge no colours: by old
And folk ofttimes are most blind in their own
cause—

The blind eat many flies. Howbeit, the fancy
Of your blindness cometh not of ignorancy.

Ye could tell another herein the best way;

But it is as folk do, and not as folk say;

For they say, saying and doing are two things

To defend danger that double dealing brings:

As ye can seem wise in words, be wise in deed.

That is, (quoth she), sooner said than done, I drede;

But methinketh your counsel weigheth in the whole

To make me put my finger in a hole;

And so, by sufferance, to be so lither

In my house to lay fire and tow together.

But if they fire me, some of them shall win

More tow on their distaves than they can well spin; [hands full—

And the best of them shall have both their Bolster or pillow for me, be whose wull.

I will not bear the devil's sack, by Saint Audry!

For concealing suspicion of their baudry.

I fear false measures, or else I were a child;

For they that think none ill, are soonest be- guiled.

And thus, though much water goeth by the mill
That the miller knoweth not of, yet I will Cast what may scape; and, as though I did find it,

With the clack of my mill to fine meal grind it.

And sure ere I take any rest in effect,

I must banish my maids such as I suspect :

Better it be done than wish it had been done.

As good undone, (quoth I), as do it too soon.

Well, (quoth she), till soon, fare ye well ! and this

Keep ye as secret as ye think meet is.

Out at doors went she herewith; and hereupon

In at doors came he forthwith, as she was
gone;

And, without any temperate protestation,

Thus he began, in way of exclamation.

CHAPTER VI.

Oh ! what choice may compare to the devil's life

Like his that have chosen a devil to his wife ?

Namely, such an old witch, such a macka-broine,

As evermore like a hog hangeth the groyne

On her husband, except he be her slave,

And follow all fancies that she would have.

'Tis said : there is no good accord

Where every man would be a lord.

Wherefore, my wife will be no lord, but lady,

To make me, that should be her lord, a baby.

Before I was wedded, and since, I made reckoning

To make my wife bow at every beckoning.

Bachelors boast how they will teach their wives good ;

But many a man speaketh of Robin Hood That never shot in his bow. When all is sought, [taught.
Bachelors' wives, and maids' children be well
And this with this, I also begin to gather :
Every man can rule a shrew, save he that hath
her. [like wax ;
At my will I weened she should have wrought
But I find and feel she hath found such knacks
In her bouget, and such toys in her head,
That to dance after her pipe I am nigh led.
It is said of old : an old dog biteth sore ;
But, by God ! th' old bitch biteth sorer and more ; [her tongue.
And not with teeth—(she hath none)—but with If all tales be true, (quoeth I), though she be stung, [blame ;
And thereby sting you, she is not much to
For, whatever you say, thus goeth the same.
When folk first saw your substance laid in your lap, [good hap,
Without your pain, with your wife brought by Oft in remembrance of haps happy device
They would say : better to be happy than wise ;
Not minding thereby then to deprave your wit,
For they had good hope to see good proof of it.
But since their good opinion therein so cools,
That they say as oft : God sendeth fortune to fools ;
In that, as fortune without your wit gave it,
So can your wit not keep it when ye have it.
Sayeth one : this gear was gotten on a holy day ;
Sayeth another : who may hold that will away.
This game, from beginning, showeth what end is meant :

Soon gotten, soon spent; ill gotten, ill spent.

Ye are called not only too great a spender,
Too frank a giver, and as free a lender;
But also, ye spend, give, and lend, among such Whose lightness minisheth your honesty as much

As your money; and much they disallow
That ye brike all from her, that brought all to
you;

And spend it out at doors, in spite of her,
Because ye would kill her to be quit of her.
For all kindness, of her part, that may rise,
Ye show all th' unkindness ye can devise.
And where reason and custom, (they say), affords

Alway to let the losers have their words,
Ye make her a cuckquean and consume her
good;

And she must sit like a bean in a monk's hood.
Bearing no more rule than a goose turd in Thames;

But, at her own maids' becks, wings, or hems,
She must obey those lambs, or else a lambskin
Ye will provide for her, to lap her in. [say;
This biteth the mare by the thumb, as they
For were ye, touching condition, (say they),
The castle of honesty in all things else,
Yet should this one thing, as their whole tale tells,

Defile and deface that castle to a cottage—
One crop of a turd marreth a pot of potage.
And some to this cry, Let him pass, for we think [stink.

The more we stir a turd, the worse it will
With many conditions good, one that is ill
Defaceth the flower of all, and doth all spoil.

Now, (quoth I), if you think they truly clatter,
Let your amendment amend the matter :
Half warned, half armed. This warning for this I show, [know.
He that hath an ill name is half hanged, ye

CHAPTER VII.

Well said ! (said he). Marry, sir ! here is a tale—

For honesty, meet to set the devil on sale.
But now am I forced a bead roll to unfold,
To tell somewhat more to the tale I erst told.
Grow this, as most part doth, I durst hold my
life,
Of the jealousy of 'dame Julok, my wife,
Then shall ye wonder, when truth doth define,
How she can, and doth here both bite and whine.

Frenzy, heresy, and jealousy are three,
That men say hardly, or never, cured be.
And although jealousy need not or boot not,
What helpeth that counsel, if reason root not?
And in mad jealousy she is so far gone
She thinketh I run over all that I look on.
Take good heed of that, (quoth I), for at a word, [sword
The proverb saith : he that striketh with the
Shall be stricken with the scabbard. Tush !
(quoth he),

The devil with my scabbard will not strike me ;
But, my dame taking suspicion for full prefe,
Reporteth it for a truth to the most mischief.
In words gold and whole, as men by wit could wish,

*She will lie as fast as a dog will lick a dish.
 She is, of truth, as false as God is true;
 And, if she chance to see me, at a view,
 Kiss any of my maids alone, but in sport,
 That taketh she in earnest, after Bedlam sort.
 The cow is wood; her tongue runneth on pat-tens;*

If it be morn, we have a pair of matins;
 If it be even, evensong, not Latin nor Greek,
 But English, and like that as in Easter week.
 She beginneth, first with a cry a leison;
 To which she ringeth a peal, a larum; such one
As folk ring bees with basins—the world runneth on wheels.

But except her maid show a fair pair of heels,
 She haleth her by the boy rope, till her brains ache. [make—

And bring I home a good dish, good cheer to What is this? (saith she). Good meat, (say I), for yow! [sow!

God have mercy, horse! a pig of mine own
 Thus when I see by kindness ease reneweth not, [reweth not;

And then, that the eye seeth not, the heart
And that he must needs go whom the devil doth drive;

Her force forcing me, for mine ease to contrive
 To let her fast and fret alone for me,
 I go where merry chat and good cheer may be.
 Much spend I abroad, which at home should be spent

If she would leave controlling and be content.
There leaped a whiting, (quoth she), and leaped in straight; [ceit.

Take a hair from his beard, and mark this con-
 He maketh you believe, by lies laid on by load,

My brawling at home maketh him banquet abroad. [home.

Where his banquets abroad make me brawl at
For, as in a frost, a mud wall made of loam
Cracketh and crummeth in pieces asunder,
So melteth his money, to the world's wonder.

Thus may ye see, to turn the cat in the pan,
Or set the cart before the horse, well he can;
He is but little at home, the truth is so;
And, forth with him, he will not let me go;
And if I come to be merry where he is,
Then is he mad, as ye shall hear by this.

Where he, with gossips at a banquet late was,
At which, as use is, he paid all—but let pass!
I came to be merry; wherewith merrily:

Proface! Have among you blind harpers, (said
I)—

The mo the merrier, we all day hear and see.

Yea, but the fewer the better fare, (said he).

Then here were, ere I came, (quoth I), too many;

Here is but little meat left, if there be any.

And it is ill coming, I have heard say,

To th' end of a shot and beginning of a fray.

Put up thy purse, (quoth he), thou shalt none pay; [thy way.

And fray here should be none were thou gone

Here is, since thou camest, too many feet
a-bed; [errand sped.

Welcome! when thou goest: thus is thine
I come, (quoth I), to be one here, if I shall—

It is merry in hall when beards wag all.

What, bid me welcome, pig? I pray thee kiss
me!

Nay, farewell, sow! (quoth he), our Lord bliss
me

From bassing of beasts of Bearbinder Lane.

I have, (quoth I), for fine sugar, fair rat's-bane.

Many years since, my mother said to me,

Her elders would say : it is better to be

An old man's darling than a young man's war-ling.

And God knoweth ! I knew none of this snarling

In my old husband's days ; for, as tenderly

He loved me as ye love me slenderly ;

We drew both in one line. Quoth he, would to our lord [cord.

Ye had, in that drawing, hanged both in one

For I never meet thee at flesh, nor at fish,

But I have sure a dead man's head in my dish ;

Whose best and my worst day, that wish might
be,

Was when thou didst bury him and marry me.

If you, (quoth I), long for change in those cases,

Would to God he and you had changed places !

But best I change place, for here I may be spared,

And for my kind coming, this is my reward.

Claw a churl by th' arse, and he shitteth in my hand ; [band.

Knack me that nut, much good doyt you all this Must she not, (quoth he), be welcome to us all,

Among us all, letting such a farewell fall ?

Such carpenters, such chips, (quoth she) ; folk tell ; [farewell.

Such lips, such lettuce ; such welcome, such Thine own words, (quoth he), thine own welcome marr'd. [jarr'd,

Well, (said she), whensoever we twain have

My words be pried at narrowly, I espy.

*Ye can see a mote in another man's eye,
But ye cannot see a balk in your own.*

Yea, mark my words, but not that they be grown

By your revellous riding on every royle;
Well nigh every day a new mare or a moyle,
As much unhonest, as unprofitable,
Which shall bring us shortly to be unable
To give a dog a loaf, as I have oft said.

Howbeit, your pleasure may no time be denied,
But still you must have both the finest meat,
Apparel, and all thing that money may geat;
Like one of fond fancy so fine and so neat
That would have better bread than is made of wheat.

The best is best cheap, (quoth he), men say clear.

Well, (quoth she), a man may buy gold too
dear;

Ye nother care, nor wellnigh cast what ye pay,
To buy the dearest for the best alway.

Then for your diet who useth feeding such,
Eat more than enough, and drink much more too much. [school :

But temperance teacheth this, where he keepeth
He that knoweth when he hath enough is no fool.

Feed by measure, and defy the physician;
And, in the contrary, mark this condition :
A swine over fat is cause of his own bane ;
Who seeth nought herein, his wit is in the wane.

But pompous provision, cometh not all, alway
Of gluttony, but of pride sometime, some say.
But this proverb preacheth to men haut or
high :

*Hew not too high lest the chips fall in thine eye.
Measure is a merry mean, as this doth show :
Not too high for the pye, nor too low for the crow.*

*The difference between staring and stark blind
The wise man at all times to follow can find ;
And i-wis an auditor of a mean wit, [yit ;
May soon accompt, though hereafter come not Yet is he sure, be the day never so long,
Evermore at last they ring to evensong.
And where ye spend much though ye spent but lickle,*

*Yet little and little the cat eateth the flickle ;
Little loss by length may grow importable ;
A mouse in time may bite a-two a cable.
Thus, to end of all things, be we lief or loth,
Yet lo, the pot so long to the water goeth,
Till at the last it cometh home broken ;
Few words to the wise suffice to be spoken.
If ye were wise, here were enough, (quoth she).
Here is enough, and too much, dame, (quoth
he) ;*

For, though this appear a proper pulpit piece, Yet when the fox preacheth then beware your geese.

*A good tale ill told, in the telling is marred.
So are, (quoth she), good tales well told, and ill heard. [wit, wife :
Thy tales, (quoth he), show long hair, and short
But long be thy legs, and short be thy life.
Pray for yourself ! I am not sick, (quoth she).
Well let's see, what thy last tale cometh to,
(quoth he) : [wander ;
Thou sayest I spend all ; to this, thy words
But, as deep drinketh the goose as the gander.
Thou canst cough in the aumbry, if need be,*

When I shall cough without bread or broth for thee.

Whereby, while thou sendest me abroad to spend,

Thou gossipest at home to meet me at land's end. [mean—

Ah! then I beguile you, (quoth she), this ye

But sir! my pot is whole, and my water clean.

Well, thou wouldst have me, (quoth he), pinch like a snudge,

Every day to be thy drivel and drudge.

Not so, (quoth she), but I would have ye stir

Honestly; to keep the wolf from the dur.

I would drive the wolf out at door first, (quoth he);

And that can I not do, till I drive out thee.

A man were better be drowned in Venice gulf

Than have such a bearded bear, or such a wolf!

But had I not been witched, my wedding to flee, [me.

The terms that long to wedding had warned

First, wooing for woeing; banna for banning;

The banns for my bane; and then this, thus scanning—

Marrying marring. And what married I than?

A woman! As who saith, woe to the man!

Thus wed I with woe, wed I Jill, wed I Jane—

I pray God, the devil go with thee down the lane! [agreed),

I grant, (quoth she), this doth sound, (as ye

On your side in words, but on my side in deed.

Thou grant'st this grant, (quoth he), without any grace;

Ungraciously, to thy side, to turn this case.

Leave this, (quoth she), and learn liberality

To stint strife, grown by your prodigality.

Oft said the wise man, whom I erst did bury :
Better are meals many than one too merry.

Well, (quoth he), that is answered with this,
 wife : [whole life.

Better is one month's cheer than a churl's
 I think it learning of a wiser lectour,

To learn to make myself mine own exectour,
 Than spare for another that might wed thee,
 As the fool, thy first husband, spared for me.
 And as for ill places, thou seekest me in mo,
 And in worse too, than I into any go.

Whereby this proverb showeth thee in by the week :

No man will another in the oven seek
Except that himself have been there before.

God give grace thou hast been good ! I say no more ; [couldst prove

And would have thee say less except thou
 Such process as thou slanderously dost move.

For slander, perchance, (quoth she), I not deny
It may be a slander, but it is no lie.

It is a lie, (quoth he), and thou a liar !

Will ye, (quoth she), drive me to touch ye nigher ? [yit

I rub the galled horse back till he winch ; and He would make it seem that I touch him no whit. [make :

But I wot what I wot, though I few words
Many kiss the child for the nurse's sake.

Ye have many good children to look upon,
And ye bless them all, but ye bass but one.

This half sheweth, what the whole meaneth,
 that I meve,

Ye fet circumquakes to make me believe,
 Or think, that the moon is made of a green cheese.

And when ye have made me a lout in all these,
It seemeth ye would make me go to bed at noon.

Nay, (quoth he), the day of doom shall be done
Ere thou go to bed at noon, or night, for me.
Thou art, to be plain, and not to flatter thee,
As wholesome a morsel for my comely corse
As a shoulder of mutton for a sick horse.

The devil with his dam hath more rest in hell
Than I have here with thee; but well, wife, well! [buckets.

Well, well! (quoth she), many wells, many Yea! (quoth he), and many words, many buffets. [thus,

Had you some husband, and snapped at him
Iwys he would give you a recumbentibus.

A dog will bark ere he bite, and so thou
After thy barking wilt bite me, I trow now;
But it is hard to make an old dog stoop, lo!

Sir, (quoth she), a man may handle his dog so That he may make him bite him, though he would not. [wives scold not;

Husbands are in heaven, (quoth he), whose Thou makest me claw where it itcheth not. I would [cold;

Thy tongue were cooled to make thy tales more
That aspen leaf, such spiteful clapping have bred,

That my cap is better at ease than my head.
God send that head, (said she), a better nurse!
For when the head acheth all the body is the worse.

God grant, (quoth I), the head and body, both two,

To nurse each other better than they do:
Or ever have done for the most times past.

I brought to nurse both, (quoth she), had it not been waste. [meal;

*Margery, good cow, (quoth he), gave a good
But then she cast it down again with her heel.*

How can her purse for profit be delightful
Whose person and properties be thus spiteful?
A piece of a kid is worth two of a cat—

Who the devil will change a rabbit for a rat?
If I might change, I would rather choose to beg,

Or sit with a roasted apple or an egg
Where mine appetite serveth me to be,
Than every day to fare like a duke with thee!
Like a duke? like a duck! (quoth she), thou shalt fare, [yet spare.

Except thou wilt spare, more than thou dost Thou farest too well, (quoth he), but thou art
so wood, [doth thee good.

Thou knowest not who doth thee harm, who Yes, yes! (quoth she), for all those wise words uttered,

I know on which side my bread is buttered;
But there will no butter cleave on my bread,
And on my bread any butter to be spread;
Every promise that thou therein dost utter,
Is as sure as it were sealed with butter,
Or a mouse tied with a thread. Every good thing

Thou lettest even slip, like a waghalter slip-
But take up in time, or else I protest, [string.
All be not a-bed that shall have ill rest.

Now, go to thy darlings, and declare thy grief,
Where all thy pleasure is: hop whore, pipe thief!

CHAPTER VIII.

With this, thence hopped she; wherewith, O
 Lord! he cried, [bide?
 What wretch but I this wretchedness could Howbeit, in all this woe, I have no wrong;
 For it only is all on myself along.

Where I should have bridled her first with rough bit,

To have made her chew on the bridle one fit,
 For lickorous lucre of a little winning,
I gave her the bridle at beginning;
And now she taketh the bridle in the teeth,
And runneth away with it; whereby each man
seeth

It is, (as old men right well understand),
Ill putting a naked sword in a madman's hand.
She taketh such heart of grace that though I maim her,

Or kill her, yet shall I never reclaim her.
 She hath, (they say), been stiff-necked ever-
 more;

And it is ill healing of an old sore.

This proverb prophesied many years ago:

It will not out of the flesh that is bred in the bone. [sort

What chance have I, to have a wife of such
 That will no fault amend, in earnest nor sport?
 A small thing amiss lately I did espy,
 Which to make her mend, by a jest merrily,
 I said but this: taunt tivet, wife, your nose
drops;

So it may fall, I will eat no browesse sops
 This day. But two days after this came in ure,
 I had sorrow to my sops enough, be sure!

Well ! (quoth I), *it is ill jesting on the sooth ;
Sooth bourd is no bourd*, in ought that mirth doeth.

Such jests could not juggle her, were ought amiss,

Nor turn melancholy to mirth ; for it is
No playing with a straw before an old cat.

Every trifling toy age cannot laugh at ;
Ye may walk this way, but sure ye shall find
The further ye go, the further behind.

Ye should consider the woman is old : [cold !
And what for ? a hot word ? soon hot, soon Bear with them that bear with you, and she is scanned

Not only the fairest flower in your garland,
But also she is all the fair flowers thereof :
Will ye requite her then with a taunting scoff ?
Or with any other kind of unkindness ? [ness !
Take heed is a fair thing : beware this blind-
Why will ye, (quoth he), I shall follow her will ?
To make me John Drawlatch, or such a sneak-bill ?

To bring her solace that bringeth me sorrow ?
By'r lady ! then we shall catch birds to-morrow :
A good wife maketh a good husband, (they say).

That, (quoth I), ye may turn another way :
To make a good husband, make a good wife ;
I can no more herein, but God stint all strife !
Amen ! (quoth he), and God have mercy,
brother !

I will now mend this house and pair another.
And that he meant, of likelihood, by his own ;
For, so apaired he that, ere three years were
grown,

That little and little he decayed so long,

Till he at length came to buckle and bare thong.

To discharge charge, that necessarily grew,
There was no more water than the ship drew.
Such drifts drave he, from ill to worse and
Till he was as bare as a bird's arse. [worse,
Money, and money worth, did so miss him
That he had not now one penny to bliss him;
Which, foreseen in this woman, wisely weighing ing,
That meet was to stay somewhat for her stay-
To keep yet one mess for Alison in store,
She kept one bag that he had not seen before :
A poor cook that may not lick his own fingers.
But about her at home now still he lingers,
Not checker a-board, all was not clear in the coast,

He looked like one that had beshit the roast.
But whether any secret tales were sprinkling,
Or that he by guess had got an inkling
Of her hoard ; or that he thought to amend,
And turn his ill beginning to a good end
In showing himself a new man, as was fit,
That appeared shortly after, but not yet.

CHAPTER IX.

One day in their arbour—which stood so to mine,
That I might, and did, closely mine ear incline,
And likewise cast mine eye, to hear and see
What they said and did, where they could not
He unto her a goodly tale began, [see me—
More like a wooer than a wedded man.
As ferre as matter thereof therein served

But the first part from words of wooing swerved,

And stood upon repentance, with submission
Of his former crooked unkind condition;

Praying her to forgive and forget all, free
And he forgave her as he forgiven would be;
Loving her now, as he full deeply swore,
As hotly as ever he loved her before.

Well, well! (quoth she), whatever ye now say,
It is too late to call again yesterday.

Wife! (quoth he), such may my diligence seem
That th'offence of yesterday I may redeem;

God taketh me as I am, and not as I was—
Take you me so too, and let all things past pass. [think plain:

I pray thee, good wife! think I speak and
What! he runneth far that never turneth again.

Ye be young enough to mend, I agree it;
But I am, (quoth she), too old to see it;

And amend ye or not, I am too old a year.

What is life where living is extinct clear?

Namely at old years of least help and most need; [heed.

But no tale could tune you in time to take
If I tune myself now, (quoth he), it is fair;

And hope of true tune shall tune me from despair. [(said she);

Believe well, and have well, men say; yea,

Do well, and have well, men say also, we see.

But what man can believe, that man can do
well

Who of no man will counsel take, or hear tell?

Which to you, when any man any way tried,

Then were ye deaf: ye could not hear on that side.

Whoever with you any time therein wears,

He must both tell you a tale, and find you ears.
You had on your harvest ears, thick of hearing;
But this is a question of old inquiring :

*Who is so deaf, or so blind, as is he
That wilfully will nother hear nor see?*

When I saw your manner, my heart for woe
molt; [bolt:

Then would ye mend as the fletcher mends his
Or as sour ale mendeth in summer: I know,
And knew, which way the wind blew, and will blow.

Though not to my profit, a prophet was I:
I prophesied this, too true a prophecy.

When I was right ill believed, and worse hard,
By flinging from your folks at home, which all marred,

When I said in semblance either cold or warm:
A man far from his good is nigh his harm.

Or willed ye to look, that ye lost no more,
On such as show that hungry flies bite sore,
Then would ye look over me, with stomach
Like as the devil looked over Lincoln. [swollen,
The devil is dead, wife, (quoth he), for ye see
I look like a lamb in all your words to me.

Look as ye list now, (quoth she), thus looked ye
than;

And for those looks I show this, to show each
man,

Such proof of this proverb, as none is greater,
Which saith, that some man may steal a horse better

Than some other may stand and look upon.

Lewd huswives might have words, but I not
one

That might be allowed. But now if ye look,
In mistaking me, ye may see, ye took

The wrong way to wood, and the wrong sow by th'ear;

And thereby in the wrong box to thrive, ye
were.

I have heard some, to some tell this tale not
seeld :

When thrift is in the town, ye be in the field;

But contrary, you made that sense to sown,

When thrift was in the field, ye were in the town. [any ;

Field ware might sink or swim while ye had

Town ware was your ware to turn the penny.

But town or field, where most thrift did appear,

What ye won in the hundred ye lost in the shire—

In all your good husbandry thus rid the rock.

Ye stumbled at a straw, and leapt over a block.

So many kinds of increase you had in choice,

And nought increase nor keep, how can I rejoice?

Good riding at two anchors men have told,

For if the tone fail, the tother may hold.

But you leave all anchor hold, on seas or lands,

And so set up shop upon Goodwin's sands.

But as folk have a saying, both old and true,

In that they say : black will take none other

So may I say here, to my deep dolour, [hue ;

It is a bad cloth that will take no colour.

This case is yours ; for ye were never so wise

To take speck of colour of good advice.

Th'advice of all friends I say, one and other

Went in at the tone ear, and out at the tother.

And as those words went out, this proverb in came :

He that will not be ruled by his own dame

Shall be ruled by his stepdame ; and so you,

Having lost your own good, and own friends
now,

May seek your foreign friends, if you have any.
And sure one of my great griefs, among many,
Is that ye have been so very a hog [dog!
To my friends. What, man? love me, love my
But you, to cast precious stones before hogs,
Cast my good before a sort of cur dogs
And salt bitches; which by whom now devoured,

And your honesty among them deflowered,
And that you may no more expense afford,
Now can they not afford you one good word,
And you them as few. And old folk understood : [good.

When thieves fall out true men come to their
Which is not alway true; for, in all that bretch,
I can no farthing of my good the more fetch;
Nor, I trow, themselves neither, if they were sworn;

Light come, light go! And sure, since we were born,

Ruin of one ravine was there none greater;
For, by your gifts, they be as little the better
As you be much the worse, and I cast away—
An ill wind that bloweth no man to good, men say. [the corn.

Well, (quoth he), every wind bloweth not down
I hope, (I say), good hap be not all outworn.

I will now begin thrift, when thrift seemeth gone— [than one;

What, wife! there be no ways to the wood
And I will assay all the ways to the wood
Till I find one way to get again this good.

Ye will get it again, (quoth she), I fear,
As shortly as a horse will lick his ear.

The Dutchman sayeth, that segging is good cope;

Good words bring not ever of good deeds good hope; [scorn—

And these words show your words spoken in
It pricketh betimes that will be a good thorn;
Timely crooketh the tree, that will a good cammock be.

And, such beginning such end, we all day see;
And you, by me at beginning being thriven,
And then to keep thrift could not be pricked nor driven—

How can ye now get thrift, the stock being gone?

Which is th'only thing to rise thrift upon.

Men say: he may ill run that cannot go,
And your gain, without your stock, runneth even so.

For, what is a workman without his tools?—
Tales of Robin Hood are good among fools.
He can ill pipe that lacketh his upper lip;
Who lacketh a stock, his gain is not worth a chip.

A tale of a tub, your tale no truth avoweth;
Ye speak now as ye would creep into my mouth;

In pure painted process—as false as fair—
How ye will amend when ye cannot appair?
But against gay glossers this rude text recites:

It is not all butter that the cow shites.

I heard once a wise man say to his daughter:
Better is the last smile than the first laughter.
We shall, I trust, (quoth he), laugh again at last,

Although I be once out of the saddle cast;

Yet, since I am bent to sit, this will I do :
Recover the horse or lese the saddle too. [hap,
Ye never could yet, (quoth she), recover any
To win or save ought, to stop any one gap.
For stopping of gaps, (quoth he), care not a rush,

I will learn to stop two gaps with one bush.
Ye will, (quoth she), as soon stop gaps with rushes

As with any husbandly handsome bushes.
Your tales have like taste, where temperance is taster,

To break my head, and then give me a plaster.
Now thrift is gone, now would ye thrive in all haste; [waste.

And when ye had thrift, ye had like haste to Ye liked then better an inch of your will Than an ell of your thrift. Wife (quoth he),
be still,

May I be holp forth an inch at a pinch,
I will yet thrive, (I say): As good is an inch
As an ell. Ye can, (quoth she), make it so
well;

For when I gave you an inch, ye took an ell,
Till both ell and inch be gone, and we in debt.
Nay, (quoth he), with a wet finger ye can fet
As much as may easily all this matter ease;
And this debate also pleasantly appease. [now,
I could do as much with an hundred pound
As with a thousand afore, I assure you.

Yea, (quoth she), who had that he hath not would

Do that he doeth not, as old men have told.
Had I, as ye have, I would do more, (quoth he), [see.
Than the priest spake of on Sunday, ye should Ye do, as I have, (quoth she); for nought I have

And nought ye do. What, man! I trow ye rave: [cake?

Would ye both eat your cake and have your
Ye have had of me all that I might make;

And, be a man never so greedy to win,
He can have no more of the fox but the skin.

Well! (quoth he), if ye list to bring it out,
Ye can give me your blessing in a clout.

That were for my child, (quoth she), had I ony;

But husband! I have neither child, nor money.
Ye cast and conjecture this much, like in show,
As the blind man casts his staff, or shoots the crow. [none,

Howbeit, had I money right much, and ye
Yet to be plain, ye should have none for Joan.
Nay, he that first flattereth me, as ye have
done,

And doth as ye did to me after, so soon,
He may be in my Pater noster indeed;
But be sure, he shall never come in my Creed.

Ave Maria! (quoth he), how much motion
Here is to prayers, with how little devotion;
But some men say: no penny no Pater noster!

I say to such (said she): no longer foster,
No longer lemman. But fare and well then,
Pray and shift each one for himself, as he can:
Every man for himself, and God for us all.

To those words he said nought; but, forthwith did fall [speech.

From harping on that string to fair flattering
And, as I erst said, he did her so beseech,
That things erst so far off were now so far on,
That as she may wallow, away she is gone

Where all that was left lay with a trusty friend, Dwelling a good walk from her at the town's end.

And back again straight a halting pace she hobbles,

Bringing a bag of royals and nobles;
All that she had, without restraint of one jot—
She brought bullock's noble, for noble or groat
Had she not one mo: which I after well knew.
And anon smiling, toward him as she drew,
Ah, sir! light burden far heavy (quoth she);
This light burden in long walk well-nigh trieth
me.

God give grace I play not the fool this day;
For here I send th'axe after the helve away.
But if ye will stint and avoid all strife,
Love and cherish this as ye would my life.
I will, (quoth he), wife, by God Almighty!
This gear cometh even in pudding time rightly.
He snatched at the bag. No haste but good,
(quoth she);

Short shooting leseth your game, ye may see.
Ye missed the cushion, for all your haste to it,
And I may set you beside the cushion yit,
And make you wipe your nose upon your sleeve
For ought ye shall win without ye axe me leave.
Have ye not heard tell, all covet, all lose?
Ah, sir! I see ye may see no green cheese
But your teeth must water—a good cockney coke!

Though ye love not to buy the pig in the poke,
Yet snatch ye at the poke, that the pig is in,
Not for the poke, but the pig good cheap to win.

Like one half lost, till greedy grasping gat it,
Ye would be over the stile ere ye come at it.

But abide, friend ! your mother bid till ye were born : [morn.

Snatching winneth it not, if ye snatch till to Men say, (said he), long standing and small offering [proffering

Maketh poor persons ; and, in such signs and Many pretty tales and merry toys had they,
Before this bag came fully from her away.

Kindly he kissed her, with words not tart nor tough : [enough.

But the cat knoweth whose lips she licketh well
Anon, the bag she delivered him, and said
He should bear it, for that it now heavy weighed.

With good will, wife ! for it is, (said he to her),
A proud horse that will not bear his own pro-vender.

And oft before seemed she never so wise,
Yet was she now, suddenly waxen as nice
As it had been a halporth of silver spoons.
Thus cloudy mornings turn to clear afternoons ;
But so nigh noon it was, that by and by,
They rose, and went to dinner lovingly.

CHAPTER X.

This dinner thought he long, and straight after
To his accustomed customers he gat ; [that
With whom, in what time he spent one groat
before,

In less time he spent now ten groats or more ;
And in small time he brought the world so about [out.

That he brought the bottom of the bag clean
His gadding thus again made her ill content ;

But she not so much as dreamed that all was spent.

Howbeit, suddenly, she minded on a day
To pick the chest lock, wherein this bag lay;
Determining this: if it lay whole still,
So shall it lie—no mite she minish will; [best
And, if the bag began to shrink, she thought
To take for her part some part of the rest.
But straight as she had forthwith opened the lock,

And looked in the bag what it was a clock,
Then was it proved true, as this proverb goeth:
He that cometh last to the pot is soonest wroth.
By her coming last, and too late to the pot,
Whereby she was potted thus like a sot
To see the pot both skimmed for running over,
And also all the liquor run at rover.

At her good husband's and her next meeting,
The devil's good grace might have given a greeting,

Either for honour or honesty, as good [wood;
As she gave him: she was, (as they say), horn
In no place could she sit herself to settle,
It seemed to him she had pissed on a nettle.

She nettled him, and he rattled her so,
That at end of that fray asunder they go;
And never after came together again—
He turned her out at doors to graze on the plain,

And himself went after; for, within fortnight,
All that was left was launched out quite.
And thus had he brought haddock to paddock,
Till they both were not worth a haddock.

It hath been said: *need maketh the old wife
trot—*

Other folk said it, but she did it, God wot!

First from friend to friend, and then from dur
to dur,

A-begging of some that had begged of her.

But as men say : misery may be mother

Where one beggar is driven to beg of another.

And thus wore and wasted this most woeful wretch, [fetch.

Till death from this life did her wretchedly

Her late husband, and now widower, here and there [where;

Wandering about, few know and fewer care

Cast out as an abject, he leadeth his life

Till famine belike fet him after his wife.

Now let us note here : First, of the first twain,

Where they both wedded, together to remain,

Hoping joyful presence should wear out all woe :

Yet poverty brought that joy to joy-fail, lo !

But, notably note these last twain : whereas he Took her only for that he rich would be,

And she him only in hope of good hap

In her doting days to be danced on the lap.

In condition they differed so many ways,

That lightly he laid her up for holy days ;

Her good he laid up so, lest thieves might spy
it,

That nother she could, nor he can, come by it.

Thus failed all four, of all things less and
more,

Which they all, or any of all, married for.

CHAPTER XI.

Forsooth ! said my friend, *this matter maketh
boast*

Of diminution. For, here is a mill post Thwitten to a pudding prick so nearly,
That I confess me discouraged clearly.

In both my weddings, in all things, except one,
This spark of hope have I, to proceed upon :
Though these and some other speed ill as ye
tell,

Yet other have lived and loved full well.
If I should deny that, (quoth I), I should rave ;
For, of both these sorts, I grant, that myself
have

Seen of the one sort, and heard of the tother,
That liked and lived right well, each with other.

But whether fortune will you that man declare,
That shall choose in this choice, your comfort
or care,

Since, before ye have chosen, we cannot know,
I thought to lay the worst, as ye the best show,
That ye might, being yet at liberty,
With all your joy, join all your jeopardy.

And now, in this heard, in these cases on each
part,

I say no more, but lay your hand on your heart.
I heartily thank you, (quoth he) ; *I am sped
Of mine errand : this hitteth the nail on the head.*

Who that leaveth surety and leaneth unto chance,

When fools pipe, by authority he may dance.
And sure am I, of those twain, if I none choose,

Although I nought win, yet shall I nought lose.

And to win a woman here, and lose a man,
In all this great winning what gain win I
than?

But, mark how folly hath me away carried;
How, like a weathercock, I have here varied:
First, these two women to lose I was so loth,
That if I might, I would have wedded them
both; [them;

Then thought I since, to have wedded one of
And, now know I clear, I will wed none of them.

They both shall have this one answer by letter:
As good never a whit as never the better.

Now let me ask, (quoth I), and yourself
answer

The short question that I asked while're.

A foul, old, rich widow, whether wed would ye,
Or a young, fair maid, being poor as ye be?

In neither barrel better herring, (quoth he).

I like thus riches as ill as poverty;

Who that hath either of these pigs in ure,

He hath a pig of the worse pannier sure.

I was wedded unto my will; howbeit,

I will be devorst, and be wed to my wit;

Whereby, with these examples past, I may see

Fond wedding, for love, as good only to flee.

Only for love, or only for good,

Or only for both I wed not, by my hood!

Thus, no one thing only, though one thing chiefly

Shall woo me to wed now: for now I espy,

Although the chief one think in wedding be love,

Yet must mo things join, as all in one may move

Such kind of living, for such kind of life,
As lacking the same, no lack to lack a wife.

Here is enough, I am satisfied, (said he).

Since enough is enough, (said I), here may we,
With that one word take end good, as may be guessed

For folk say : enough is as good as a feast.

TO THE READER

Rhyme without reason, and reason without rhyme—

In this conversion deep difference doth fall
In first part whereof, where I am fallen this time.

The folly I grant; which granted, (readers all),
Your grant, to grant this request, require I shall.

Ere ye full reject these trifles following here,
Perceive, (I pray you), of the words th'intents
clear.

In which, (may ye like to look), ye shall espy
Some words show one sense, another to disclose;

Some words, themselves sundry senses signify;
Some words, somewhat from common sense, I dispose

To seem one sense in text, another in glose.
These words in this work, thus wrought your working tool [fool.

May work me to seem, (at least), the less a
Then in rough rude terms of homely honesty—
For dishonest term, (I trust), there none here sounds

Wherein fine tender ears shall offended be—

Those follies, being searched in reason's bounds,

Reason may be surgeon salving those wounds;
Turning those sores to salves; for reason doth
guess

Homely matters homely terms do best express.
But where all defence standeth in exemption,
To defend me herein out of folly's bands—
So that to redeem me there's no redemption, Granting, and submitting folly, that so stands—

This last refuge I crave to have, at your hands,
Those follies standing clear from intent of ill;
In lieu or lack of good wit, except good will.

THE FIRST HUNDRED OF EPIGRAMS

1. "AN EPIGRAM ON THIS BOOK OF EPIGRAMS."

This book may seem, as it sorteth in suit,
A thin trim trencher to serve folk at fruit.
But carver or reader can no way win
To eat fruit thereon, or compt fruit therein.

2. "OF THREE SAGES."

Three manner sages nature doth devise—
The sage herb, the sage fool, and the sage wise.

And who for most wise himself doth accept,
May match any sage, the sage wise except.

3. "QUESTIONS ANSWERED."

| Fear they any | } | Yea. |
| That fear not many? | | |

| | | |
|---------------------|---|------|
| Keep they any | } | Nay. |
| That keep too many? | | |

4. "OF WATER, WINE, AND ALE."

Water under a boat, wine in a bottle,
 The tone I can bear, th'other beareth me well;
 And whereas nother boats nor bottles be,
 Nother can I bear wine, nor water bear me.
 But, above all liquor, well fare ale, (I say),
 For I with ale, and ale with me, wag away.

5. "TOO MUCH OR TOO LITTLE."

If that I drink too much, then am I dry;
 If I drink too little, more dry am I;
 If I drink no whit then am I dryest.
 Too much, too little, no whit—nought is the best.
 Thus drink we no whit, or drink till we burst,
 Yet poor dry souls we be ever a-thirst.

6. "OF THE SENSES."

Speak not too much, lest speech make thee
 speechless;
 Go not too much, for fear thou go behind;
 Hear not too much, lest hearing bring deafness; [blind;
 Look not too much, lest looking make thee
 Smell not too much, lest smelling lose his kind;
 Taste not too much, lest taste mistaste thy chaps;
 Touch not too much for fear of afterclaps.

7. "OF TALKING."

Thy tail can talk, and knoweth no letter;
 Thy tongue can talk, and talketh much sweeter;
 But except wisdom be the greater
 Of tongue and tail, thy tail talketh better.

8. "OF EARS AND WITS."

Thin ears and thick wits be dainty;
Thick ears and thick wits be plenty;
Thick ears and thick wits be scant;
Thin ears and thin wits none want.

9. "A DRUNKARD."

A goose is harnessed in her white feathers;
A drunkard in drink against all weathers;
A fool in his fool's hood, put all together.

10. "THE FOX AND THE MAID."

Although that foxes have been seen there
seeld,
Yet was there lately, in Finsbury field,
A fox sat in sight of certain people,
Nodding, and blissing, staring on Paul's steeple.
A maid toward market, with hens in a band,
Came by, and with the fox she fell in hand.
"What thing is it, Reynard, in your brain plodding, [ding?"
That bringeth this busy blissing and nod-
"I nother nod for sleep, sweetheart," the fox said, [maid.
"Nor bliss for spirits, except the devil be a
My nodding and blissing breedeth of wonder,
Of the wit of Paul's weathercock yonder.
There is more wit in that cock's only head,
Than hath been in all men's heads that be dead.
As thus, by common report, this we find,
All that be dead did die for lack of wind.
But the weathercock's wit is not so weak
To lack wind; the wind is ever in his beak.
So that, while any wind bloweth in the sky,

For lack of wind that weathercock will not die."

She cast down her hens, and now did she bliss,
"Jesu!" (quoth she), "in nomine patris!"

Who hath ever heard, at any season,
Of a fox's forging so feat a reason?"

And while she praised the fox's wit so,
He gat her hens in his neck, and to go.

"Whither away with my hens, fox?" (quoth she).

"To Paul's pig as fast as I can," (quoth he).

"Between these hens, and yonder weathercock,
I will assay to have chickens a flock.

Which, if I may get, this tale is made good,
In all Christendom not so wise a brood.

Maiden," (quoth he), "these hens be forbidden
Your sight till the weathercock hath trodden."

"Woe, worth!" (quoth she), "all crafty inventions,

And all inventors, that by false intentions,
Invent with intent to blind or blear blunt eyes,
In case as this fox to me doth devise."

II. "OF AN ILL GOVERNOR CALLED JUDE."

A ruler there was, in country a-fer,
And of the people a great extortioner; [Jude.
Who, by name, (as I understand), was called
One gave him an ass; which gift, when he had
He asked the giver for what intent [viewed,
He brought him that ass. "For a present
I bring master Jude," (quoth he), "this as[s] hither

To join master Jude and this as[s] together.
Which two, joined in one, this is brought to pass:

I may bid you 'Good even,' master Judas."

“Macabe or Iscariot, thou knave?” (quoth he). [be.”

“Whom it please your mastership, him let it

12. “OF GIVING AN ALMS.”

Into a beggar’s hand, that alms did crave,
Instead of one penny, twopence one gave.
Which done, he said, “Beggar, happy thou art!

For to thee my hand is better than my heart.”
“That is,” (quoth the beggar), “as it chanceth now;

The better for me, and the worse for you.”

13. “OF A SURFEIT.”

A man, from a fever recovered new,
His greedy appetite could not eschew
From meat contagious, whereto he had a lust;
But one morsel, one evening, needs eat he must.

Which, forthwith, brought good approbation
Of his return into residivation.

“What cause causeth this?” (quoth the physician).

“I know,” (quoth he), “no cause of suspicion;
Howbeit, my wonder is great as can be
By what means this fever attacheth me
More for eating a little this night last, [past.
Than for eating much more the night before
I did eat a capon nigh every whit

The last night; after which, I felt no fit.
And this night I ate but one bit of fresh beef,
And yet I am shaken with the whoreson thief.”

“Now,” (quoth the physician), “appeareth the cause why:

Capon is wholesome, and the beef contrary;

And a little ill meat giveth sickness more food
Than a little too much of meat that is good."

"Sir, I thank you much," (quoth the patient);
"This lesson shall henceforth make me to consent

When I shall needs surfeit, by unruly will,
Rather to surfeit on that is good, than ill."

14. "REPUGNANCY IN APPEARANCE."

Much contrariety may seem to stand
Where none is; as by example, my son:
In London is the best ale of all England;
And yet, as good ale in England as in London.

15. "THE APE AND THE ASS."

The ape and the ass stood where they beheld
A course with a greyhound at the hare in a field; [ground wan,
They well perceiving the greyhound great
As long as the hare and he forthright ran;
And like advantage they saw in the hare
When she list lightly to turn here and there.
The ape, to know whether the ass's talking,
Were any quicker than his assish stalking,
Asked the ass, "If thou should'st choose one of both—

To ren as swiftly as the greyhound yonder
go'th,

Or turn as light as the hare—which one of twain [obtain?"

Wouldst thou in thy choosing by choice
"I," (quoth the ass), "being at liberty [thee.
Will choose none of both feats, I may say to What winneth the dog by his swift footmanship [a whip?

When the hare, at pinch, turneth from him at

And what win'th the hare in her turns so lightly,

The dog out-running her again, by and by?
Renning or turning so, run or turn who will,
I will go softly, or else stand even still."

"Howbeit, to assoil thy question," (quoth he),
"If I should choose one, like the hare would I
be;

For, where the dog renneth the hare for to kill,
She turneth for defence, offering the dog none ill.

And better is this part in this case, brother, Myself to defend, than offend another."

16. "A FOOL AND A WISE MAN."

A fool and a wise man riding, one espied.

He asked the horse that the wise man did ride :

"Whither goest thou, horse?" "Whither go
I?" (quoth he)— [me!"

"Ask him that guideth the bridle, ask not
"Whither ridest thou, fool!" (quoth he),
"with look so fell?"

"Ask my horse, knave!" (said he), "what can I tell?"

"When fools ride," (quoth he), "that cannot rule the rein,

Their horses be their herbengers, I see plain.

And when wise men ride, I right well espy, Themselves, not their horse, appoint where they lie."

17. "OF SIGHT."

Who needs will look, and would not see,
The sight once seen thou lookest for,
Close up thine eyes. For, trust thou me,
Much looking so breedeth much eye sore.

18. "FEIGNED NEWS."

From a field fought, one of the beaten side
 Ran home, and victory on his part he cried;
 Whose prince, by him thus informed of this,
 Made bonfires and bankets, as the use is.
 In short time, after all which joy and cost,
 The king was ascertained the field was lost.
 Wherewith he, (in as great haste as great grief),
 Charged the first messenger to make preef
 Where he had this lie: that the field was won.
 "Myself, sir," (quoth he), "this lie first begun;
 Which, for commodity unto your grace,
 And all your subjects, I brought it in place.
 Where the truth should have brought watching and weeping,
 My lie brought two days of laughing and sleeping.
 And if ye all this year took my lie for true
 To keep you merry, what harm could ensue?
Better is," (quoth he), "be it new or stale,
A harmless lie than a harmful true tale."
 How his lie was allowed, I know none that knoweth;
 But it was at least winked at, I heard of trowth.

19. "TWO, ARM IN ARM."

One said to another, taking his arm,
 "By licence, friend, and take this for none harm."
 "No, sir," (quoth the other), "I give you leave
To hang on my arm, but not on my sleeve."

20. "OF HEARING AND SPEAKING."

Who heareth all
And speaketh nought,
Chance may so fall
He is well taught.
Who speaketh all
And heareth nought,
Fall what shall fall,
He is ill taught.
Who heareth all
And all babbleth,
Whatever fall
He oft fableth.
Who heareth nought
Nor nought can speak,
May soon be thought
A hoddypeak.
Say nought, hear all;
Say all, hear nought;
Both, none, these fall
Extremely wrought.
Who heareth oft
And speaketh seeld,
Be wit aloft
He winneth the field.

21. "OF WIT, WILL, AND WISDOM."

Where will is good, and wit is ill,
There wisdom can no manner skill.
Where wit is good, and will is ill,
There wisdom sitteth all silent still.
Where wit and will are both two ill,
There wisdom no way meddle will.
Where wit and will well ordered be,
There wisdom maketh a trinity.

22. "THE WREN, AND HER BIRDS."

Of a nest of wrens late bred in a hedge,
Which the dam forsaking, when they were fledge,

One said: "Alas! mother, what is the why
That ye draw from us unnaturally?"

"Child," (quoth the dam), "I do now unto thee

As my dam, in my youth, did unto me.

Whereby I am blameless in that I do,
Since I do but as I have been done to."

"Mother," (quoth he), "to deal as ye be dealt with

Is not alway meet; but this is the pith:

As ye would your dam should have dealt with yow, [now."

So should ye, our dam, deal with your birds

"Why, son," (quoth she), "thinkest thou me
such a fool,

That my child shall set his mother to school?

Nay, adieu," (quoth she), and away she is flown;

This child, for this check, refusing for her own.

Which done, the wren calleth his brothers and

And unto them this lesson he whisters. [sisters,

"I see, and ye may see," (quoth he), "by this case,

The trial of taunts out of time and place.

Where fair words haply my mother might have won,

This taunt maketh her refuse me for her son.

Which may teach us all, wherever we become,

Rather by silence alway to be mum

Than in ought at liberty, or forbidden,

To taunt our betters, openly or hidden."

23. "THE MASTER AND THE MAN."

A man, and his man, chanced late to be Nigh where a crow stood crying in a tree.

"James," (quoth the master), "the crow hath spied thee." [(quoth he).

"Nay, by God! he looketh on you, master,"

"Taunts," (quoth the master), "rebound sometimes I see; [me."

Where I thought to taunt thee, thou dost taunt

24. "UPON PENANCE."

Two men of one man were confessed but late,
And both two had penance after one rate.

Which was: each of them a penny should give
To a penniless man, him to relieve. [more;

Th'one of these twain had one penny, and no
Th'other, no penny nor farthing had in store.

They disclosing each to other in this case,

This penny father drew his purse apace,

Saying: "Since thou art penniless, I will Give thee this penny, my penance to fulfil."

"God thank thee!" (quoth the tother), "and since thou

Art now penniless, as I was even now,

For penance I give this penny to thee,

As freely as ever thou gavest it to me."

"Well done!" (quoth the other), "here may we boast:

Penny dole dealt without one penny cost."

25. "JACK AND HIS FATHER."

"Jack," (quoth his father), "how shall I ease take?

If I stand, my legs ache; and if I kneel,

My knees ache; if I go, then my feet ache;

If I lie, my back acheth; if I sit I feel
 My hips ache; and, lean I never so weel,
 My elbows ache." "Sir," (quoth Jack),
 "pain to exile,
 Since all these ease not, best ye hang awhile."

26. "OF A DAW."

With a crossbow, late, in hand ready bent,
 To shoot at a daw in a tree, I went Saying to one by: "I will assay to hit Yonder I see a daw, if she will sit."
 "She is, if she sit, a daw indeed," (quoth he);
 "But if she sit not, what is she then, say ye?"
 "A daw also," (said I). Then said he, "I see,
 Whether a daw sit, or whether a daw flee,
 Whether a daw stand, or whether a daw lie,
 Whether a daw creak, or whether a daw cry,
 In what case soever a daw persever,
 A daw is a daw, and a daw shall be ever."

27. "OF SHOWING THE WAY."

Twain met in a highway what time they did go,
 Each one toward the place the tother came fro.
 "What is my way," (said the fone), "I pray thee?" [ings," (quoth he);
 "Fool!" (quoth th'other). "That is ill tid-
 "I can tell thee better tidings than this:
 Thy way, both fair and smooth as a die is.
 My tidings," (quoth he), "is better than thine,
 But I think thy tidings truer than mine."
 "This is," (quoth the tother), "so well brought about,
 That it brought, and shall bring me, in doubt
 Which of these twain is most ill to view:
 Good tales that be false, or ill tales that be true."

28. "A QUIET NEIGHBOUR."

Accompted our commodities,
Few more commodious reason sees
Than is this one commodity—
Quietly neighboured to be;
Which neighbourhood in thee appears.
For, we two, having ten whole years
Dwelt wall to wall, so joiningly,
That whispering soundeth through wellnigh,
I never heard thy servants brawl
More than thou hadst had none at all.
Nor I can no way make avaunt,
That ever I heard thee give them taunt.
Thou art to them, and they to thee,
More mild than mute; mum ye be.
I hear no noise mine ease to break;
Thy buttery door I hear not creak;
The kitchen cumbreth not by heat;
Thy cooks chop neither herbs nor meat.
I never heard thy fire once spark;
I never heard thy dog once bark;
I never heard once in thy house
So much as one peep of one mouse;
I never heard thy cat once mew—
These praises are not small nor few.
I bear all water of thy soil,
Whereof I feel no filthy foil,
Save water which doth wash thy hands,
Wherein there none annoyance stands.
Of all thy guests set at thy board,
I never heard one speak one word;
I never heard them cough nor hem;
I think, hence to Jerusalem,
For this neighbourly quietness,
Thou art the neighbour neighbourless.

Father and mother not dishonoured by thee :
For thou never comest where any of them be.
And where thou shalt not kill ; to clear thee of
that,

Thou never durst abide to fight with a gnat.
Than all adultery or fornication :
Chastity dischargeth, by this approbation ;
All women hardly can bear thee their favour
To abide thy sight ; and in no wise thy savour.
For stealing or theft : whatever thou hast been,
Thy hands at this day are known to be clean.
How canst thou steal ought in house, field, or street?— [feet.

Thou sittest in Newgate fast bound, hands and
By false witness thou never hurtest man : for why?

Every word thou speakest, every man thinkest
a lie.

Now, to covet in mind thy neighbour's ass,
Or his house : when bondage will not let thee
pass

To ride to the tone, or go to the tother ;
Or, in consented thought, one way or other.
For to covet thy neighbour's maid or his wife :
Thou knowing they cannot love thee for their life.

Or, of thy neighbour's things to covet anything :

When covetousness can no way bring winning ;
But that lack of credit, liberty, or love,
Keepeth thee from that coveting can move.

Thou hast too shrewd a wit in desire to dwell,
To have things from which despair doth thee
expel. [appear,

Thus in God's precepts, except thou clear
I know not who the devil can say he is clear.

31. "OF A NOSE."

But for blemish of a face to look upon,
I doubt which were best, to have a nose or
none.

Most of our savours are more sour than sweet :
A nose or no nose, which is now most meet?

32. "LETTING OF A FARM."

By word, without writing, one let out a farm,
The covenants wherein the lessee brake amain :
Whereby the lessor, lacking writing, had harm. [plain,

He said and sware, he would make promise
Without writing, never to let thing again.

"Husband!" cried this wife, "that oath again
revart :

Else, without writing, ye cannot let a fart."

33. "AGE AND YOUTH."

Though age and youth together can seeld
agree,

Yet once, two young and two old folk did I see Agreed like lambs together, divers years :

The story whereof forthwith appears.

A woman old, and a man young were led,
She him for love, and he her for good, to wed.

A young woman, and old man, in like case,
Were wed for like cause at the same time and place.

Into one house these two couples wedded were,
And during their lives, together must live there.
And they once acquainted, and one month married,

All their lives after they never varied.
Company and condition these four folk hold,

As nature naturally willeth young and old :
 Coupling themselves together thus every day ;
 Th'old fools all day prate, the young fools all day play.

34. " A ROSE AND A NETTLE."

What time herbs and weeds, and such things could talk,
 A man in his garden one day did walk,
 Spying a nettle green, (as Themeraude), spread
 In a bed of roses like the ruby red. [eye, Between which two colours he thought, by his
 The green nettle did the red rose beautify.
 " Howbeit," he asked the nettle, " what thing Made him so pert? so nigh the rose to spring? " [nettle;
 " I grow here with these roses," said the
 " Their mild properties in me to settle;
 And you, in laying unto me your nose,
 Shall smell how a nettle may change to a rose."
 He did so : which done, his nostrils so pritcht,
 That rashly he rubbed where it no whit itched ;
 To which smart mock, and wily beguiling,
 He, the same smelling, said smoothly smiling—
 " Roses convert nettles? Nay, they be too fell;
 Nettles will pervert roses rather, I smell."

35. " OF THE WIFE'S AND HER HUSBAND'S WASTE."

" Where am I least, husband? " Quoth he,
 " In the waist : [strait-laced."
 Which cometh of this; thou art vengeably

“Where am I biggest, wife?” “In the waste,” (quoth she);
 “For all is waste in you, as far as I see.”

36. “AN OLD WIFE’S BOON.”

In old world, when old wives bitterly prayed,
 One devoutly, as by way of a boon,
 Axt vengeance on her husband, and to him
 said:

“Thou wouldst wed a young wife ere this week were doon [soon.”
 Were I dead, but thou shalt wed the devil as “I cannot wed the devil,” (quoth he).
 “Why?” (quoth she). [he).
 “For I have wedded his dam before,” (quoth

37. “A TALK OF TWO CONIES.”

In time when dumb beasts, as well as birds
 spake,

Two conies their minds in this matter brake.
 “Were all conies in such case,” (said the one),
 “That of two winters’ weather we must choose one: [snow ever?
 Which were best choice—frost never, and
 Or else to choose frost ever, and snow never?”
 “Frost,” (quoth the other), “maketh us lusty and fat; [(quoth he), “for that?
 And snow lameth us for lean.” “What,”
 Forty fat conies be oft killed in one night,
 When lean conies with life ’scape away quite.”
 “Yea,” (quoth the tother), “but where snow too long lieth,

Conies by famine well-nigh every one dieth.
 Better all be fat, though some die as lots fall,
 Than linger in leanness, and thereby die all.”

38. "A PRISONER."

In prison, a prisoner condemned to die,
 And for execution waiting daily,
 In his hands for worms looking on a day,
 Smiling to himself these words did say :
 " Since my four quarters, in four quarters shall stand, [hand?
 Why harm I these seely worms eating my Nought else in this deed do I, but myself show Enemy to the worm and friend to the crow."

39. "TWO BLIND MEN."

One blind man to supper another bad ;
 Which twain, sitting at such meat as they had,
 " Methinketh," (quoth the blind host), " this candle burneth dim." [him.
 " So thinketh me, sir," said the blind guest to " Wife," (said the good man), " with sorrow mend this light." [bright ;
 She put out the candle, which burned very
 And chopped down empty candlesticks two or three. [(quoth he).
 " So lo ! now eat and welcome, neighbour,"

40. "DEBILITY OF SENSES."

" Wife, my hands for feeling are oft very ill ;
 And, as th'one hand mendeth, th'other ap-pireth still." [feeeth, evermore,
 " Ye say sooth," (said she), " th'one hand
 Worse the day present than the day before.
 Th'other hand feeeth, by ointments excellent,
 Better the day before than the day present.
 But how doth your eye-sight? " " Worse and worse," (said he); [thee."
 " For worse this day, than yesterday, I see “ Though you were blind,” (quoth she), “ that should no love break; [speak.”

I would your eyes were out, so you could not “ Take hearing too,” (quoth he), “ thou makest my ears such [too much.

That thou hast made them hear enough, and
 And going may go too. For wherever I am,
 I go not an inch from the devil or his dam.”

“ In faith, if thou didst,” (quoth she), “ yet could I well

Find means to find out a fool by the smell.

And here may we hear and see, how this tale fits, [wits.”

With my good man’s goodly limbs, and good

41. “ A FOOLISH HUSBAND.”

“ Husband, two wits are better than one,
 clerks say, [way :

To debate matters; which seemeth true this
 When we two contend, what’s my wit without thine

To convince thyself thy wit conducteth mine? ”

42. “ A WITTY WIFE.”

“ Jane,” (quoth James), “ to one short demand of mine [thine,

Answer not with a lie from that mouth of
 And take this noble.” Which when she had ta’en : [Jane? ”

“ Is thy husband,” (quoth he), “ a cuckold,
 She stood still, and to this would no word
 spake. [break,

From which dumb dump when he could her not
 He axt his noble again. “ Why,” (quoth she),

“ Made I any lie to thee? ” “ Nay,” (quoth
 he).

“ Then walk, fool ! ” (quoth she), “ this wager
 I win clear,
 And thou of my counsel never the near.”
 “ Gog’s soul ! ” (sware he), and flung away
 amain :
 “ I will never talk with that woman again.
 For, as she in speech can revile a man,
 So can she in silence beguile a man.”

43. “ HANDSOME HANDLING.”

Some wonder to see thy handling of things
 But it is no wonder as the case stands. [neat ;
 The toes of thy feet, in handling of things feat,
 Are as handsome as the fingers of thy hands.

44. “ A SAYING OF PATCH, MY LORD CARDINAL’S FOOL.”

Master Sexten, a person of known wit,
 As he at my Lord Cardinal’s board did sit,
 Greedily wrought at a goblet of wine :
 “ Drink none,” (said my lord), “ for that sore leg of thine.” [provide “ I warrant your grace,” (quoth Sexten), “ I
 For my leg : For I drink on the tother side.”

45. “ CERTAIN FOLLIES.”

|---|------------|
| To cast fair white salt into wise men’s meat, | } a folly. |
| To make them count salt sugar, when they eat : | |
| To bear a man in hand he itcheth in each part | } a folly. |
| When the man feeleth an universal smart : | |

To speak always well, and do always ill,
 And tell men those deeds are done
 of good will : } a folly.

Thy lusty-limbed horse to lead in thy hand,
 When on thy lame limbs thou canst scantly stand : } a folly.

Of kicks for cage work, to build thy house high,
 And cover it with lead to keep thy house dry : } a folly.

46. "OF TWO STUDENTS."

Two scholars young, in the university late
 Kept in thin diet, after scholars' rate,
 Th'one being an eater greedy and great,
 Th'other a weak feeder, said at his meat :
 "Oh this smart, small pittance and hungry Maketh us to study aptly and quiet." [diet
 "Sure," (said the tother), "small meals are induction
 To th'increase of study, for deeper instruction ;
 This dinner shall drive me to study, anon,
 Where I may get more meat when this is gone."

47. "A MERRY WOMAN."

There came, by chance, to a good company
 A lady, a wanton and a merry. [light,
 And though every word of her own showed her Yet no man's words else to her might that recite.

She had all the words ; she babbled so fast
That they, being weary, one said at the last :
“ Madame, ye make my heart light as a kyx,
To see you thus full of your meretrix.”

This trick thus well tricked in the Latin phrase,
Brought to this tricker nother muse nor mase ;
She nought perceiving, was no whit offended ;
Nor her light behaviour no whit amended ;
But still her tongue was clapping like a patten.
“ Well,” said the said man, “ in language of Latin

I never told woman any fault before,
Nor never in Latin will tell them fault more.”

48. “ A LOUSE AND A FLEA.”

A louse and a flea, set in a man’s neck,
Began each other to taunt and to check ;
Disputing at length all extremities
Of their pleasures, or discommodities :
Namely this I heard, and bare away well.
“ If one,” (quoth the louse), “ scrat within an ell

Of thy tail, then forthwith art thou skipping ;
Like Jack of Bedlam, in and out whipping.
Half an hour after thou dar’st nowhere sit,
To abide the biting of one good bit.
And when any man herein shall prove me,
His nails do, (as a writ doth), remove me ;
Which nails, once removed from the man’s
head,

I am straight at feeding, within a hair bread
Where I fed before in my dainty diet.
“ Ye be hardy,” (quoth the flea), “ I deny not ;
But how many lice have abidden by it
When they would have done as fleas do, fly
it? ”

With this the man to his neck his hand
wrought;
The flea skipped away, but the louse he caught.
“Now, now?” (quoth the flea). “Alas!”
(quoth the louse);
“My head is well served to serve for souse
That thus, like a souse head, foresaw not this grief,
Till feeling hath put painful practise in preef.”

49. “OF HIM THAT FORGOT HIS PATER NOSTER
IN LATIN.”

An old, homely man at shrift commanded,
By his curate, his Pater noster to bid,
After long study, he said: “Master vicar!
By Jis! cham ashamed my wit is no quicker.
Ich said it within little more than fortnight;
And now, like a beast, cha forgot it quite.
Fie on age! In youth ich had ever such wit,
That whatsoever ich had to do, yet
At shrift chad my Pater noster evermore,
When ich said it not twice in the year before.”

50. “OF HIM THAT COULD NOT LEARN HIS PATER NOSTER IN ENGLISH.”

A man of the country, shriven in Lent late,
(According to th'injunction), his curate
Bade him the Pater noster in English say.
“Ich can it not, master,” (quoth he), “by my fay!” [the rest miss.”
“Say a piece of it,” (quoth he), “though ye “Ich cannot one word of it,” (quoth he), “by Jis!
And yet, master vicar, by God's sacrament!
Cha jumbled about it ever since last Lent;
And some of it ich had in the cleansing week;

But now, when ich should say it, all is to seek." [far decayed,
"Well," (quoth the priest), "if your wit be so Say the Pater noster ye have always said."
"Nay, by the Mass!" (sware he), "if you will have all told,
Cha so grated on the new, cha forgot th'old."

51. "OF THE FIST AND THE HEART."

One cursed another's heart for a blow in a fume:
"Curse not his heart," (quoth one by), "curse his fist."
"His heart," (quoth he), "to mine ear did not presume;
But his heart to mine ear did his fist assist."
Since each limb must frame in feat, as the heart list,
When the heart willeth any limb in any fault
to fall,
No man blame any man, to blame the heart
for all.

52. "OF THIS WORD, Enough."

A merry man by his master at meat set:
"Methinketh," (quoth the master), "thou canst no drink get." [he.
"Here is enough, though there be none," said
"Then art thou not dry?" "Yes, so-mote I
thee,
And fain would drink." "How be thy words true then?"
"Thus: This word enough two ways we may scan;
Th'one much enough, th'other little enough;
And here is little enough." His master lough,

Calling in his wife to discant upon this.

“How sayest thou, wife? our man in this case
is

Dry, and would drink, and drink nothing nigh
him;

And yet proveth he drink enough by him.”

“Since he,” (quoth she), “proveth drink enough in store,

More than enough were waste: he getteth
no more.”

53. “OF TABLE-PLAY.”

“Wife, I will no more play at tables with thee;
When we come to bearing, thou beguilest me
In bearing of thy men; while thou hast any,
Each other cast thou bearest a man too many.”

54. “THE COCK AND THE HEN.”

A cock and his hen perching in the night,
The cock at his hour crowed loud as he might;
The hen, heavy of sleep, prayed the cock that
he

Would leave off his crowing; but it would not be.

The hen saw the cock stick to his tackling:
In her treble voice she fell so to cackling
That the cock prayed her, her cackling to cease,

And he of his crowing would hold his peace.

“Nay, churl,” (quoth she), “be sure that will I not;

And for thy learning henceforth mark this knot:

Whenever thou wouldest seem to overcrow me,
Then will I surely overcackle thee.”

55. "CHEAPENING OF A FACE OF FUR."

Into a skinner's shop, while his wife there
wrought,
In haste ran a gentleman, there to espy
A fair face of fur which he would have bought.
"What fur," (quoth he), "would your mastership buy?" [nigh?"
"Harlots' wombs," (quoth he), "know ye any "Harlots' wombs," (forsooth!), "I have none," (quoth she);
But ye shall have knaves' shanks, meet as can be."

56. "BUYING OF SHOES."

When I at the shoemaker's shall shoes assay,
If they be too little, they will stretch, (saith he); [way.
If they be too much, they will shrink straight-Too long, too short, how narrow or wide they
be,
All is one matter as he shapeth them to me.
For may he once get his shoes on my feet,
Without last or lingel his words make them meet.

57. "A SUSPICION CLEARED."

One to his friend, kindly Gave monition friendly,
That ill was reported
By one that resorted
To him: whom, (as they thought),
Enticed him to nought.
He thanked him, and said,
"My friend, be not afraid.
The hearing of that fool

Setteth me no whit to school.
I hear him when he list;
And follow him when me list."

58. "OF SPITE."

If there be any, as I hope there be none,
That would lese both his eyes to lese his foe
one,
Then fear I there be many, as the world go'th,
That would lese one eye to lese their foes both.

59. "OF THE LETTER 'H.'"

"H" is worst among letters in the cross row;
For if thou find him other in thine elbow,
In thine arm, or leg—in any degree—
In thy head, or teeth, in thy toe or knee,
Into what place soever "H" may pike him,
Wherever thou find ache, thou shalt not like
him.

60. "ILL FLYING OF IDLENESS."

If flight from idleness may be deemed
Main means to virtue being fled warely:
How mayest thou then thereby be esteemed?
Thou fleest that vice not meanly nor barely,
But mainly; scrupulously, and so charely,
That in thee, ere idleness shall be spied,
Thou wilt yet rather be ill occupied.

61. "A TONGUE AND A CLOCK."

"Thy tongue should be a clock, wife, had I
God's power,
For then would it strike but once in one hour."
"Yet it might run," (quoeth she), "and strike
ere the time;

And should that clock have, (as my tongue hath), a chime,
I, being sexton, might set the clock forth soon
To strike and chime twelve two hours before noon."

62. "A HEARER OF A SERMON."

"What bringeth thou from the sermon, Jack?
declare that!"
"Forsooth, master!" (quoth he), "your cloak and your hat."
"I can thee good thank, Jack, for thou art
yet sped
Of somewhat in thy hand, though nought in thy head."

63. "A MAN WITHOUT WIT, STRENGTH, AND CUNNING."

Thou art a wight to wonder at:
Thy head for wit showeth thee a wat;
Thy body for strength showeth thee a gnat;
Thy voice for tune showeth thee a cat—
Do, say, or sing, in any what,
Thou art a minion marmsat.

64. "HOW TO WISH."

"How may I have thee, Gill, when I wish for
thee?"
"Wish not for me, Jack, but when thou mayest have me."
This is a lesson Gill, proper and pleasant;
For, by these words, this winning Jack may avaunt. [before,
Though Jack be no nearer Gill than Jack was Yet Jack is nearer his wit, by Jis! by ten score.

65. "A DOUBTFUL DEMAND OF CHOICE."

"If thou must choose, Hodge, touching cuckoldry, [commonly
 Which wouldst thou choose? to know thyself
 To be taken for one, and take thyself none;
 Or, to be taken for none, and take thyself
 one? "

"The best or worst of these twain, (Hugh), tell me which :

Claw where it doth smart, or tickle where it doth itch? " [brother."

"I know small difference herein, Hodge
 "And I, (Hugh), know as little in the tother."

66. "AN OLD WIDOWER AND A YOUNG MAID."

A widower rich, with riveled face old,
 Wooing a fair young woman, his mind he told Boasting what he had, as woers do, that can.
 Wherein he boasted of a goodly young man,
 A son of his own, whom God had him sent,
 Of conditions and qualities excellent.

In this hot wooing this old man's behaviour,
 So far forth, had won this young woman's favour [done,

That, in short tale, when his long tale was She prayed him to go home and send her his son.

67. "GAPING OYSTERS."

"On whom gape thine oysters so wide, oyster-
 wife? " [life! "

"Mine oysters gape on you, sir, God save your "Wherefore gape they? " "Sir, they gape for promotion; [tion."

They hope, (to promote them), you have devo-

“Nay,” (quoth he), “the peril were pernicious
To promote oysters that be ambitious.”

68. “THE JUDGE AND THE JUGGLER.”

To a justice, a juggler did complain
Of one that dispraised his liger de maine.
“What’s thy name?” (said the justice).
“Dawson,” said he. [pardie !”
“Is thy father alive?” “Nay, dead sir, “Then thou shalt no more be Daw’s son, a clear case, [place.”
Thou art Daw thyself now, in thy father’s

69. “OF LOOKING.”

To save mine head when I upward cast mine
eye,
And look not to my feet, to the ground fall I.
When I look downward to my feet, to take heed, [bleed.
A tile fallen from a house maketh my head
And look I right forth, between my feet and
head,
Broken head, breakneck falls, of both I am
sped.
I think it as good, by ought I can devise,
To be stark staring blind, as thus to have eyes.

70. “OF CONSTANCY.”

Some say thou art inconstant, but I say nay—
What though thy wit be wavering every way?
Whose wit, like the wind, hath been wavering
ever,
And in unsteady wavering doth persevere.
A constant man I affirm him constantly,
For he is constant in inconstancy.

71. "OF A FACE AND A WIT."

In thy youth and age these properties are sprung : [young.

In youth thy face was old : in age thy wit is

72. "OF BLOWING."

What wind can there blow that doth not some man please?

A fart in the blowing doth the blower ease.

73. "TO THE FLATTERER."

Thy flattering of me, this followeth thereupon :
Other thou art a fool, or else I am one.

Where flattery appeareth, at least by wise
men's school,

The flatterer, or the flattered, is a fool.

74. "OF CONTENTATION."

Is not the poor man rich that is contented?

Yes : rich by his contentation consented.

Is not the rich man poor that is not content?

Yes : poor by lack of contentation here meant.

Then riches and poverty in men's minds lie?

Yea : but we may far sooner learn, (think I),

To think ourselves rich having no riches nigh,

Than make ourselves rich having much riches
by.

75. "OF WAITING."

I would see a man wait to his master's mind

As the weathercock waiteth on the wind ;

Blow it here or there, blow it low or high,

The weathercock's beak is still in the wind's
eye.

76. "OF FOREKNOWLEDGE."

Foreknowledge of things that must fall
 To man, I think it were not best.
 The foreknown ill to man would call
 Forefelt grief of foreknown unrest.
 By foreknown good, to man were ceast
 Sweet sudden joy, which evermore
 Cometh when joys come unknown before.

THE SAME IMPUGNED WITHOUT CHANGE OF WORDS, EXCEPT FOUR OR FIVE.

Foreknowledge of things that must fall
 To man, I think it were the best.
 The foreknown ill to man would call
 Digestion of foreknown unrest.
 By foreknown good, to man were ceast
 Distemperate joy, which evermore
 Cometh when joys come unknown before.

77. "MISTAKING AN ERRAND."

Feasting a friend, the feaster, (whose man did wait), [conceit.
 Bade him at the last course fetch the clouted
 "What bringest thou here, knave?" (quoth he), "what hast you doon?"
 "I have," (quoth his man), "brought here your clouted shoon."
 "Clouted shoon, carterly knave! what dost
 thou dream?
 Eat thou the clouted shoon, fetch us the clouted cream."

78. "OF HOLDING AN INN."

Being holden in Newgate, thou canst not be
 An innholder, for thine inn holdeth thee.

79. "A WIFE'S DEFENCE OF HER BEETLE BROW."

"Were I to wed again, wife, I make a vow
I would not wed a wife with a beetle brow."
"And I," (quoth she), "rather would a husband wed
With a beetle brow, than with a beetle head."

80. "THE SHREWD WIFE'S TONGUE."

"A dog, dame, ruleth in degree
Above a devil with thee;
At least sour wind a dog letteth flee,
Thy nose will stopped be;
But no devil's word may make decree
To stop thy tongue I see."
"Since thou appearest to be," (quoth she),
"A dogged devil to me,
To tame thy devilish property
My tongue shall still be free."

81. "A FOOL'S TONGUE."

Upon a fool's provocation
A wise man will not talk;
But every light instigation
May make a fool's tongue walk.

82. "OF GLASS AND LATTICE."

Where glaziers and lattice-makers work in sight,
This one difference in their two feats we find:
Glass keepeth out the wind and letteth in the light; [wind.
Lattice keepeth out the light and letteth in the
Of both sorts I wish when I shall wish any,
Lattice-makers few, and glaziers many.

83. "TWO WISHERS FOR TWO MANNER OF MOUTHS."

"I wish thou hadst a little narrow mouth,
wife!

Little and little to drop out words in strife."

"And I wish you, sir, a wide mouth for the
nonce,

To speak all that ever you shall speak at once."

84. "OF DISPRAISE."

All men must be blind and deaf ere thou praise
win;

For no man seeth or heareth ought to praise thee in.

85. "A DISCHARGE FROM HYPOCRISY."

Thou art no bird of hypocrisy brood,

For thou fleest all things that might show thee
good.

87. "OF THE FOOL AND THE GENTLEMAN'S NOSE."

One gentleman having another at meat,
That guest having a nose deformed, foul and great,

[by,
The fool of that house, at this time standing Fell thus in hand with that nose suddenly.

"Nose autem, a great nose as ever I saw!"

His master was wroth, and cried, "Hence with that daw!" [fool,

One said: "Talk no more of great noses, ye Lest ye be talked withal in the whipping school." [speak,

The fool, warned of great noses no more to

To mend that fault this way these words did break.

“ Said I, this is a foul, great spittle nose?
By'r lady ! I lied, it is a fair little nose.”

“ Will not that fool be had hence? ” (quoth the master).

“ Thou wilt, fool ! ” (quoth one), be walked with a waster,

If thou speak of any nose, great or small.”

The fool at third warning, minding to mend
all,

Stepped to the board again, crying as he goes :

“ Before God and man ! that man hath no nose.”

The fool was feaked for this ; but what of that ?

The great fault, here to note, he amended nat ;

Which is this : not the wise, but the fool, ye
see,

In cloaking of one fault maketh two or three.

87. “ A FOOL TAKEN FOR WISE.”

Wisdom and folly in thee, (as men scan),

Is as it were a thing by itself sool :

Among fools thou art taken a wise man ;

And, among wise men, thou art known a fool.

88. “ THINGS TO FORBEAR.”

Displeasures that fume and fret,

Good to forgive and forget.

All oaths, what, when, and where,

Better forbear than forswear.

Other men's livings all,

As good forsteal as forstall.

Not at bottom, but at brink,

Better foresee than forthink.

89. "MEDDLERS."

To feed of any fruit at any feast,
Of all kinds of meddlers, meddle with the least.
Meddle not with great meddlers; for, no question, [gestion.
Meddling with great meddlers maketh ill di-

90. "OF DWELLING."

Between Ludgate and Newgate thou canst dwell never;
For in Ludgate or Newgate thou must dwell
ever.

91. "OF THE MILNER AND THE SEXTON."

The milner tolleth corn, the sexton tolleth the bell;
In which tolling, tollers thrive not alike well.
Th'one tolleth with the clapper, th'other in the hopper; [copper.
Th'one savour'th of silver, th'other soundeth of

92. "OF BOOKS AND CHEESE."

No two things in all things can seem only one;
Because two things so must be one thing
alone. [cheese,
Howbeit, reading of books and eating of No two things, for some things, more like one than these.
The talent of one cheese in mouths of ten men Hath ten different tastes in judgment—most times when He saith "'tis too salt"; he saith "'tis too fresh"; [nesh."
He saith "'tis too hard"; he saith "'tis too
"It is too strong of the rennet," saith he;

"It is," saith he, "not strong enough for me."

"It is," saith another, "well as can be."

No two of any ten in one can agree; [books.
And, as they judge of cheese, so judge they of Onlookers on which, who that narrowly looks,
May look for this: Saith he, "that book is too long."

["ye say wrong,
"Tis too short," saith he. "Nay," saith he,
'Tis of meet length; and, so fine phrase, or fair style,

The like that book was not made a good while;
And, in touching the truth, invincibly wrought."

[nought."
"Tis all lies," saith another, "the book is
No book, no cheese, be it good, be it bad,
But praise and dispraise it hath, and hath had.

93. "OF HEADS."

Some heads have taken: two heads better than
one;

But ten heads, without wit, I ween as good
none.

94. "THE WOODCOCK AND THE DAW."

A woodcock and a daw sat upon a plain,
Both showed comparison each other to disdain.

"Back!" (quoth the woodcock). "Straw for thee!" (quoth the daw); [awe?"

"Shall woodcocks keep daws now in dreadful
"None awe," (quoth the woodcock), "but in behaviour; [favour!"

Ye ought to reverence woodcocks, by your
"For what cause?" (quoth the daw), "for your long bills?"

“Nay,” (quoth the woodcock), “but lords will, by their wills,
Rather have one woodcock than a thousand
daws;

Woodcocks are meat, daws are carron—weigh this clause.” [agree;

“Indeed, sir,” (said the daw), “I must needs
Lords love to eat you, and not to eat me—
Cause of daws’ courtesies!—so, if woodcocks
thus gather,

Ye shall have courtesy; for this, I would rather
Be a daw, and to woodcock courtesy make,
Than be a woodcock, and of daws courtesy
take.

I were double a daw, had I not liever
Birders should, (in their birding endeavour),
Take up gins and let me go when they geat me,
Than set gins to get me, for lords to eat me.”

95. “OF FEW WORDS.”

Few words show men wise, wise men do devise;

Which is ofttime true, and oft otherwise.
In some case silence may as stiffly stand
With folly, as with wisdom, wisely scanned.

96. “WOTTING AND WEENING.”

Wotting and weening—were those two things
one, [none!
Who could wot himself wise like thee? I ween

“OTHERWISE.”

“I would give the best fardle in my pack
To be as wise as thou weenest thou art, Jack.”

“And to be as wise as I wot thou art—
What would I give, trowest thou? what? not a fart!”

97. "A MUCH LIKE MATTER."

"Tom, thou thinkest thyself wise." "Yea, what of that, Hugh?

Thou thinkest thyself wiser than I?" "Yea,
Tom, true."

"It seemeth," (said a third man), "by this device,

No mastery for fools to ween themselves wise."

98. "WISDOM AND FOLLY."

Thy wisdom and folly both, nay no one
Can be contained in volumes great nor small.
Thy wisdom being none, occupieth place none;
Thy folly being all, occupieth place all.

99. "OF LACK."

One lack of late in thee saw we,
Which lacketh not now; for this we see:
Thou hast lacked lack of honesty;
But now that lack lacketh not in thee.

100. "THE WEATHERCOCK, THE REED, AND THE WIND."

The weathercock and the reed, comparing late
Their service done to the wind, fell at debate.

"The wind," (quoth the weathercock),
"windeth nowhere; [there."

But straight, bolt upright, I stand waiting "Forsooth!" (said the reed), "and where the wind is found,

At every blast I bow down to the ground."

"Surely," (said the wind), "the waiting of
the tone,

And curtesy of the tother I take both one?

And none of both good ; but rather ill to me :
For, when I oft in corners secret would be,
Other the crooked curtsey of the reed,
Or weathercock's waiting, bewrayeth me with speed.

As lief is to me, in such serving pretence,
Single negligence as double diligence.”
The weathercock and the reed, being both blank, [thank.”
Each told himself : “ much service have small

FINIS.

EPIGRAMS UPON PROVERBS

I. "OF AMENDMENT."

If every man mend one, all shall be mended:
This mean to amendment is now intended.
For though no man look to mend himself,
brother; [other.
Yet each man looketh to control and mend

2. "WAGGING OF BEARDS."

It is merry in hall when beards wag all:
"Husband, for this, these words to mind I call:
This is meant by men, in their merry eating;
Not to wag their beards in brawling and threatening." [pins
"Wife, the meaning hereof differeth not two Between wagging of men's beards and women's chins."

3. "OF HASTE."

The hasty man wanteth never woe:
In hasty women not ever so.
With suffering husbands hasty wives
Have oft, we see, full merry lives.

4. "BREAKING OF SQUARE."

An inch breaketh no square: which, since thou hast heard tell,
Thou dost assay how to break square by an ell.

“ OTHERWISE.”

*An inch breaketh no square: thou breakest
none, though it do;
Thou rather bringest square than breakest square between two.*

5. “ LOOKING AND LEAPING.”

*Look ere thou leap: nay, thou canst in no wise brook [look.
To look ere thou leap, for thou leapest ere thou*

6. “ WEDDING AND HANGING.”

*“ Wedding and hanging are destiny, I see; Wedding or hanging, which is best, sir? ”
(quoth she).*

“ Forsooth! good wife, hanging I think best,” (quoth he). [me.”

*“ So help me God, good husband! so thinketh

7. “ OF DELAY.”

*He that will not when he may,
When he would he shall have nay:
But to that nay, nay I say:
If of my wife I delay
To take shrewd words, yet that stay
Stayeth them not from me next day.*

8. “ OF WITS.”

*So many heads, so many wits: nay, nay!
We see many heads and no wits, some day.*

9. “ NO LACK IN LOVE.”

*In love is no lack: true, I dare be borrow;
In love is never lack of joy or sorrow.*

“ OTHERWISE. ”

In love is no lack: no, in no wooing day;
But after wedding day, let's hear what ye say.

10. “ OF HOMELY HOME. ”

Home is homely: yea, and too homely sometime
Where wives' footstools to their husbands' heads climb.

11. “ GIVING AND TAKING. ”

Better give than take: all say, but so think none. [one.
All think better take twenty pounds than give

12. “ JACK AND GILL. ”

All shall be well, Jack shall have Gill:
Nay, nay! Gill is wedded to Will.

13. “ OF THE END OF A WIT. ”

Thou art at thy wits' end: which I wonder in
To see a wit at end before it begin.

14. “ OF BOUGHT WIT. ”

Wit is never good till it be bought:
Thy wit is dear bought, and yet stark nought.

“ OTHERWISE. ”

“ Wit is never good till it be bought, Will. ” “ Jack, to buy or sell that ware fools can no skill. ”

15. “ OF HASTE AND WASTE. ”

Haste maketh waste: which, perceived by sloth, [truth!
Sloth will make no haste, he sweareth by his

16. "MAKING OF MALT."

*Soft fire maketh sweet malt: as malt-makers
tell.*

Then, to make sweet malt fire is too rash in hell;

Whereby, since in hell no good ale is to sell,
Dry drunken souls cannot like in hell to dwell.

17. "OF AN ACHING EYE."

Better eye out, than alway ache:

In rage of ache, true as I spake:

But in mean ache, meanly to moan,

Better an aching eye than none.

18. "WHAT THING BEGGARS CHOOSE."

*Beggars should be no choosers: but yet they
will;*

Who can bring a beggar from choice to beg still?

19. "OF ROBBING."

Rob Peter and pay Paul: thou sayest I do;

But thou robbest and poulst Peter and Paul too.

20. "OF NEED AND LAW."

Need hath no law: in some case, in very deed, Need hath no law; and yet of law we have need.

21. "OF BEGINNING AND ENDING."

Of a hard beginning cometh a good ending:

Truth, on this term, is not alway depending;

Some hardly begin by the feet to sit fast,

That end with hard hanging by the necks at last.

22. "OF GRACE."

*In space cometh grace: I grant grace may come in space;
But in rule, by thy rule, never look for grace.*

23. "OF FORE PROVISION."

*Whoso that knew what would be dear,
Should need be merchant but one year:
But thou hast known years, two or three,
That good conditions would, in thee,
Both dear and daintily be grown;
And yet for all this, thus foreknown
To warn thee of great fore provision,
Thou hast not now one good condition.*

24. "OF SAYING AND DOING."

*Saying and doing, are two things, we say:
But thy sayings and doings every way
Join, jump in one; thy words and deeds proceed,
But thou art good, nother in word nor deed.*

25. "OF TREADING ON A WORM."

*Tread a worm on the tail, and it turneth again:
But thou treadest on the worm's head that to restrain.*

26. "OF EASE IN AN INN."

*Thou takest thine ease in thine Inn, so nigh
thee
That no man in his Inn can take ease by thee.*

"OTHERWISE."

Thou takest thine ease in thine Inn: but I see Thine Inn taketh nother ease nor profit by thee.

27. "HOW TO PROVE A FRIEND."

Prove thy friend ere thou need: that canst thou no way;

For without need of thy friend thou art no day.

28. "UNWISE WEDDING."

*Who weddeth ere he be wise shall die ere he
thrive:*

Then shalt not thou be wedded and rich alive.

29. "SOMETHING AND NOTHING."

Something is better than nothing:

In something I grant this othing;

In some I deny; for I see

As good have nothing as have thee.

30. "THE SLEEPING DOG."

It is ill waking of a sleeping dog:

So think many, namely, the wroting hog.

31. "OF HAP."

It happeth in an hour that happeth not in seven year.

"That happeth this hour, wife, for thou makest me good cheer."

32. "OF SIGHT AND MIND."

Out of sight out of mind: this may run right;

For all be not in mind that be in sight.

33. "OF MIRTH WITH WISDOM."

'Tis good to be merry and wise:

How shall fools follow that advice?

34. "OF HOLDING OF A NOSE."

Thou canst hold my nose to the grindstone :
So cannot I thine for thou hast none.

35. "AN EYE-SORE."

It is but an eye-sore : but an eye-sore, fie !
That eye-sore is as ill as any sore eye.

36. "OF RECKONING."

Reckoning without thine host thou must reckon twice :
May not my hosts disappoint that device ?

37. "SETTING UP A CANDLE."

To set up a candle before the devil :
Dim-sighted devils, I deem, deem it not evil.

38. "OF CLOUDS AND WEATHER."

After clouds black, we shall have weather clear : [black ;
And after weather clear we shall have clouds
Now hot, now cold, now fair, now foul appear ;
As weather cleareth, or cloudeth, so must men
take.

39. "OF MAKING AND MARRING."

Make or mar I will, so sayest thou ever ;
But thou dost ever mar, thou makest never.

40. "OF BIRDS AND BIRDERS."

Better one bird in hand, than ten in the wood :
Better for birders, but for birds not so good.

41. "OF SORROWS."

Make not two sorrows of one, if thou can ;
Lest making of two sorrows mar one man.

42. "OF FEEDING AND TEACHING."

*Thou art better fed than taught, I undertake :
And yet art thou skin and bone, lean as a rake.*

43. "OF SUFFERANCE."

Of sufferance cometh ease : "How shall I know that, wife? "

*"I have suffered thee, without ease, all my
life."*

44. "OF HIM THAT SET HIS HAND ON HIS MONEY."

*"Thy hand is on thy halfpenny: and must John; [on."
For thou hast no more coin to set thy hand*

45. "OF A HORSE CURRYING."

*A short horse is soon curried: that is, to wit,
When short horse and short curriers do meet.*

46. "OF SHAME."

*Shame take him that shame thinketh: for thou dost think none; [on.
Thou art too far past shame, shame to think*

47. "A LORD'S HEART AND A BEGGAR'S PURSE."

*There is nothing in this world that agreeth
worse*

*Than doth a lord's heart and a beggar's purse:
And yet, as ill as those two do agree,
Thou canst not bring them asunder to be.*

48. "OF FORGETTING."

The parish priest forgetteth he was parish clerk:

And the parson forgetteth he was parish priest;

But priest, clerk, and no clerk, all who will mark,
To forget what we were shall see us enticed.

49. "OF THE HEART AND THE HEEL."

Shall I set at my heart that thou settest at thy heel? [weel.

Nay, a heart in a heel'd hose can never do

"OTHERWISE."

Shall I set at my heart that thou settest at thy heel? [not weel.

Nay, however kibed heels do, kibed hearts do

50. "PRAISE OF A MAN ABOVE A HORSE."

*A man may well lead a horse to the water
But he cannot make him drink,* without he list.
I praise thee above the horse, in this matter;
For I, leading thee to drink, thou hast not missed

Alway to be ready, without resistance,
Both to drink, and be drunk, ere thou were led thence.

51. "OF WEEPING."

Better children weep than old men, say wise men: [and then.

But old men weep when children laugh, now

52. "OF TWO FALSE KNAVES."

Two false knaves need no broker: but it is need
That brokers break false knaves' fellowship with speed.

53. "A HEART IN A HOSE."

Thy heart is in thy hose: which jail is not strong:

Thy hose are too full of holes to keep it long.

54. "OF CREEPING AND GOING."

Children must learn to creep ere they can go :
In the spittle old knaves learn to do so.

55. "OF FLOATING AND FLEETING."

Thou art afloat, thou weenest, being in the fleet :
But floating and fleeting agree not there meet.

56. "A MAN AT AN EBB."

Thou art at an ebb in Newgate : thou hast wrong ;
But thou shalt be afloat at Tyburn ere long.

57. "SIGHT IN A MILLSTONE."

Thou seest far in a millstone : thank God, therefore !
Thou seest in a millstone ; in nothing more.

58. "OF THROWING."

Throw no gift again at the giver's head :
Namely, no gift of thy wife given in check ;
If thou do, the rebound may be so red
That the red blood may run down in thy neck.

59. "OF STORE."

Store is no sore : yes, store may be a sore ;
I think it a sore of sores to have store.

60. "OF ONE IN PRISON."

"Thou art in by the week." "Nay, sir, I am here,
Not in by the week, I am in by the year."

61. "SAINTS AND DEVILS."

Young saint, old devil: there's mo of woman-kind [find.
Than young devils, old saints in mankind, as I

62. "OF BOTCHING."

God is no botcher: but, when God wrought you two,
God wrought as like a botcher as God might do.

63. "OF A YEAR'S FAIR."

The fair lasteth all the year: "but wife, I tell thee,
In this year's fair, for fair, I cannot sell thee."
"I have worse luck," (quoth she), and began to scowl:
"I cannot sell thee there for fair nor for foul."

64. "OF A CAP AND A HEAD."

Thy cap is better at ease than thy head:
Between which twain, might I at wish be sped
To choose one of the twain, which I would first crave—Thy whole cap before thy sick head I would have.

"OTHERWISE."

My cap is better at ease than my head:
Thy cap is better than thy head, 'tis said.

65. "A THIEF THAT HATH NO FELLOW."

Ask my fellow whether I be a thief:
No way, can that way of thy theft make preef;
Thou hast no fellow in theft to catch thee;
For there is no thief, (in theft), can match thee.

66. "FALSE MEASURES."

Thou fearest false measures: which are things to fear sore;

But I fear false measures as much and more.

67. "OF CLEAN SWEEPING."

New broom sweepeth clean, which is thus understand—

New broom sweepeth clean in the clean sweeper's hand.

68. "TURNING OF TIPPETS."

*He hath turned his tippet—that turn showeth
plain*

Our tippets have been turned, and turned again.

"OTHERWISE."

He hath turned his tippet, dyed it, and dressed it [it.

Upon the right side and fair, and plain pressed

"OTHERWISE."

He hath turned his tippet, and pressed it so close,

That for a turned tippet it hath a fair gloss.

"OTHERWISE."

He hath turned his tippet: Lord! how he provides [both sides.

Tippets turned, dyed, shorn, and worn bare on

"OTHERWISE."

*He hath turned his tippet twice in my sight:
First on the wrong side, and last on the right.*

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet: an honest turning
To turn his tippet, and turn round for burning.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet, shorn against the wool full,
And more against his will than against the wool.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet: that have we turned all; [as a ball.
Some half turn, some whole turn, turned round

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet; yea, for a while:
But might he turn again, Lord! how he would smile.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet; yet mo turns ye mock:
But who doth wear his tippet a weathercock?

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet: now for a novelty;
And, for a novelty, would turn straight again
he.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He turneth his tippet, or his tippet turneth him, [Saint Sim!
But which turneth which, I see not, by sweet

“ OTHERWISE.”

He hath turned his tippet,
For simony a sippet.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He turneth his tippet: if that turning turn him
Into the pulpit, that turning is turned trim.

69. “ OF THEFT AND RECEIPT.”

Where are no receivers, there are no thieves:
Where nought is to receive, thieves bring no grieves.

70. “ OF WORK AND PLAY.”

As good to play for nought, as to work for nought: [for ought.
But thou wilt play for nought, and not work

71. “ OF A PAINTED SHEATH.”

Thou makest much of thy painted sheath: and wilt do,
It having not one good knife longing thereto.

72. “ THE HARE AND THE HOUND.”

Hold with the hare and run with the hound:
run there
As wight as the hound, and as wise as the hare.

73. “ OF BEGGARS SINGING.”

Beggars sing before thieves: but what of that?
When beggars sing so, thieves see nought to laugh at.

74. “ OF TWO FACES.”

Thou bearest two faces in one hood:
Thou hast one ill face, both be not good.

75. "OF BEGGING."

*Thou beggest at wrong door, and so hast begged long : [wrong.
Thy getting, by begging, showeth every door*

76. "OF NOTHING."

*Nothing hath no savour: which savourless show [we know.
Showeth nothing better than something that*

"OTHERWISE."

*Nothing hath no savour: as ill is this othing—
Ill savoured something as unsavoured nothing.*

77. "OF VENTURING."

*Nought venture, nought have: and venturing of much
May have a little, venturing is now such.*

78. "OF SHALL BE AND SHALL NOT BE."

That shall be, shall be: but all that should be Shall not be, nor hath been, as far as I see.

79. "THE BLACK OX."

*The black ox never trod on thy foot:
But the dun ass hath trod on both thy feet.
Which ass, and thou, may seem sprung of one
root;
For the ass's pace, and thy pace, are meet.*

80. "OF BRIDLING."

*"I will bridle thee with rough bit, wife."
Quoth she:
"If thou wilt bridle me, I will snaffle thee."*

81. "MENDING AND 'PAIRING."

I will mend this house, and 'pair another:
Yea, but when wilt thou mend thyself, brother?

82. "OF RUNNING WITHOUT TURNING."

He runneth far that never turneth again: nay, nay! [far way.
Though the snail never turn he runneth no

83. "BUYING A PIG."

I will never buy the pig in the poke:
There's many a foul pig in a fair cloak.

84. "HUNGRY FLIES."

Hungry flies bite sore: which shall bite us
ever;
For without hungry flies we shall be never.

85. "OF LOVING A DOG."

Love me, love my dog: by love to agree
I love thy dog as well as I love thee.

86. "OF PRECIOUS STONES."

"Folly to cast precious stones before hogs, Hugh,"
"Hodge, except they be precious hogs, thou sayest true."

"OTHERWISE."

Cast precious stones before hogs: cast stones to hogs? nay!
But precious stones have been given to hogs,
some say.

87. "OF ILL AND GOOD WIND."

It is an ill wind that bloweth no man to good:
And like good wind that bloweth no man ill.
But, fearing ill winds, old men most times stood
Out of all extreme winds under the hill.

88. "OF SOOTH BOORD."

Sooth boord is no boord: sooth boord soundeth
ill
In false fair flattering boord, boord as ye will.

89. "OF TALES TOLD IN THE EAR."

In at the tone ear and out at the tother:
If tales told thee go in and out so, brother,
Then the travel of those tales show much wonder:
Thy two ears be two hundred mile asunder.

90. "OF GOING."

The further we go the further behind:
Meet footmen to go with crabs, in my mind.

"OTHERWISE."

The further I go the further behind:
Stand still, fool! till thou better footing find.

91. "OF NEED."

Need maketh th'old wife trot: is she a trotter
now? [you?
Gallop, young wives! shall th'old trot out-trot

92. "TAKING HEART OF GRASS."

"Thou takest heart of grass, wife, not heart
of grace."
[in one place."
"Come grass, come grace, sir, we graze both

93. "OF NOTHING AND ALL THING."

Where nothing is, a little thing doth ease:
Where all thing is, nothing can fully please.

94. "COVETING AND LEESING."

All covet, all lose: this cometh oft in ure.
But nought have, nought lose: this is ever
sure.

95. "OF THE MARCH HARE."

As mad as a March hare: where madness compare, [hares?
Are not Midsummer hares as mad as March

96. "HOW GOD WILL NOT DO FOR US."

Every man for himself, and God for us all:
God will not seal that writing, write it who shall?

97. "OF HARPING ON A STRING."

Harp no more on that string, for it standeth too high;
And soundeth as basely as a halter, well nigh.

98. "A LOSS BY THE DEVIL'S DEATH."

The devil is dead: then hast thou lost a friend;
In all thy doings the devil was at tone end.

"OTHERWISE."

The devil is dead: one devil is dead, but we see Mo devils left alive, as ill or worse than he.

"OTHERWISE."

The devil is dead: who shall inherit his land?
Enough: the devil hath left children a thousand.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The devil is dead: who shall his land rightly
win?

Thou! for thou, by condition, art next of kin.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The devil is dead: nay, the devil is in a sown;
But the devil reviveth again, chil lay my gown.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The devil is dead: what helpeth the death of the devil?

The devil hath heirs as ill as he, and more evil.

99. “ OF A SHEEP’S EYE.”

He cast a sheep’s eye at her: a strange eye spread

To see a sheep’s eye look out of a calf’s head.

100. “ OF RULE.”

Better rule than be ruled: wife! thy endeavour
Hath showed thee to be ruled by that rule ever.

101. “ OF BLIND BAYARD.”

Who so bold as blind Bayard? no beast, of truth; [showeth

Whereof my bold, blind Bayard, perfect proof
Both of his boldness, and for his bold blindness.

By late occasion, in a cause of kindness,
A company of us rode in certain ground;
Where we wellnigh an impassable slough found.

Their horses, ere they entered, began to stay;
 Every one horse giving another the way—
 Of good manner, as it were—and more and more

Each horse gave back to set his better before, Save this rude rusty, bold, blind Bayard of mine, [fine,

As rashly, as rudely, chopped forth; and in Without any curtsey, ere any man bids,
 Blindly and boldly, he leapt into the mids.

And look how boldly, the mids he leapt in till;
 Even, with like boldness, in the mids he lay still; [there,

And trow you the jade, at the best men's words
 Would stir one joint? nay, not the breadth of one hair. [ance

But stared on them, with as bold a counten-
 As that whole had been his by inheritance;
 He having no more to do there than had I.
 But straight there cometh a cartwear of good horse by;

By force whereof, and help of all that rout,
 Blind Bayard and I were drawn together out.
 Which blind boldness, by this admonition,
 Except he amend in some meet condition,
 Rather than ride so, I will afoot take pain
 Blind bold Bayard shall not thus bear me again.

102. "OF THE SPINSTER'S THRIFT."

Thus rideth the rock: if the rock be riding,
 The spinster's thrift is set a-foot sliding.

103. "OF DEAFNESS."

Who is so deaf as he that will not hear?
 Not the devil till will draw his hearing near.

104. "OF A GOOD HORSE."

It is a good horse that never stumbleth:
Then have I a good horse, for my horse
tumbleth, [never.
And falleth down right; my horse stumbleth
So well am I horsed, and have been horsed
ever,
And so loth to lend him, to field or town's end,
That, as soon shall my foe ride him as my friend.

105. "OF WAYS TO THE WOOD."

There be no ways to the wood than one:
Of all good ways to wood, thou goest none.

106. "OF ONE THAT MAY SOON AMEND."

He may soon amend, for he cannot appair:
A good evidence to prove him the devil's heir.

107. "AN ILL HEARER."

I cannot hear on that side: no, truth to tell,
Of any side thou couldst never yet hear well.

108. "OF A GOOD FACE."

"I did set a good face on the matter, Joan."
"Thou didst borrow it then, Bess, for thou hast none."

109. "A SHARP THORN."

It pricketh betimes that shall be a sharp thorn:
"I ween thou prickest, wife! ere time thou were born."

110. "COMING AND GOING."

As fast as one goeth another cometh in ure :
 Two buckets in a well come and go so, sure ;
 But go or come who shall, while all come and
 go,
 Seldom cometh the better : practise preveth so.

111. "THE BETTER COMETH SELDOM."

*Seldom cometh the better, come or go who
 will :*
 One nail driveth out another, we see still.

112. "ONE DRIVETH OUT ANOTHER."

One nail driveth out another : with strokes so stout
 That the hammer-head which driveth them
 weareth quite out.

113. "OF BURDEN."

Light burden, far heavy : that dost thou try ;
 A feather borne far will tire thee well nigh.

"OTHERWISE."

Light burden, far heavy, borne for other men ;
 For ourselves, heavy burdens light enough
 then.

"OTHERWISE."

Light burden, far heavy : thy brain lacketh strength
 To bear a pint of wine a pair of butts' length.

"OTHERWISE."

Light burden, far heavy : thou dost find that lack
 In all light good burdens that lie on thy back.

“OTHERWISE.”

*Light burden, far heavy: how can lame folk prove, [remove?
Who in all their lives, their lengths do not*

114. “RUNNING AND GOING.”

*He may ill run that cannot go:
He that sitteth by the feet find so.*

115. “A LACK OF TOOLS.”

*What is a workman without his tools?
How may baubles be missed among fools?*

116. “TASTE OF A MAN’S TALES.”

*A tale of a tub, thy tales taste all of ale:
Not of pescod ale, sir; my tales are not stale.*

117. “OF A CAT’S LOOK.”

*A cat may look on a king: and what of that?
When a cat so looketh, a cat is but a cat.*

118. “ONE PUT OUT OF A CREED.”

*Thou mayest be in my pater noster, indeed;
But surely thou shalt never come in my creed.
I care not, though I do not; what can I win
To come in a creed, which creed God is not in?*

119. “ALL THAT MAY BE WON OF THE FOX.”

*We can have no more of the fox but the skin:
And the fox thinketh that too much for us to win.*

120. “THE SURETY OF SOME SEAL.”

*As sure as it were sealed with butter: forsooth!
Some butter seal lasteth as long as some wax doth.*

121. "THE HARES GOING AWAY."

There goeth the hare away: is she gone, say you? [enou'.

Let her go! we have hares and hare-heads

122. "JUDGMENT OF COLOURS."

Blind men should judge no colours: should they nat?

Blind men will judge all colours, for all that.

123. "HAP AND WIT."

Better be happy than wise: here art thou hit;
 Thy hap hath ever been better than thy wit.

"OTHERWISE."

Better be happy than wise: not so, some say;
 He that can be wise shall be happy, say they.

124. "OF FORTUNE TO FOOLS."

God sendeth fortune to fools: not to everyone;
 Thou art a fool, and yet, fortune thou hast
 none.

"OTHERWISE."

God sendeth fortune to fools: and to wise men still [ill.
 God sendeth good fortune, or the devil sendeth

125. "OF LOOSERS' WORDS."

Let the losers have their words, all at once:
 Shall the losers talk? there will be chat for the nonce.

126. "GETTING AND SPENDING."

Ill gotten, ill spent: be that tale true to tell,
 Thou art never like to spend penny well.

127. "MATTERS NOT LAID A-WATER."

My matter is laid a-water: that's a false tale;
Thy matters lie, not in water, they lie in ale.

128 "MEASURE."

Measure is a merry mean
Which, filled with nopy drink,
When merry drinkers drink off clean
Then merrily they wink.

"OTHERWISE."

Measure is a merry mean,
But I mean measures great;
Where lips to little pitchers lean,
Those lips they scantily wet.

"OTHERWISE."

Measure is a merry mean:
But inch, foot, yard, or ell,
Those measures are not worth a bean;
They measure no drink well.

"OTHERWISE."

Measure is a merry mean:
Be drink dear or good cheap,
From measure no wight may thee wean;
Thou measurest drink by heap.

"OTHERWISE."

Measure is a merry mean:
Good liquor may not shrink;
Thou takest no triacle of Gean
So wholesome as good drink.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Measure is a merry mean
Showing indifferency;
Would th'ale-wife play the polling quean?
Yet measure will not lie.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Measure is a merry mean
That doth diligently;
Attend the taps of stand and stean
To moist thy lips full dry.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Measure is a merry mean:
And measure is thy mate
To be a deacon, or a dean:
Thou wouldst not change the state.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Measure is a merry mean:
Who that shall enterprise
This measure from thee, for to glean,
Right early must he rise.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Measure is a merry mean:
In volumes full or flat;
There is no chapter, nor no scene
That thou appliest like that.

129. “ GOING BEYOND THE WALL.”

Furder than the wall we cannot go:
Thine visage showeth otherwise, then so;
Thou goest, when thou must start out of sight,
To the wall, and over the wall quite.

130. "OF HARM."

A man far from his good is nigh his harm:
Nigh thy good, next thy harm, as chance may charm.

"OTHERWISE."

A man far from his good is nigh his harm:
For thee to fear that it were worse than wood-
ness;
Movables, unmovables, land or farm,
Thou hast not one groat's worth of good or goodness.

"OTHERWISE."

A man far from his good is nigh his harm:
This showeth thee nigh harm; for, hadst thou
an arm [stantine,
That could and would reach hence to Con-
That arm could not reach to any good of thine.

131. "WIT KEPT BY WARMTH."

Thou art wise enough if thou keep thee warm:
But the least cold that cometh killeth thy wit
by harm.

132. "LIGHT COMING AND GOING."

Light come, light go, that cometh in ure by light feet; [street.
But light heads make light feet lie lame in the

"OTHERWISE."

Light come, light go: for that thou art well
wrought;
For thou art as light as a thing of nought.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Light come, light go: pass, come and go
lightly;
In a juggler that lightness is sightly.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Light come, light go: thy light going doth excel;
But thy light coming I like not half so well.

233. “ OF KISSING.”

Unknown, unkissed: and being known, I ween Thou art never kissed where thou mayest be seen.

“ OTHERWISE.”

“ Unknown, unkissed: from that desire, wife, bless thee; [thee.”
For no man that seeth thee desireth to kiss “ From kissing in sight, husband, such as flee me, [me.”
Let them come kiss me where they do not see

134. “ OF LEAVE.”

Leave is light: light enough as thou wilt make
it;
If thy master give no leave thou wilt take it.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Leave is light: yea, and leave is axed lightly;
And may be granted lightly, axed rightly.

135. “ GOD IN THE ALMONRY.”

There is God in th'almery: a well-played part;
Shut God in thine almonry out of thy heart.

136. "THE DEVIL IN TH'OROLOGE."

*The devil is in th'orologe, the hours to try ;
Search hours by the sun ; the devil's dial will lie.*

"OTHERWISE."

*The devil is in th'orologe : now cheer in bowls ;
Let the devil keep our clocks while God keep our souls.*

137. "THE BEST."

*The best is behind : the worst is before ;
Between both, beware drift to the worst shore.*

"OTHERWISE."

*The best is behind : we go before too fast ;
Bide for the best, else it will be lost at last.*

"OTHERWISE."

The best is behind : start thou back and fet it, Abide, abide ! a wiser man must get it.

"OTHERWISE."

*The best is behind : even so I thought it would ;
The best lacketh feet, foot pace with us to hold.*

"OTHERWISE."

*The best is behind : behind, nor yet before,
Would I have the best but with us evermore.*

138. "THE WORST."

*The worst is behind :
There art thou assigned.*

“ OTHERWISE.”

The worst is behind: but the way is not rough;
The worst will get before again, time enough.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The worst is behind: yet behind worse evil
We see our fare; at next course cometh the devil.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The worst is behind: God keep it behind us;
Or us before it, as it never find us.

139. “ LASTING OF WONDER.”

A wonder lasteth but nine days:
Yes, thou didst nine years gone
But one good deed, for which some says,
Thou art yet wondered on.

140. “ OF A GALLED HORSE.”

Rub a galled horse on the back and he will kick: [prick.
But the galled ass will stand still, rub, spur, or

141. “ GOOD BEGINNING AND END.”

Of a good beginning there cometh a good end:
Nay, Lucifer began well, and now a fiend;
But of good beginning and ending, truth to
tell,
The best way to end well is to begin well.

142. “ THE STILL SOW.”

The still sow eateth all the draff: my sow eateth none; [gone.
The devil stealeth not my sow till her grain be

143. "OF STUMBLING."

Stumble at a straw and leap over a block:
Such stumblers are blockheads, or else they do mock.

"OTHERWISE."

Stumble at a straw and leap over a block:
The ass and the ape seem here joined in one
stock.

144. "OF THE SHOE AND THE SOLE."

The shoe will hold with the sole: no man knoweth it
But he that knoweth how the shoemaker seweth it.

"OTHERWISE."

The shoe will hold with the sole: what should the shoe do
But hold with the sole? the sole will hold with the shoe.

145. "MIGHT AND RIGHT."

Might overcometh right: God keep us from that might; [right.
God give us that might that striveth not with

146. "BIRTH AND TEACHING."

Better unborn than untaught: but, of truth, thou [now.
Were as well taught afore thou were born as

147. "OF HANGING."

I have hanged up my hatchet: and 'scaped thyself?
Thou shouldest rather be hanged than thy hatchet, else!

148. "AN OLD KNAVE."

*An old knave is no babe: no, but we know
Of an old knave's babe an old knave may grow.*

149. "A MAN'S EAR AND HIS HOOD."

*Thy ear groweth through thy hood: is thy hood torn?
Or doth thy ear pierce through thy hood, like a horn.*

150. "GAINS AND LOSSES."

*Light gains make heavy purses:
Light losses make heavy curses.*

"OTHERWISE."

*Light gains make heavy purses: and light purses
Make heavy hearts, and heavy-hearted curses.*

"OTHERWISE."

*Light gains make heavy purses: so brag merchants bare
When they take three halfpence for twopennyworth ware.*

151. "THIEVES FALLING OUT."

*When thieves fall out true men come to their
good:
Come betimes, or else it is gone, by rood!*

152. "OF A SHORN FACE."

*Thy face is shorn against the wool, very deep:
Have I wool in my face? yea, thou art a sheep.*

153. "A BENCH WHISTLER."

"Thou art a bench whistler: a shrill, whistling wench; [Bench?"
 But how long hast thou whistled in the King's
 "I have whistled in the King's Bench, (Geoffrey), [sea."
 As long as thou hast marched in the Marshal-

154. "WHAT GOD SAID TO ONE."

Thou art one of them to whom God bade Ho!
 God took thee for a cart-horse, when God bade so.

"OTHERWISE."

Thou art one of them to whom God bade Ho!
 I ween thou went'st too far when God bade so.

155. "BOWING AND BREAKING."

Better bow than break when straining shall stretch;
 Nay, as good break as bow beyond our reach.

"OTHERWISE."

Better bow than break: I praise this that ye
 spake; [break.
 But some bend, or be bent and bowed, till they

"OTHERWISE."

Better bow than break: it is truly spoken:
 Bowed wands serve for somewhat, so do not broken.

156. "OF WRESTLING."

The weaker hath the worse in wrestling alway:
 Best for the weak to leave wrestling then, I
 say.

157. "GOD AND THE CHURCH."

The nearer to the church, the farther from God:
Both one to thee, a ream thence, or a rod.

158. "OF ONE TALE IN ALL MEN TOLD."

It must needs be true that every man saith:
Till all men say one thing, the judgment stayeth.

"OTHERWISE."

It must needs be true that every man saith:
Must it so? then art thou a fool, in faith!

159. "OF MALKIN."

There be no maids than Malkin: "thou sayest truth, Joan;
But how may we be sure that Malkin one?"

160. "RASH VENTURING."

I will set all even at six and at seven:
Yea, and repent all between ten and eleven.

161. "A SCABBED HORSE."

A scabbed horse is good enough for a scalded squire: [hire.
Your mastership need not care what horse ye

162. "OF SITTING."

Between two stools my tail goeth to the ground:
Better stand than sit till sure seat be found.

163. "ALE AND WIT."

When ale is in wit is out:
When ale is out wit is in;

The first thou showest, out of doubt,
The last in thee hath not been.

164. "OF RESTITUTION."

Steal a goose and stick down a feather:
In a feather, and such conscience,
If I should stick them down together
I can devise no great difference.

165. "EATING OF FLIES."

"The blind eateth many a fly: not thou, wife!
For, though blindness have banished thine eyes'
defence,
Yet when flies in flying to thy mouth be rife, Thy tongue is a fly-flap, to flap flies from thence."

166. "OF THE FOX'S PREACHING."

When the fox preacheth then beware our gēese:
You that fear your geese learn wit here a-piece;
Keep foxes from pulpits your geese to teach,
Or keep geese from sermons when foxes do preach.

167. "OF POOR MEN'S SOULS."

Poor men have no souls: no, but poor men had souls [ale-bowls.
Till the drunken souls drowned their souls in

"OTHERWISE."

Poor men have no souls: yes, but we see Poor men's souls as poor as their purses be.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Poor men have no souls: no, have rich men any?

I fear but few; for they have lost souls many.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Poor men have no souls: No, no! the devil made them;

The sots could not keep their souls while they had them.

168. “ PROMISE OF LICENCE.”

I will say no more till the day be longer:

No, no! say no more till thy wit be stronger.

169. “ OF LITTLE SAYING.”

Little said, soon amended:

Little good, soon spendend;

Little charge, soon attended;

Little wit, soon ended.

170. “ OF THE TIDE.”

The tide tarrieth no man: but here to scan—

Thou art tied so that thou tarriest every man.

171. “ PRAISE OF GOOD END.”

*“ All is well that endeth well: a good saying,
(wife);*

But I would see it proved by th’end of thy life.”

172. “ OF HEARING AND JUDGING.”

Hear all parts ere ye judge any:

God send such hearers many!

173. "A LESSON FOR LOOKING."

*Some man may better steal a horse
 Than some may stand and look upon:
 Where such suspicion standeth in force,
 Flee sight of stolen horse—look on none!*

174. "OF A WOMAN'S LIVES."

*"Wife, a woman hath nine lives like a cat."
 "Sir, you have but one life, and yet enough of that."*

175. "THE CROW CALLED WHITE."

*I will say the crow is white: art thou so light?
 What is thy credence when the crow cometh in sight?*

"OTHERWISE."

*Ye must say the crow is white: in any case
 Not now; but we were made say so a long space.*

"OTHERWISE."

*I will say the crow is white: wilt thou so When every man seeth her black? go, fool,
 go!*

176. "OF THE OLD FOOL."

*There is no fool to the old fool:
 Go, young fools, to th'old fools to school!*

"OTHERWISE."

*There is no fool to th'old fool: speak not that loud; [proud;
 That praise will make old fools vengeably*

Which praise of old fools, young fools perceiv-ing plain : [dain.
 Young fools and old fools each will other dis-

177. "OF A BEAN."

A bean in a monk's hood: very good!
 Here is the bean, but where is the hood?

178. "THE GIFT OF A PIG."

"Sir, ye give me a pig of mine own sow."
 "Wife, I give a sow pig to a sow now."

179. "CHANGE AND ROBBERY."

Change is no robbery: that is a tale not strange; [change.
Change is no robbery, but robbery maketh
Many sweet blessings change to bitter curses
When true men's money changeth into thieves'
 purses.

180. "OF FAIR WORDS."

Fair words make fools fain: that was by old schools; [fools.
 But now we see fair words make wise men

"OTHERWISE."

Fair words make fools fain: yet fair words are cheerful;
 But foul words make all folk ireful or fearful.

181. "OF LAUGHING."

I laughed in my sleeve, faint laughings there to win;
 Sleeves be too narrow to laugh lustily in.

182. "OF SEEKING."

"I seek for a thing, wife, that I would not find." [mind.]

"Good husband! ye are the more fool, in my

"OTHERWISE."

Thou seekest for a thing that thou wouldst not find:

And I find all things that I do not seek;
In my hap, and thy wit, what difference assigned?

I ween not the value of a good green leek.

183. "OF A HEAD UNDER A GIRDLE."

*He hath thy head under his girdle: take heed
He hang not thy head in his girdle, indeed.*

184. "OF WIDE SHOOTING."

He shooteth wide: the cause why I see, even sith [with.

He hath not one straight shaft to shoot straight

"OTHERWISE."

*He shooteth wide:
On which side?*

"OTHERWISE."

*He shooteth wide: but he cannot amend that;
For he seeth not the mark that he shooteth at.*

185. "THE FOOL'S BOLT."

A fool's bolt is soon shot, and fleeth oft times far;

But the fool's bolt and the mark come few times near.

186. "OF A MERCHANT."

He is a merchant without money or ware :
 Bid that merchant be covered ; he is bare.

"OTHERWISE."

He is a merchant without money or ware :
 He hath, in some respect, the less cause of care.

187. "OF TONGUE."

*"Tongue breaketh bone, and bone it hath
 none :*

I wish, (wife), thy tongue may have a bone."

"And I wish," (quoth she), "a bone in your hood." [good.]

"Wish that bone away," (said he), "'tis not

"Then wish you the tother," (quoth she),
 "away." [may]

They did so ; which done, now said she : "We Witness both that you have your wish in fine,
 But both cannot witness that I have mine."

"OTHERWISE."

Tongue breaketh bone itself having none :
 Such tongues should have bones, or bodkins
 the tone.

"OTHERWISE."

Tongue breaketh bone and bone itself hath none : [(Joan).]

"Yes, thy tongue is full of good ale-bones,

188. "OF SPEECH."

Spare to speak, spare to speed : If speech bring
 speed,

Then wilt thou speed, for thou speakest more than need.

189. "A BUSY-BODY."

He will have an oar in every man's barge:
Even in Cock Lorel's barge he beareth that charge.

"OTHERWISE."

He will have an oar in every man's barge:
Then with some of those oars he roweth at large.

190. "OF TIME."

Time is tickle: we may match time in this;
For we be even as tickle as time is.

"OTHERWISE."

Time is tickle:
Chance is fickle;
Man is brickle;
Frailties pickle
Powdereth mickle,
Seasoning lickle.

191. "OF FAR CASTING."

He casteth beyond the moon: great diversity
Between far casting and wise casting, maybe.

"OTHERWISE."

He casteth beyond the moon: what need that be done?
We have casting enough a this side the moon.

192. "OF HUNGER."

Hunger droppeth out of his nose:
That is the worst kind of the pose.

193. "OF FEEDING."

He hath fed till he is as full as a tun:

I mean an empty tun—what food hath he won?

194. "OF MORTIMER'S SOW."

Backare, quoth Mortimer to his sow:

Went that sow back at that bidding, trow you?

"OTHERWISE."

Backare, quoth Mortimer to his sow: see

Mortimer's sow speaketh as good Latin as he.

"OTHERWISE."

Backare, quoth Mortimer to his sow:

"The boar shall back first," (quoth she), "I make a vow!

195. "OF FLEA-BITING."

'Tis but a flea-biting: friend, if fleas bite so,
They will bite men to the bare bones where they go.

196. "THE BREECHLESS MASTER."

The master weareth no breech: then I protest!
The master is a girl, a boy, or a beast.

197. "OF MEAT AND SAUCE."

Sweet meat will have sour sauce: to this reason feat

Join this conversion: sour sauce will have sweet meat.

Thus, sourness and sweetness, the one and th'other,

In fear of the tone, we hope of the tother.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Sweet meat will have sour sauce: where that is seen, [ween.
As good lack that meat as have that sauce, I

198. “ OF PROFFERED SERVICE.”

Proffered service stinketh: thou art deceived else;
Thy proffered service stinketh not; thou stinkest thyself.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Proffered service stinketh: more fool thou to proffer it!
Thou shouldest season thy service ere thou offer it.

199. “ OF COMMON MEDDLERS.”

He that meddleth with all thing may shoe the gosling:
If all such meddlers were set to goose-shoeing,
No goose need go barefoot between this and Greece;
For so: we should have as many goose-shoeers
as geese.

200. “ OF ENOUGH AND A FEAST.”

As good enough as a feast: yea God save it!
Enough were even as good if we might have it.

“ OTHERWISE.”

As good enough as a feast:
This for a truth say most and least.
But what enough is justly meant,
And with enough to be content,

Those are two points that few or none
Can learn to know, and stand upon.

201. "OF PLAIN FASHION."

The plain fashion is best: what! plain without pleats? [bleats.
That fashion commendeth the calf when it

"OTHERWISE."

*The plain fashion is best: and accepted best
In things that please ears, but not in the rest.*

"OTHERWISE."

The plain fashion is best: that's truly expressed Where fashioners of plain fashions are honest.

202. "OF HIM THAT COMETH LAST."

*He that cometh last make all fast: to this, say
some,
All is made fast ere the last comer come.*

"OTHERWISE."

*He that cometh last make all fast:
Who shall make him fast that cometh last?*

203. "OF STRIVING."

*He striveth against the stream: by custom's school
That striver is either a fish or a fool.*

204. "OF SITTING."

*Better sit still than rise and fall:
If all fall ye may hang when ye shall.*

205. "OF WRITING TO FRIENDS."

*Ye may write to your friends that ye are in health: [wealth?
Who may write to his friends that he is in*

206. "OF GREAT CLERKS."

The greatest clerks be not the wisest men:
Be small learned, or unlearned fools, wisest
then?

207. "OF KILLING."

He will kill a man for a mess of mustard:
He will kill ten men then for a custard.

208. "OF FALSEHOOD."

There is falsehood in fellowship: there is so;
The fellowship is small else as the world doth
go.

"OTHERWISE."

There is falsehood in fellowship: no wonder;
Falsehood and fellowship are seldom asunder.

209. "OF BLEEDING."

Here lieth all and bleedeth: all? that's false and foolish; [fish.
Thou never sawest blood bleed out of a stock-

210. "OF SEEING."

Seest me and seest me not: both one thing,
forsooth! [doeth.
As good unseen as seen whose sight no good

211. "OF ILLS."

Of two ills choose the least: of ills many
The least is too great to choose any.

"OTHERWISE."

Of two ills choose the least: may we choose ills
now? [yow.
Choose on, choosers! the like choice never had

212. "OF PEPPER."

Thou takest pepper in the nose: and yet thy nose [rose.
Looketh not black like pepper, but red like the

“OTHERWISE.”

*Thou takest pepper in the nose ; which needeth not—
Thy nose without pepper is fiery red-hot.*

“ OTHERWISE.”

*Thou takest pepper in the nose, which so seasoned,
Showeth thy nose better seasoned than thy head reasoned.*

213. "OF AN ILL STAKE."

An ill stake that cannot stand one year in a hedge:
If the stake self fail, the stake is as ye allege;
But, if stake stobbers will not let stakes stand, Blame not the stake; blame the stake stobber's
hand.

214. "OF SUFFERANCE."

Sufferance is no quittance: but, suffering too long [wrong.
Showeth much like a quittance in suffering of

215. "OF MISRECKONING."

Misreckoning is no payment: yes! as doth fall
In some reckoners, misreckoning is payment
all.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Misreckoning is no payment: to avoid that,
Some debtors with their creditors reckon nat.

216. "OF EVEN RECKONING."

Even reckoning maketh long friends:
Odd reckoning maketh many friends.

217. "OF TAKING."

I will take as falleth in the sheaf: wherever it fall [all.
In the sheaf, or out of the sheaf, thou takest

218. "OF MUM."

Mum is counsel in every man we see;
But mum except, nothing is counsel in thee.

219. "OF STOPPING A MOUTH."

"He shall not stop my mouth." "No, Nan, I think that;
I believe all the devils in hell stoppeth it nat."

220. "OF CASTING."

He is cast in his own turn: that is likely;
And yet in all turns he turneth wondrous quickly.

221. "OF JACK."

He is Jack out of office: curtesy, withdraw!
Jack once out of office, all hail Jack daw!

222. "OF THE WINKING CAT."

Let the cat wink and let the mouse run: run, mice!
Or else the cat's claws will catch you at a trice.

"OTHERWISE."

Let the cat wink and let the mouse run: run,
rats! [cats.
Small holes keep small mice from wily winking

“ OTHERWISE.”

Let the cat wink and let the mouse run: creep, mouse, creep! [sleep.
 Run not before cats that wink more than they

223. “ OF SAYING NAY.”

Say nay, and take it: yea, say nay and take it;
 But say nay or say ye never forsake it.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Say nay and take it: hear me say this othing:
 Say nother yea nor nay; tak't and say nothing.

224. “ OF THE PIE AND CROW.”

Not too high for the pie nor to low for the
crow:
 High pies made low crows; we have enough,
 I trow.

225. “ OF SAYING NOUGHT BUT MUM.”

I will say nought but mum:
 Thou showest the more wit some.

“ OTHERWISE.”

I will say nought but mum: that I beseech; Mum hath a grace in thee far more than speech.

226. “ OF TONGUE AND WIT.”

Thy tongue runneth before thy wit: that's no rash race;
 For, so may it run running but a snail pace.

227. “ OF OWN.”

Own is own
 Where's own known.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Own is own: these words I speak with eyes
weeping,
For all mine own is in other men's keeping.
But good is that riches where it is heapt
That from th'owner by no means can be kept.

228. “ OF SPINNING.”

She hath spun a fair thread: which showeth,
indeed,
That a foul spinner may spin a fair thread.

229. “ OF LAUGHING.”

They laugh that win: falsely to win and keep,
Winners may laugh when they have cause to weep.

“ OTHERWISE.”

They laugh that win: by theft to win and keep,
Thieves at stealing laugh, thieves at hanging weep.

230. “ OF PLAYING.”

He playeth best that wins: that deny I will;
Many players win much that play very ill.

“ OTHERWISE.”

He playeth best that wins: there is a lie running; [ning.
Many win much, much more by hap, than cun-

231. “ OF THE WIND BLOWING.”

Let this wind overblow: when over blow,
This wind will over blow us first, I trow.

232. "OF FAR AND NIGH."

*I have seen as far come as nigh: come no near;
The ferder thou art hence, the better is it here.*

233. "OF TH'INSTEP."

*He is high in th'instep: his steps may be high,
But to step in good steps he steppeth nothing
nigh.*

234. "OF SMALL AND GREAT."

*Many small make a great: and some great made small;
Thou hadst great good manners and thou hast none at all.*

235. "OF THE KEYS."

*The keys hang not all by one man's girdle:
no! [so?
Every key hath a clog: who would be clogged*

236. "OF PROVENDER."

*His provender pricketh him: prick him? gods forbod!
What is his provender? pins, by likelihood!*

"OTHERWISE."

*His provender pricketh him: where grew that corn?
Pricking provender as ill as boats borne.*

"OTHERWISE."

*His provender pricketh him: that horse must need stir; [spur.
Pricked within with provender, without with*

237. "OF SOME HERE AND THERE."

*Here some and there some: yea, here and there some; [come.
But most when, and most where no some doth*

238. "OF THE PARSON'S LEMAN."

*She is as tender as a parson's leman:
Parson's lemans are tough enough now and
than.*

239. "OF ILL WEED."

*Ill weed groweth fast: it groweth fast indeed;
The corn can scantily grow for the weed.*

"OTHERWISE."

*Ill weed groweth fast: that is showing
In the show of thy fast growing.*

240. "OF SINKING."

*He shall sink in his own sin: yea, when he sinketh;
But he fleeth in his own sin yet, methinketh.*

241. "OF GOOD SILVER."

*She thinketh her farthing good silver: but, trust
me!
She is quicksilver what ever her farthing be.*

242. "OF THE PROUD COCK."

*Every cock is proud on his own dunghill:
The hen is proud enough there, mark who will.*

243. "OF FAT IN THE FIRE."

*The fat is in the fire: that is a shrewd turn;
Cast the lean after; fat and lean, let all burn!*

244. "OF BOW BENT."

*I have the bent of his bow: that I know;
What bolts shootest thou from that bow? fools'
bolts, I trow!*

245. "OF GOD'S BEING."

*God is where he was: yea, but so art not thou;
Thou were abroad late, and art in Newgate
now.*

246. "OF KINSFOLK."

*Many kinsfolk, few friends:
Few friends and many fiends.*

247. "OF FRIENDSHIP."

*A friend is never known till a man have need:
Nor then, nother, for any I know, indeed.*

248. "OF NOTHING."

*Where nothing is, the king must lose his right:
Where all thing is, there right is lost by might.*

249. "OF POVERTY."

*Poverty parteth fellowship: that's not true
ever;
Poverty in beggars parteth fellowship never.*

250. "OF EARS GLOWING."

*Thine ears may glow: "let's see whether they glow, John. [none."
I lie: thine ears cannot glow, for thou hast*

251. "OF POST AND PILLAR."

*Tossed from post to pillar: thou art a pillar strong; [long.
And thou hast been a pillar, some say, too*

252. "OF MAY BE."

Be as be may is no banning:
But be as be shall hath much scanning.

253. "OF USE."

Use maketh mastery: this is a true tale to tell;
In that use hath made thee prick a purse so
well.

254. "OF SPURNING."

Folly to spurn or kick against the hard wall:
Being shod with cakebread that spurner marreth all.

"OTHERWISE."

Folly to spurn or kick against the hard wall:
But against soft walls spurners spurn and kick
all.

255. "OF TYING THE BELL."

Who shall tie the bell about the cat's neck
now? [I know."
"Not I," (quoth the mouse), "for a thing that

256. "OF HAD I WIST."

"Beware of Had I wist, wife." "Oh man!
'tis too late [mate."
To beware thereof since thou were my wedded

257. "OF DANCING."

He danceth attendance: are attendants dancing? [ing.
Then have we much dancing with small avanc-

258. "OF THE CAT EATING FISH."

The cat would eat fish but she will not wet her feet:

She thinketh flesh with dry feet more sweet than fish with weet.

259. "OF THE BLIND."

The blind eat many a fly: that we find
Chiefly where carvers to the blind are blind.

260. "OF THE WORST AND BEST."

Provide for the worst: the best will save itself;
For that saving side thou art a subtle elf.
Of all kinds of things thou hast provision pressed, [best.
For thy neighbours the worst, for thyself the

261. "OF FIVE EGGS."

He cometh in with his five eggs: what eggs to call? [daws' eggs all.
Hen eggs, goose eggs, or duck eggs? nay,

262. "OF CLIMBING."

He that never climbed never fell: some men climb [time.
For doves' nests and find daws' nests, some-

263. "OF THE WAY."

It is out of my way: so it lightly may;
To all good things thy way is out of the way.

264. "OF WAITING."

He waiteth for moonshine in the water:
Such waiting, such winning; that's a meet matter.

265. "OF RHYME."

It may rhyme but it accordeth not: " 'cordeth not, Will?

Beware of 'cording rhymes; those rhymes agree ill."

266. "OF FISHING."

It is ill fishing before the net:

Worse fishing behind, as nets are set.

267. "OF GOOD."

He knoweth none end of his good: mark his winning;

He knoweth of his good none end, nor begin-

268. "OF THE HOT IRON."

When the iron is hot, strike: strike hot iron and steel;

But gold or silver to strike we have no deal.

269. "OF THE PURSE."

Thy purse is threadbare, we see, on the outside;

And more bare on the inside when both sides are tried.

270. "OF MANY HANDS."

Many hands make light work: many hands? yea, mark!

Ye must say thus: many light hands make light wark.

"OTHERWISE."

Many hands make light work: no work is 'signed thee;

Thou canst not work; thy hands be bound behind thee.

271. "OF THE LOATH STAKE."

The loath stake standeth long: we have many loath stakes; [makes.
Each stake well-nigh to other itself, loath

"OTHERWISE."

The loath stake standeth long; in some place,
but some hand
Plucketh up all stakes, suffering no stake long to stand.

272. "OF HAVING."

Better to have than wish: nay, ye may so crave [have.
That better to wish ten times than once to

"OTHERWISE."

Better to have than wish: not alway, cousin!
What if ye rashly wished stripes now, a dozen?

"OTHERWISE."

Better to have than wish: better have as we have [crave.
Than to have at wish all that wishers would

273. "OF COUNSEL."

Three may keep counsel if twain be away:
But one fool doth oft his own counsel bewray.

"OTHERWISE."

Three may keep counsel if twain be away:
Some women, I hear say, that saying deny.

274. "OF ROME."

Rome was not built on one day: that is well known;
Nor in one day Rome will not be overthrown.
For where Rome seemed pulled down in one day, brother,
There is Rome set up again in another.

275. "OF SPEECH."

Spare to speak, spare to speed:
Dumb men win nought indeed;
And speech, as speech may fall,
May win nought and lese all.

276. "OF ONE HAD IN THE WIND."

I have him in the wind: well, sir, it is your mind [wind.
To have him in the wind, or hang him in the

277. "OF ONE ILL SHOD."

Who is worse shod than is the shoemaker's wife?
The devil's wife; she was never shod in her life.

278. "OF ALL AND NOUGHT."

He would all have and nought forego: no!
He may all forego and nought have, so!

279. "OF WARNING."

I gave him Scarborough warning: Scarborough? [borough.
That warning came short to bring good har-

280. "OF BIRDS FLOWN."

The birds are flown: that bird's nest was ill watched;

Birds' wings once full summ'd birds will hardly be caught.

“ OTHERWISE.”

The birds are flown. Flown? that flight no wonder brings; [wings.
Birds may soon flee where birders clip no birds'

281. “ OF LEAVING.”

Leave it or it leave you: leave what? folly?
He can never leave it nor it him, wholly.

282. “ OF SETTING IN FOOT.”

He hath set in foot: things by wit to be sped,
His foot shall do service as good as his head.

“ OTHERWISE.”

I will set in foot: friend, thou mayest set in fit Foot, hand, and head, but thou canst set in no wit.

283. “ OF FAST BINDING.”

Fast bind, fast find: nay, thou were 'prentice fast bound,
And yet rannest thou away where thou couldst not be found.

284. “ OF HAP.”

Happy man, happy dole: so say sick and
whole;
But good hap is dainty: most men have seldom good dole.

“ OTHERWISE.”

Happy man, happy dole: hap is full of holes;
Hap catcheth and holdeth very few good doles.

285. "OF TIME."

Take time when time cometh: we are oftentimes told of it;
But when time cometh yet can we take no hold
of it.

"OTHERWISE."

Take time when time cometh: assay to be bold
of it;
But slippery as an eel's tail is the hold of it.

"OTHERWISE."

Take time when time cometh: are we set time to take? [break.
Beware time, in meantime, take not us in

"OTHERWISE."

Take time when time cometh: when time cometh—thou sayest well! [tell.
But when cometh good time to take, I cannot

286. "OF THE FAT HOG."

Every man basteth the fat hog: nay, friend,
nay!
Mast faileth sore this year, fat hogs pine away.

"OTHERWISE."

Every man basteth the fat hog, 'tis agreed That those hogs shall have most help that have least need.

287. "THE BALE AND BOOT."

When bale is hekst, boot is next: though boot be nigh, [high?
What helpeth boot where bale is ever most

288. "OF SOWS."

"As meet as a sow to bear a saddle, John."
"A sow to bear a saddle? we have seen none;
But though sows bear no saddles, yet may we
say
We see saddles bear sows, well-nigh every day.

289. "OF MAKING A CROSS."

I will make a cross upon this gate: yea, cross on;
Thy crosses be on gates all, in thy purse none.

290. "OF A PAD."

It will breed a pad in the straw: very well!
Beware it breed not a padlock on thy heel.

291. "OF LONG STANDING."

Long standing and small offering maketh poor parsons: [garsons.
Long waiting and small wages maketh poor

292. "OF THE WEAKER."

The weaker goeth to the pot: yea, and God
wot!
Some the weaker for oft going to the pot.

293. "OF CATCHING."

Catch that catch may: after catching and snatching,
Pilling and polling, we fall now to patching.

294. "OF HOLDING."

Hold fast when ye have it: if it be not thine,
Hold fast and run fast when thou hast it,
friend mine!

295. "OF KNOWLEDGE."

I know him as well as the beggar knoweth his bag:

Thou knowest him; but when wilt thou know thyself, wag?

296. "OF SMELLINGS."

I smelt him out further than he might smell thee.

The smeller of smellers then, thou art even he!

297. "OF NOUGHT LAID DOWN."

Nought lay down, nought take up: well said!

Nought lie down, nought rise up: well weighed!

298. "OF SIGHT AND FARE."

Ye see your fare: a very strange fare to see;

A blind man may see our fare as well as we.

299. "OF THE POT NOT BROKEN."

Neither pot broken nor water spilt: water

Thou spillest none; but thou spillest all other matter.

300. "OF LATE AND NEVER."

Better late than never: yea, mate!

But as good never as too late.

"OTHERWISE."

Better late than never:

That is not true ever;

Some things, to rule in rate,

Better never than late.

To the Reader

Were it as perilous to deal cards at play,
As it is quarrelous to deal books this day,
One and forty men, among one and fifty,
Would flee one and thirty, to flee one un-thrifty. [ing,

And yet cards so dealt should have, in reveal-Foredeal of books in this hard time of dealing.

Cards be tooted on but on the tone side :

Books on both sides ; in all places pored and pried.

Not to content, but to contend, upon spial
Of least tittle, that can come in trial.

If the best writer to write be much afraid,
More may I, (the worst), by fearful fear be stayed. [me so,

And were not this one thing, fear should stay
That book or ballet, I never durst write mo.

In all my simple writing never meant I
To touch any private person displeasantly.

Nor none do I touch here by name, but only
one,

Which is myself ; whom I may be bold upon.
This meant in my making, since proof doth declare,

I pray you readers to scan this, by this square.
As I, for mirth, merrily did make it,
So you, in mirth, merrily will take it.

THE FIFTH HUNDRED OF EPIGRAMMES

I. "OF WEENING AND WOTTING."

Wise men in old time would ween themselves fools; [wise.

Fools now in new time will ween themselves
Ween wise and wot wise differ in wise schools :
To ween themselves wise, when fools so devise,
As foolish as fruitless is th'enterprise.

This case is thus adjudged, in wisdom's school :
Who weeneth himself wise, wisdom wotteth him a fool. [one,

Made by John Heywood to these fools every-
And made of John Heywood when he weeneth himself none.

2. "OF A MAN OF LAW AND HIS CLIENTS."

Twenty clients to one man of law
For counsel, in twenty matters, did draw.
Each one praying at one instant to speed,
As all at once would have speed to proceed.
"Friends all," (quoth the learned man), "I'll speak with none

Till one barber have shaven all, one by one."
To a barber they went all together :
And being shaven, they returned again thither.

“Ye have,” (quoth the lawyer), “tarried long hence.” [shaven since

“Sir,” (quoth one), “twenty could not be
Of one barber; for, ye well understand,
One barber can have but one shaving hand.”

“Nor one lawyer,” (quoth he), “but one talking tongue.”

Learn clients this lesson of this lawyer sprung:
Like as the barber, one after one must shave,
So clients, of counsellors, counsel must have.

3. “AN ADVICE AGAINST MOCKING.”

Use to thy true friend no derision;
If thy friend spy it, he taketh it poison.
Though thy friend dissemble th’espial clearly,
Yet spied in a friend it toucheth him nearly.
Telling thy friend his fault, mocking him not,
If he thank thee not, then is he a sot.

4. “OF ITCHING AND SMARTING.”

Itching and smarting, both touch us at quick.
When we itch, we scratch: when we smart,
we kick.
But, in our kicking at our present smart,
Let us consider our former desert.

5. “OF A SHARP TONGUE.”

“Wife, I perceive thy tongue was made at Edgware.” [by there.”

“Yea, sir, and yours made at Rayleigh, hard

6. “OF A HORSE.”

A tilt horse, alias a beer horse to be—
Which wouldst thou be? a beer horse, I say to thee. [beer,
When the horse is seen cheerily to draw the
He is so praised that he may be proud to hear.

At tilt, when the horse runneth as fast as he can, [the man.
All cry: "Well run!" not to the horse, to
And if the horse fall, with the man overlaid, Then cry they all: "A vengeance on that lame jade!"

7. "OF A BUTLER AND A HORSE."

The butler and the beer horse both be like one:
They draw beer both; that is truth to bide one.
"Both draw beer, indeed, but yet they differ,
Joan;
The butler draweth and drinketh beer, the horse drinketh none."

8. "OF BRASS."

I perceive well now that brass is waxen proud,
Because brass so much with silver is allowed;
And being both joined, since they most by brass stand, [hand.
That maketh brass bold to stand on the upper

9. "OF A LOUSE'S DWELLING-PLACE."

"Were thou a louse and shouldst choose one dwelling-place, [this case:
Whither wouldst thou dwell, having choice in
In men's big breeches, or in women's thick ruffs?"
"I would be, both for the places and stuffs,
In summer with women, in winter with men.
In summer the woman's neck pleasant then.
In winter the man's breech is close and warm:
Large walks for life to walk warm without harm; [halls—
Galleries, gable ends, cambers, parlours,
Cold frost to defend, a dozen double walls.

Some sealed, some hanged, some dyed, some painted, some stained; [tained.
 Rents of all size, great and small rents re-
 And when, by louse biting, the leg is itching,
 The bars of men's breeches have such strong stitching, [and stamp!—
 Such bolstering, such 'broidering—let men stare
 The louse is as safe there as he were in a camp.
 In winter, I say, these breeches are alone;
 But then in summer let the louse thence be
 gone
 For fear of a plague; if he then thither get,
 A thousand to one he shall die of the sweat."

10. "OF A STRANGE GLASS."

Good God! what a glass to view is this?
 See what an unsightly sight here is:
 Great promise, small performance;
 Great countenance, small continuance;
 Great winning, small saving;
 Great hoping, small having;
 Great hives, small honey;
 Great purses, small money;
 Great gaps, small bushes;
 Great spears, small pushes;
 Great wine, small water;
 Great words, small matter;
 Great bottom, small brink;
 Great brewing, small drink;
 Great rent, small place;
 Great space, small grace;
 Great drift, small shift;
 Great gift, small thrift;
 Great watching, small catching;
 Great patching, small matching;

Great blood, small brute;
Great flowers, small fruit;
Great woods, small oaks;
Great staves, small strokes;
Great hens, small eggs;
Great hose, small legs;
Great study, small art;
Great desire, small desert;
Great giving, small taking;
Great marring, small making;
Great ships, small sailing;
Great loss, small availing;
Great marking, small minding;
Great seeking, small finding;
Great lawing, small loving;
Great stirring, small moving;
Great sowing, small growing;
Great trowing, small knowing—
I trow so great ill, and so small good
In one glass, together, never stood.

11. "OF DRINKING AND DRAWING."

"If thou must be forced forth to take journey quick, [forth, Dick?"
Whither wouldst thou be driven forth, or drawn
"I would be driven forth, Jack; for, as doth appear,
Drawing and hanging draw vengeable near.
I think it less ill, Jack, having choice in scope,
To be driven with the whip than drawn to the rope."

12. "OF LONG SUITS."

Suits hang half a year in Westminster Hall;
At Tyburn, half an hour's hanging endeth all.

13. "OF LIGHTNESS."

"Nothing is lighter than a feather, Kit."

"Yes, Clim." "What light thing is that?"

"Thy light wit."

14. "OF A DISAGREEMENT."

Each one man wellnigh falleth out with another;

And likewise each thing disagreeeth with other :
Namely, malt and water ; these two things are
So far fallen asunder, by scornful square,
That no brewer, be he lusty or lither,
Dare couch malt and water in house together.
But, chiefly sour water now beareth such sway
That, sweet malt from brewhouse, water driveth away.

15. "OF CHEAPENING OF CONIES."

"Jane, thou sellest sweet conies in this poultry-shop;

But none so sweet as thyself, sweet cony mop !
What is the price of thee?" "Forsooth!"
she told :

"At what price soever myself shall be sold,
Strange is the hearing, for ware or for money,
To hear a woodcock cheapen a cony."

16. "OF A WIFE HAVING CHILD."

"My wife hath a child now at four score and ten!"

"At four score and ten years? nay, friend, nay! what then?" [meant."

"At four score and ten quarters of a year I “ Meant ye so? and I meant years; by which extent [smell

 Your wife might seem your mother; but now I
 You may seem your wife’s father wonderfool
 well.”

17. “ OF A BACHELOR AND A MAID.”

“ Is that bachelor a wooer to that maid? ”

“ The commons common so; ’tis commonly said.”

“ Where dwelleth that bachelor? ” “ Wide a bow of Bridewell.”

“ Where dwelleth that maid? ” “ At Broken Wharf very well.”

18. “ OF SHORT PAYMENT.”

Thy debtor will pay thee shortly : shortly?
 He will make that short lie, a long lie, dread I.

19. “ WHENCE CERTAIN THINGS CAME FIRST.”

Whence come great breeches? from Little Wittam.

Whence come great ruffs? from Small Brain-forth they came. [Square Thrift.

Whence come these round fardingales? from Whence come deep coped hats? from Shallow Shift. [of Evil.

Whence come ’broidered gards? from the Town

Whence come uncombed staring heads? from the devil ! [Folly, John.

Whence come these women’s scarves? from Whence come their glittering spangs? from Much Wanton. [osity.

Whence come perfumed gloves? from Curi-

Whence come fine trapped moils? from Superfluity. [shapen shoon.

Whence come corned crooked toes? from Short summer moon. [Painters' tools.

 Whence come fair painted faces? from Whence come all these? from the vicar of Saint Fools.

20. "OF FURRED AND LINED GOWNS."

Thick furred gowns worn in summer show bare worn threads; [Saint Needs.
 Thin lined gowns worn in winter come from

21. "OF A WINE-DRAWER."

Drawer, thy wine is even with thee now I see :
 Thou piercest the wine, and the wine pierceth
 thee.

22. "SHORT CHECKS BETWEEN A MAN AND HIS WIFE."

"I am careful to see thee careless, Jill : "
 "I am woeful to see thee witless, Will."
 "I am anguished to see thee an ape, Jill : "
 "I am angry to see thee an ass, Will."
 "I am fretting to see thee flee from me, Jill : "
 "I am sorry to see thee seek to me, Will."
 "I am mad to see thee mate thy husband, Jill : "
 "I am sad to see thee slander thy wife, Will."
 "I am dumpish to see thee play the drab, Jill : " [Will."
 "I am knappish to see thee play the knave,

23. "OF A WOMAN DECKED IN TWO COLOURS."

My bonny Bess, black and white doth set thee out nett.
 Thy ear white as pearl, thy teeth black as jet.

24. "OF UNSWEET BREATH."

Thine unsavoury breath lacketh salt, beale
Belsabub : [tub.
It hath ta'en too much wind in the powdering-Thy breath, Hodge, with salt is so savoury to smell,
That no seasoning liquor can season it well.

25. "OF CLIPPING AND CLEANSING."

Not clipping your beards, why clip you your nails? [tails?
Not combing your heads, why wipe you your
These being superfluous things every one,
Comb, clip, or cleanse all : or clip or cleanse
none.

26. "OF A MAN AND HIS WIFE'S DEPARTING."

"Wife, I will go abroad—will ye take the pain?" [again?"
"Be't; but when the devil will ye come in "Makest thou me a devil? nay, then be out of doubt; [goeth out."
The devil will come in when the devil's dame

27. "AN ACCOUNT OF A MAN'S CHILDREN."

"Wife, of ten babes between us by increase grown, [own :
Thou sayest I have but nine." "No mo of your
Of all things increasing, as my conscience li'th,
The parson must needs have the tenth for the tithe."

28. "OF A WOMAN OF HUNTINGTON."

"Where dwel'st thou, Sis?" "I dwell at Huntington now." [sow."
"Like so, for thou look'st like a now hunted

“Where dwel’st thou, Sim?” “At Hammer-smith dwell I.” [hard by.”

“A meet soil for thee! for hammer-head is

29. “OF A LAUNDRESS.”

A like laundress to thee, never saw I.
Thy clothes washed but once a week commonly,
Thyself washed once in an hour usually;
And yet each week’s end doth this thus try,
Thy clothes ever wet, thyself ever dry.

30. “OF A CUTTER OF PURSLANE.”

This herb purslane thou cutt’st prettily I see:
But to cut a purse in a lane none like thee.

31. “OF ONE STANDING IN HIS OWN CONCEIT.”

He standeth well in his own conceit each man tells: [else.
So had he need, for he standeth in no man’s

32. “OF ONE THAT HEARD WITHOUT EARS.”

I see men hear though they ears have none:
Thou dost hear me speak, thine ears being
gone.

33. “OF AN ARCHER’S ROVING.”

What a shaft shoots he with a roving arrow!
Still he hits the mark, be it wide or narrow.

“Where shooteth this sharp-shooting archer most, Will?”

“He shooteth most at rovers on Shooter’s Hill.”

34. "OF PERIL TO ONE BY THE NUMBER OF THREE."

In thy hand I see thy fortune shall be such That the number of three shall danger thee much— [thee;
Three bedfellows in thy bed shall displease
Three lice in thy bum breech shall oft disease
thee;
Three cups full at once shall oft disguise thee;
Three bearers of the hum shall oft despise thee;
Three drinks—wine, ale, and beer—shall overflow thee; [thee;
Three wrestlers in one sign shall overthrow
Three wives in three years shall wonderfully wear thee; [tear thee—
Three she-bears those three years shall all to But in things numbered by three, above all these, [three trees.
Bliss thee three thousand times from frame of

35. "OF GLORIA PATRI."

"Dick, I marvel much why, in every plate, Gloria patri standeth before Sicut erat."
"Tom, Gloria patri is a gentleman: [can.
In pleasant speech, speak so sweetly no tongue
Sicut erat is a churl, so rude and plain,
That to hear him speak all degrees do disdain."

36. "OF A DYER."

"Is thy husband a dyer, woman?" "Alack!"
"Had he no colour to dye thee on but black?
Dyeth he oft?" "Yea, too oft when customers call;
But I would have him one day die once for all.
Were he gone, dyer would I never mo wed,
Dyers be ever dyeing, but never dead."

37. "OF A JUG."

"Pot him Jack!" "Pot him Jack?" "Nay, pot him Jug!
 To pot the drunkard, the jug is the dug."

38. "OF THE THREE CUPS."

"Where's thine inn, John?" "At Three Cups in Breadstreet, Joan." [bread alone;
 "At Three Cups in Breadstreet? well, let At those Three Cups whenever thou dines or sups,
 Ere thou go to bed, thou hast in all thy cups!"

39. "OF BRASS AND IRON."

Brass and old iron—who brought those two together? [hither.
 Brass thinketh scorn to see them brought so Old iron is rousty and rotten to view, [new.
 Brass with silver fair blanced and polished

"OTHERWISE."

Brass said to old iron with brass perking late:
 "Back, ye cankered carl, ye be not my mate!" [most tallow;
 "Back, brass," (quoth iron), "plainness is I show as I am: and so dost not thou!"

40. "OF JACK AND JOHN."

Jack and John in degree differ far, brother:
 Jack daw is one, master John Daws is another.

41. "OF WRESTLING."

Where we wrestled by couples, we wrestle alone, [gone.
 And shall, till time our shackled breeches be

In stepping and striding it is a wonder
How we wrestle to get our legs asunder.

42. "OF PRIDE."

If thou wilt needs be proud, mark this, friend
mine :

Of good deeds be not proud ; they are not thine.
But when thou playest the knave, in ill deeds
grown,

Be proud of those ill deeds : they are thine own.

43. "OF ONE HANGED."

"What fault had he done that was hanged yesterday?

Of any fault done by him I can nought say."

"Two or three two-penny trifles were laid to him, [him."

But his fair gay hanged house, man, did undo

"Here is tit for tat, measure met very trim :

First he hanged his house, now his house hath hanged him."

44. "OF A DEBTOR."

"Doth your mastership remember your debt to me? " [thee :

"Remember my debt? yea, friend, I warrant
I remember it so, that though I say it,
I'll never forget it, nor never pay it."

45. "OF LOVING OF A GOOSE."

"A goose, green or gray—which lovest thou better? "

"A green goose : for it is far the sweeter."

"Love both as thyself, for as proof showeth
rife,

Thou art, and hast been, a goose all thy life."

“ OTHERWISE.”

Thou lovest a goose too much : 'ware surfeit,
elf;
I never saw goose yet, like thee, love himself.

46. “ OF HARP-STRINGS.”

“ Which string in all the harp wouldst thou still harp on? ”

“ Not the bass : I will be none underling, John ;
Nor the standing tenor : for stiff standing ;
Nor the treble : for fear of too high hanging ;
Nor the counter tenor : for countering too long.” [harp thy song? ”

“ Upon what harp-string then wouldst thou “ Above all strings, when we shall fall to harping, [string.”

The harp-string to harp on, is the mean harp-

47. “ OF FORTUNE.”

Take thy fortune as it falleth, some adviseth :
But I would fain take fortune as it riseth.

48. “ OF CHOICE.”

Choice is good in most things, folk say ; in which choice, [rejoice :
For choice of one of two things, thou mayest
For man alive, like thee, frank choice can have
To play the knavish fool or the foolish knave.

49. “ OF A FALSE BRAG.”

“ I was never but an honest man.”

“ Put out that but, and thou sayest truth
than.”

50. "OF LYING AND TRUE SAYING."

"Wife, the people are disposed all to lie,
For thou art commended universally."

"Nay, sir! the people, to tell truth, are all
bold,
For you are discommended of young and old."

51. "OF A DAW PATE."

"Thou art a very daw pate, as ever I saw."
"Sir! indeed the pate is chief part of a daw:
For when daws shall appear in any coast,
For all those daws' parts, their daw pates be most."

52. "OF WATER AND WINE."

Thou makest curtsy to wash hands with water of mine, [wine.
Making no curtsy to wash thy mouth with my
But I pray thee make this change in this matter—
More curtsy at my wine, and less at my water.

53. "BETWEEN DOGS AND A DEER."

"Set malice aside," said a buck to a greyhound.
"Beware of pride," said that dog to that deer.
"Be patient in trouble," a hound said round.
Loving advice to this deer this did appear;
In which, counsel given, to kill him they run
near: [seeth:
Which counsel amounteth to this, every man Comfort him with their tongues, kill him with their teeth.

54. "OF TWELVE AND ONE."

"It is twelve o'clock." "Sir! 'tis more, wellnigh one." [alone.]

"Is one more than twelve? that's a reason

"Sir! when the day to afternoon doth amount,
One is more than twelve, by our sexton's account."

55. "OF FARDINGALES."

Alas! poor fardingales must lie in the street:
To house them, no door in the city made meet.
Since at our narrow doors they in cannot win,
Send them to Oxford, at Broadgates to get in.

56. "PRECEPTS OF A MAN TO HIS WIFE."

"Stand still, wife!" "I will:"

"Be still, wife!" "I nill."

"Now bark, wife!" "I will:"

"To wark, wife!" "I nill."

"Prove me, wife!" "I will:"

"Love me, wife!" "I nill."

"Now chat, wife!" "I will:"

"Leave that, wife!" "I nill."

"Keep chair, wife!" "I will:"

"Speak fair, wife!" "I nill."

57. "OF AN EXPERT MAN."

"Is he such an expert man?" "An expert man?" [than.]

Put out that ex, and no man more expert

58. "OF DELIVERANCE FROM ILL."

"Wife! from all evil, when shalt thou delivered be?" [from thee.]

"Sir! when I," (said she), "shall be delivered

59. "OF CUTTING OF THE HERB THYME."

All times of the day, to-night from the prime,
Thou gardener wilt not leave cutting of thyme.
Thou wilt never leave cutting of thyme, I see,
Till such time, as time, shall in time cut off
thee.

60. "OF ONE FEARING THE SWEAT."

Sweating sickness so fearest thou beyond the mark, [wark.
That winter or summer thou never sweatest at

61. "OF ONE THINKING ON ANOTHER."

"When doth your mastership think on me?"
"Ever." ["Never."
"When do you think upon my matter?"
"Me ye remember, my matter ye forget:
Remembrance and forgetfulness is wrong set;
For I would wish you rather, if it might be,
To remember my matter and forget me."

62. "OF ONE BEING AT A POINT."

"Is he at a point with his creditors?" "Yea!
For he is not worth a point they all see."

63. "OF TESTONS."

Testons be gone to Oxford, God be their speed!
To study in Brazennose, there to proceed!

64. "OF RED TESTONS."

These testons look red: how like you the same?
'Tis a token of grace: they blush for shame.

65. "OF STAMPING."

We stamp crabs; we stamp testons: which stamping doon

We stare upon testons now beyond the moon.
Which stamping of testons brought it not some
skill,

Our staring on testons could judge them but ill.
But as the hot sun melteth snow away,
So shall hot fire melt cold testons, as folk say.
We, for testons leaving scolding and squaring,
And on testons leaving stamping and staring.

66. "OF JOHN LONG THE CARRIER."

"Of what length is John Long the carrier, Prat?" [thou that?"

"A quarter of a year long." "How provest
"Thirteen weeks past he should have brought me a wat; [cometh nat.

But yet 'long, John, John Long with that wat Whereby I, John Short, am as short to compare,

As John Long by this length is long to declare.
For as John Long lurketh too long this wat to
fet,

So I John Short leap too short this wat to get.

67. "OF TURNING."

"Wilt thou use turner's craft still?" "Yea,
by my troth! [grow'th.

Much thrift and most surety in turner's craft Half turn, or whole turn, where turners be turning, [ing."

Turning keeps turners from hanging and burn-

68. "OF MASTER CARTER."

"Is that gentleman's name Master Carter?"

"Yea!" [see!

"How his name and conditions differ now,
So cunning, so comely, so courteous, so kind,
So gentle a gentleman in each man's mind
That all men are stricken in pitiful wonder
To see Master Carter and the cart asunder."

69. "OF GOING FAR."

As he goeth far that never doth turn him back,
So goest thou far wide: thou never turnest
again.

Where thou goest, or what thou doest, come luck, come lack,

Thyself or thy matters forth they go amain.

To turn again no counsel can thee strain;

Except thy will shall show thy wit in the wane, [lane.

Find means to take a house in Turn-again

70. "HOW MONEY IS MADE LAME."

"Money, with covetousness, thou dost rest so That lack of use doth lame thee: thou canst not go;

With prodigality thou trudgest so fast

That excess of too much exercise doth lame thee at last.

These two being lame lets of extremities,

Where wouldst thou be 'lotted to be from both these?"

"With liberality would I be the mean."

"With liberality? nay, he is gone clean."

71. "OF AN OLD WOOER."

"Lady, I love you, in way you to wed:
But mine age with your youth disagreeeth so
That, if I speak, I think not to be sped."
"Your age in your suit is no whit your foe;
To your years many, had ye many mo,
We would wed the sooner by years; showing
plain
That I should the sooner be unwed again."

72. "OF A YOUNG WOOER."

"I brought thee late an old, rich widow to woo; [wouldst thou then do;
Whom thou mightest have had, but nought Nor nought canst thou do now; thrift and thou art odd;
For now lieth she speechless at mercy of God."
"For the mercy of God bring me now to her;
I never saw meet time, till now, to woo her."

73. "OF WEAKNESS AND STRENGTH."

Weakness and strength, here showest thou both in preef:
Thou art a weak man and yet a strong thief.

74. "WARNING OF PRIDE."

Beware of pride, sayest thou to me?
Let pride, say I, beware of thee.
In every place thou dost so watch him,
That if pride stir, thou wilt sure catch him.

75. "OF PATIENCE."

Be patient in trouble—how can that be?
Since out of trouble nothing pleaseth thee?

76. "OF PLEASING."

"Be glad to please?" "Yea, be glad to please, brother!"

"But whom?" "Please thyself, see thou please none other."

77. "OF A HAND-GUN AND A HAND."

Thou hast a good hand-gun, but what's thy hand [stand?

When thou shootest off[t], out of danger to
No standing more sure, in any place or plat,
Than to stand close to the mark thou shootest at.

78. "OF BRASS AND SILVER."

Brass hath been aloft, with silver set up.
Come down, brass, and drink on an ashen cup!

79. "OF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN WISE MEN AND FOOLS."

Between wise men and fools, among things many [any

This one differeth, when both sorts get things
Which to their pleasures are pleasantly allowed— [be proud.

Of those things won, wise men are glad, fools

80. "OF A PITHY WIT."

Good God! what a pithy wit hast thou, Dick!
The pith of thy words so deep and so trick,
Thy words so pithily pierce to the quick,
Pith of no words against thy words may kick,
No more than the pith of a gunstone may prick

Against the pithy pith of an elder stick.

81. "OF CHOICE TO BE A WISE MAN OR A FOOL."

"A wise man or a fool: if thou must be one,
Which wouldst thou be in winter, John?"

"A fool, Joan. [cold,
Where best men in winter sit next fire from There stands the fool warm while all his tales be told."

"Which wouldst thou be in summer, when winter is gone?" [showeth hereupon:

"A fool!" "A fool, why?" "That why
In summer when states sit from fire in the cool,
At that board's end in cool air there stands the fool."

[work,
"Winter and summer what time men must to Which wouldst thou be?" "A fool, to look on and lurk:

All times of the year, for one thing or other,
Better be a fool than a wise man, brother!"

82. "OF A KNIGHT'S CARTERLY COLLAR."

I bade this carter bring my collar of gold:
And he bringeth me my horse-collar—"Hold,
knave, hold!" [ing,
"Sir, if I may speak my thought without fear-
This collar of both showeth best for your wearing."

83. "OF MALES AND MALE HORSES."

Of all horses, a male horse would I not be;
Where he erst bare one male, now beareth he three;

Those are: one behind, and one on each side.
The man, who on the male horse doth ride,

Weareth on each leg one male; for his slops are,
Each one slop one male (kindly to declare)—
Long, round, wide, weighty as a male each
one.

But all horses are now male horses every one;
For every one horse beareth two males at least— [feast.
Of male horses and male men, friends here's a

84. "A MAN DISCOMMENDED."

Not once a year ought seen in thee to allow:
Not once a year thy knee to God dost thou bow;

Not once a year openest thou thy lips to pray;
Not once a year showest thou goodness any way;

Not once a year givest thou alms to the poor;
Not once a year dost thou repent thee therefore; [stood

But all times a year thou wouldst all under-Thou never dost repent, but when thou dost
good.

85. "OF RUNNING."

"In post haste run, whoreson, run! Art thou here yet?" [of thy wit."

"Shall I run out of breath?" "Nay, run out

86. "OF POLLING."

Our heads grow too long, God give our barbers curses; [purses.

Our barbers poll no heads, our barbers poll

87. "OF PLATE LENT FORTH."

"Where is thy plate?" "Lent out to a marriage."

“ Whither? ” “ To Saint Needs. ” “ To whom? ” “ To Master Gage. ”

88. “ OF A MAN OF LAW AND HIS WIFE. ”

You, being a pleader at law excellent,
Yet hath your wife brought you to an exigent.
Pray her to let fall th'action at law now,
Or else, so God help me ! she will overlaw yow.

89. “ OF PENS AND PENCE. ”

Pens and pence differ far in proportion—
The penny flat and round, the pen straight and
And yet for aids, in case of extortion, [long.
Pens and pence are like in working of wrong.

90. “ OF A WOMAN'S THIN TONGUE. ”

“ I never saw wife like thine for this thing,
Dick— [wondrous thick. ”
Her tongue wondrous thin, and her speech “ Tom, I have spent much in vain, since she was young, [tongue. ”
To have her thick speech as thin as her “ It is the tongue of tongues, Dick, for running round ;
I take the tip for silver, by the shrill sound. ”
“ It hath, Tom, a shaking sharp sound in the
But it is no silver, would God it were ! ” [ear,

91. “ OF DRINKING TO A MAN. ”

“ I drink to thee, John. ” “ Nay, thou drinkest from me, Joan ; [leavest none. ”
When thou drinkest to me, drink for me thou

92. “ OF RUNNING AT TILT. ”

We apply the spigot till tub stand a-tilt.

Yea, run at the spigot tilt, leave the spear tilt thou wilt.

93. "OF EXPENSE."

"What may he spend?" "Ten pound a year he might spend." [penny lend "Is't mortgaged?" "Nay; no man will one Upon it." "Is't sold?" "Nay; no man will buy it."
"Then he holdeth it?" "Nay; he cannot come nigh it."
"Why, fool! how may he spend ten pound
by year than?" [man;
"I said not, he may, but he might spend it, Meaning, he might spend it if he had it."
"O, if he had it—a sir, the devil made it!"

94. "OF FRAYING OF BABES."

When do mothers fray their babes most from dugs? [bear bugs.
When they put on black scarves, and go like

95. "OF REEDS AND OAKS."

"Will you reeds at the wind's will still make low becks? [your necks?
Will you oaks stand stiff still while wind break
Will you reeds, like apes, still tuck and bow each joint? [one point?
Will you oaks, like asses, still stand stiff at
Will you reeds be still bending bowing bodies?
Will you oaks be still stout stiff-necked noddies? [avails?
Will you reeds be staggering still for vain
Will you oaks be stern still till your tops kiss your tails? [towardly?
Will you reeds shrink still to all winds

Will you oaks swell still at all winds forwardly? [footstools?
 Will you reeds crouch still to be the wind's
 Will you oaks crake still to be the wind's head fools? " [reeds.
 " Oaks will do as we have done; so will we Wherein, for our purpose, mark what end proceeds: [blown;
 In each one storm a thousand oaks down are
 In a thousand storms not one reed overthrown."

96. "OF BUYING A MORTAR."

"That spice mortar to sell it be you willing?"
 "Yea, mistress?" "What's the price?"
 "Ten shilling."
 "Ten shilling? Friend! I am hither enticed
 To buy a spice mortar, not a mortar spiced."

97. "OF A STEPMOTHER."

Thy father's second wife, thy stepmother—
 For a stepmother there's not such another.
 At three steps I saw her step, since she was wed, [head.
 From a stair foot, straight up to thy father's

98. "OF A LIAR."

"Where doth Francis Fabler now lie, Jane?"
 "At sign of the Whetstone, in Double-Tongue
 Lane,
 He lieth by night; and, by day, daily he Lieth down right in what place soever he be.
 That he lieth still day and night, this thing doth try—
 He never speaketh word but it is a lie.

99. "OF TONGUES AND PINSONS."

One difference this is on which our tongues
may carp, [sharp;
Between pinching pinsons and taunting tongues
Where these two nippers nip anywhere or when,
Those pinsons nip dead things, those tongues nip quick men.

100. "OF HEYWOOD."

"Art thou Heywood with the mad merry wit?" [hit."
"Yea, forsooth, master! that same is even "Art thou Heywood that applieth mirth more than thrift?"
"Yea, sir! I take merry mirth a golden gift."
"Art thou Heywood that hath made many mad plays?" [days."
"Yea, many plays; few good works in all my
"Art thou Heywood that hath made men merry long?"
"Yea, and will, if I be made merry among."
"Art thou Heywood that would be made merry
now?"
"Yea, sir! help me to it now I beseech yow."

To the reader.

Readers, read this thus : for Preface, Proface.
Much good do it you : the poor repast here,
A six hundred dishes I bring in place
To make good welfare, nay to make good cheer. [dear,
Fare is food : cheer is mirth : since meat is Not of meat but of mirth, come young come
old,
Come who come will, here is open household.

THE SIXTH HUNDRED OF EPIGRAMS

I. "OF REBELLION."

Against God I daily offend by frailty ;
But against my prince, or native country,
With as much as bodkin, when I rebel,
The next day after hang me up fair and well.
The next day after? nay, the next day before Wish thou thyself hanged, in that case, evermore.

Before, thou hangest honestly unworthily ;
After, thou hangest worthily dishonestly.
But ho ! at our first dish in our merry feast
Why talk we of hanging our mirth to molest ?
Be our cheese no better than our pottage is,
Better fast than feast at such feasts as is this.
But being true to God, queen, country, and crown, [down.
We shall at all feasts, not hang up, but sit

" OTHERWISE."

Wilt thou be taken for a true Englishman ?
Yea ? be true to God, thy queen, and country than. [it ;
Stand fast by thy country whoever would win
Better stand fast by it than hang fast in it.

2. "OF TONGUE, MOUTH, TEETH, AND WISDOM."

The tongue is assigned of words to be sorter;
The mouth is assigned to be the tongue's
dorter; [porter;
The teeth are assigned to be the tongue's
But wisdom is 'signed to tie the tongue shorter.

3. "OF SILVER TO BE BORROWED."

"Hast thou any bowed silver to lend me,
Joan?" [me?" "None."
"Nay." "Hast thou any broken silver for
"Hast thou any clipped silver?" "I had,
but 'tis gone."
"Hast thou any cracked groat?" "Cracked groat? nay, not one." [nor cut—
"No silver—bowed, broken, clipped, cracked, Here's a friend for friendship, not worth a cracked nut."

4. "OF AN UNKINDLY MARCH."

This like March? as like as I am a March hare.
March is not so like March, friend; I would it were. [thee,
Though shape of the March hare show not in Yet hast thou the March hare's mad property.

5. "OF GOING TO HEAVEN AND HELL."

Of heaven or of hell, which go folk fastest to?
To hell, fool! to hell go far more fast they do.
The highway to both lieth thus as clerks tell,
Uphill to heavenward, downhill to hell.

6. "OF THE HIGHWAY AND A MAID'S FACE."

The more the highway is washed the fouler it is : this !
Maid, the highway and thy face are like in

7. "OF ONE THAT WOULD BE PRAISED."

"Wouldst thou be praised?" "Yea."
"Why?" "Praise pleaseth me well."
"Yea, but how doth desert of praise please thee, tell!"

8. "OF LOOKING."

"Look upward to heaven, my friend; what!
where lookest thou?"
"Sir, I was looking downward to hell for you."

9. "OF A HARE AFOOT."

I hear by the hounds the hare is afoot;
Then must she to horseback, none other boot.
Nothing doth more a hare's hope of life quail
Than doth a hound's nose nigh a hare's tail.

10. "OF HOB AND JOHN."

Horse and harness up, on all hands! Hob and John.
Hob and John? Nay, Lob and John would now be gone; [start,
But, till your prince stir you to harness to Harness you your horse, and get ye to the cart.

11. "OF SEEKING A DAW."

"I have sought far to find a daw." "Why, thou elf! [thyself."
When thou wouldst quickly find a daw, seek

“What is Domine Daw in English to say?”
 “No mo daws; thou Daw art daws enough for this day.”

12. “OF SAYING GRACE.”

To say grace fair, and to say grace oft, John,
 From Gracechurch to Grantham thy like there's
 none.

At breakfast, at dinner, at supper, at all,
 At sitting, at rising, have grace we shall.
 There's no man alive, in house, street, or field,
 That saith grace so oft, and showeth grace so seeld.

13. “OF DEBT.”

What difference in true debt, and blue debt, to rate?
 Difference as in distance Ludgate and Newgate.

14. “OF STEPPING.”

In stepping one foot back, stepping forward
 twain,

My steps so stepped are not stepped in vain.
 If one backstep be as much as foresteps three,
 By your stout stepping your winning let us see.
 Where wide-striding stepping gets no gain ought worth, [forth.
 As good to stand stone-still, as step one step

15. “OF WRITING A GENTLEMAN.”

Thou writest thyself gentleman in one word,
 brother!
 But gentle is one word, and man is another.

16. "OF A WIFE'S AFFECTION TO HER HUSBAND."

I ween there's no wife like the wife of thine—
Thy body being hers, yet doth she incline,
Fairest, or foulest, whom fancy doth prefer,
To take whom thou list, so thou touch not her.

17. "OF A MAN'S THRIFT."

Lord! what thrift ariseth in thy behalf?
Thy sow great with pig; thy cow great with calf; [whelp;
Thy ewe great with lamb; thy bitch great with Thy cat great with kit (and more increase to help); [thrift, fool!
Thy wife great with child; and to show thy Thy mare great with foal; and thyself great with fool.

18. "OF LEARNING THE LAW."

Thou wilt learn the law wherever thou be—Lincoln's Inn, or Lincoln town, both one to
thee.

19. "OF GOOD WILL AND GOOD DEEDS."

Is good will the best part of a friend? nay, nay! [may.
Beggars with lords so, for friendship compare
Good deeds by good will had, differ there,
brother!
A pudding prick is one, a millpost is another.

20. "OF NEWGATE WINDOWS."

All Newgate windows bay-windows they be;
All lookers out there stand at bay we see.

21. "OF TREADING A SHOE AWRY."

My wife doth ever tread her shoe awry.
 Inward, or outward? nay, all outwardly:
 She treadeth so outward, that if she outwin,
 She will by her will never tread foot within.

22. "OF A FAIR SOW."

I never saw a fairer sow in my life.
 Ah sir, thy sow is even as fair as thy wife!

23. "OF PRAYER."

Some pray familorum familiarum:
 Some say, that is folorum, solarum.

24. "OF CHEESE."

I never saw Banbury cheese thick enough;
 But I have oft seen Essex cheese quick enough.

25. "OF A LEASE."

Thy lease of Freshwharf bindeth thee there to dwell; [tell.
 Which thou hast forfeited, as thy neighbours
 These four years at Freshwharf, as folk consider, [together.
 Thou hast not been fresh full four hours

26. "OF STOCKS."

Thy upper stocks, be they stuffed with silk or flocks,
 Never become thee like a nether pair of stocks.

27. "A TAUNT OF A WIFE TO HER HUSBAND."

"Wife, I ween thou art drunk or lunatic!"
 "Nay, husband! women are never moonsick;

Come that conjunction in time, late, or soon,
We say, not the woman, the man in the moon."

28. "OF PRIDE."

Fie on pride when men go naked: naked or clothed,
Pride is in all men a thing to be loathed;
But yet may we see, though it do ill accord,
Some naked beggar as proud as some clothed lord.

29. "TO WALK, TALK, DRINK, OR SLEEP."

Walk groundly;
Talk profoundly;
Drink roundly;
Sleep soundly.

30. "OF A LANTHORN AND LIGHT."

A lanthorn and a light maid—mannerly said:
But which to be light? the lanthorn, or the maid.

31. "OF A CRY."

Thou lost'st a mark in issues, criers cry—
Cry not so for me, crier! and mark this, why?
I would rather give thee a gown of tissue
Than be in dread to lese my mark in issue.

32. "OF A WATERMAN'S ROWING."

Thy fares over the water thou shouldst row
them,
But under the water thou dost bestow them.

33. "OF TONGUE AND WIT."

Thou hast a swift-running tongue; howbeit,

Thy tongue is nothing so quick as thy wit.
Thou art, when wit and tongue in running contend,
At thy wits' end ere thou be at the tale's end.

34. "OF A PAINTER."

Thou art the painter of painters, mark who shall,
In making and setting colours above all,
No painter painting within England's bounds,
Can set so fair colours upon so foul grounds.

35. "OF PETER AND PAUL."

I dwell from the city in suburbs at rowles;
I pray to Saint Peter to bring me near Powles.
Alas, thou pray'st all in vain, poor silly fool—
Peter will set no hand to bring thee to Poule.

36. "OF LOSS OF HEALTH AND WEALTH."

How lost you your health?
That gluttony tell'th.
How lost you your wealth?
That lost I by stealth.
Who was your wealth's wringer?
My thumb and my finger.

37. "OF LOOKING OUT."

Stand in and look out; hang out and look not out—
Newgate and Tyburn do bring both these about.

38. "OF CHAFING DISHES."

Wife, all thy dishes be chafing dishes placed;
For thou chafest at sight of every dish thou hast.

39. "OF HANGING AND STANDING."

Whether wilt thou hang up with ropes of inions?

Or stiffly stand up with roperipe minions?

Forsooth! both for number and stuff, truly cast, [last.

As good hang with the first as stand with the

40. "OF A MAN'S HEAD AND THE PILLORY."

Upon the pillory, your worshipful head

Unto the pillory doth worship far spread,

Which worship the pillory requiteth ill now;

For, as you worship it, so it shameth yow.

41. "A PRAISE OF ONE."

See how some above some other praises win—
I praise thee for one thing above all thy kin.

They, without teaching could never practise ought; [taught.

Thou canst play the knave, and never was

42. "OF DIVERS BANDS."

"All kinds of bands to be bound in being scanned, [or husband—

Headband, smockband, flailband, houseband,

Which shall bind thee?" "Not the last on sea
nor land; [stand."

Before husband's bands, in devil's bands I will

43. "OF COVENANTS, &C."

Many poses without apposition;

Many covenants without good condition;

Many promises without good payment;

Many arbitraments without good dayment.

44. "OF PROMISE AND PAYMENT."

"May I trust that he promised?"

"Yea: scantily to be performed."

"Promiseth he thrice or he once pay?"

"Sometimes he doth; but not alway.

Some things he promiseth to pay ever;

Which things so promised he payeth never."

45. "OF ONE THAT DARE NOT STEAL."

"Thou borrowest, and thou beggest, but when wilt thou steal?"

"Never; for to be hanged, sir, I have no zeal."

"Thou wouldst steal if thou durst?" "Yea, but I dare not." [care not;

"Well then, for thy hanging, in this world
And in the world to come, as well thou shalt speed [indeed."

For good will to steal as thou hadst stolen

46. "OF THE CREATION OF THE DEVIL'S DAM."

When was the devil's dam created, th'old withered jade? [made,

The next leap-year after wedding was first
In an ill time; when the devil will that devil die,

At that year's end, that endeth wedding finally.

47. "OF REWARD TO A SERVING MAN."

"Wait well; thy master will do for thee I wis:
Canst thou spy nothing to ask of him?"

"Yis;

But when I ask I cannot have that I crave."

"No? ask him blessing, and that shalt thou surely have."

48. "TWO PROPERTIES OF A SERVANT."

Whoso that hath a good servant, keep him
well—

Well must I keep thee then, by this that I tell.
Singular in many things; in this above all—
To take thy wages great, and make thy service small.

49. "OF TOUGHNESS AND TENDERNESS."

For toughness and tenderness both in one man seen, [been.

One like your mastership few or none hath Axe ought of ye: then are ye so tart and tough
That your taunts would touch a horse's heart
most rough. [you;

Give ought to ye: thus tender and meek are Tears, like tears from your eyes, your knees to ground bow.

50. "A QUESTION TO A CHILD."

"Who is thy father, child?" axt his mother's husband. [stand."

"Axe my mother," (quoth he), "that to under-
"The boy dallieth with you, sir; for, verily!
He knoweth who is his father as well as I."

The man, of this child's wit was wrapped in such joy [boy.

That he knew not what he might make of the

51. "SEEKING FOR A DWELLING-PLACE."

Still thou seekest for a quiet dwelling-place:
What place for quietness hast thou now in chase? [water.

London Bridge? That's ill for thee, for the Queenhithe? That's more ill for another matter.

Smart's Key? That's most ill for fear of smarting smart.

Carter Lane? Nay, nay! that soundeth all on the cart. [the chain.

Powles Chain? Nay, in no wise dwell not near Wood Street? Why wilt thou be wood yet once again?

Bread Street? That's too dry; by drought thou shalt be dead.

Philpot Lane? That breedeth moist humours in thy head. [fie!

Silver Street? Coppersmiths in Silver Street; Newgate Street? 'Ware that, man! Newgate is hard by.

Faster Lane? Thou wilt as soon be tied fast, as fast.

Crooked Lane? Nay, crook no more, be straight at last. [against brother.

Creed Lane? They fall out there, brother

Ave Mary Lane? That's as ill as the t'other.

Paternoster Row? Paternoster Row?

Agreed! that's the quietest place that I know.

52. "OF THREE SOULS."

Thou hast three souls in charge: thy body soul one; [alone.

Thy feet soles twain; but let thy feet soles Discharge thy body soul, and feet soles, poor elves, [themselves.

They shall pay their own fees and discharge

53. "OF ONE SAYING OF A HAT."

"Said he that hat on his head?" "Nay! chance so led

That by that time the hat came, he had no head."

54. "OF BUYING A COAT."

"I must buy a new coat for shame."
 "To get shame?" "Nay, t'avoid the same."
 "T'avoid shame? Thou mayest desire it,
 But ten new coats will not hire it."

55. "OF PARING NAILS."

"Pare my nails, wife!" "Nay, man! if your nails fail, [scab'd tail?"
 Where can ye find friends to scratch your "Pare thine own nails then; for, as they be led, [head."
 They prove fiendly friends in scratching my
 "That may be; but, as those words are soon spoken,
 So even as soon is a scal'd man's head broken."

56. "OF A MAN'S HEAD."

Thy head is great, and yet seemeth that head
 but thin;
 Without hair without, and without wit within.

57. "OF MONEY IN ONE'S PURSE."

He hath in his purse forty or fifty pound.
 Put n to or, and mark then how that doth sound.

58. "OF FRIENDS AND FOES."

The devil shall have friends; and, as good reason goes [have foes.
 That the devil shall have friends as God shall

59. "OF DIFFERENCE IN SUNDRY THINGS."

Small difference between receiving and taking :

Great difference between marrying and making.

Small difference between sighing and sobbing :

Great difference between bassing and bobbing.

Small difference between fair looks and fair words : [swords.

Great difference between blunt words and sharp

Small difference between talking and telling :

Great difference between smarting and smelling. [ing :

Small difference between true love and trust-

Great difference between rubbing and rusting.

Small difference between lowering and snowing : [ing.

Great difference between laughing and lowering-

Small difference between waste-ware and weeds : [deeds.

Great difference between good words and good

Small difference between closeness and concealing :

Great difference between giving and stealing.

60. "OF CALLING ONE FLIBERGIBET."

"Thou flibergibet !" "Flibergibet, thou wretch ! [doth stretch?

Wott'st thou whereto last part of that word

Leave that word or I'll baste ye with a libet ;

Of all words I hate words that end with gibet."

61. "OF CROWS BREEDING."

I would wish some good provision, to provide
That crows should never breed by the highway's side.

They so mistrust every man to steal their birds,
That no man can 'scape their opprobrious words.

No man passeth by, whatsoever he be,
But those crows beknave him to the ninth degree. [and raves,

Should the crow's word stand when he rages
We should have in England forty thousand knaves.

62. "OF POWLES."

Thanks to God and good people Powles goeth up well:

Powles goeth up? but when goeth polling down: that tell!

63. "OF A CROW-KEEPER."

There be many called crow-keepers; but, indeed, seed;

There's no crow-keeper but thou in time of Where others keep crows out, like starvelings forlorn,

To keep crows in plight, thou keepest crows
in the corn.

64. "OF RAPE-SEED."

"Hast thou any rape-seed?" "Yea; if you to rape fruit fall, [mixed withal."

Here is rape-seed; but there's hemp-seed

65. "OF RED ROSES."

"What think ye worth one bushel of red roses?" [noses."

"More worth than are two bushels of red

66. "OF PENNYROYAL."

"I seek pennyroyal: have ye any?"

"Seek further; I have neither royal nor penny."

67. "OF MARJORUM."

"Hast any marjorum, gentle?" "Yea, indeed;

But it is somewhat mingled with nettle-seed."

68. "OF POPPY."

"Let's see poppy-seed." "My poppy-seed is gone; [alone!"

But, for your ground, I have puppy-seed

69. "OF THYME-SEED."

"Have ye any thyme-seed?" "Thyme-seed? yea, by rood! [good."

But it is so mistimed that it bringeth no thyme

70. "OF RUE."

"I would have a groatworth of your seed of rue." [new."

"Ye shall have rue-seed enough, both old and

71. "LIVERWORT."

"What lack you, sir?" "Liverwort-seed I come to crave." [have."

"Liverwort I have none; but lipwort-seed I

72. "OF PINEAPPLE."

"Hast thou any graffs of the pineapple-tree?"

"Yea; pining graffs, great growers as can be."

73. "OF HEARTSEASE."

"Have you any heartsease-seed?" "Yea, for God, I! [buy?"
But what other ware with heartsease will ye "None." "Then have I no heartsease for you, brother. [another;
We seed-sellers must sell seeds one with
To buy heartsease-seed of me, that no man shall, [withal."
Except he buy some seeds of arse-smart

74. "OF PARSNIP-SEED."

Here is parsnip-seed that will nip you, as near
As ye were nipped with any parsnip this year.

75. "OF ANISEED."

This aniseed is brown; but, to occupy,
Brown Anne's as sweet, as white Anne's, like
I.

76. "OF LETTUCE-SEED."

"I would buy lettuce-seed for my garden, Joan." [none.
"Lettuce-seeds? forsooth, good master! I have
But put out u c e, and these seeds, I'll avow, Best seeds in England for your garden and
you."

77. "OF GOOD NEWS TO A MAN."

"What news?" "Good news for thee as wit can scan;
We have news that thou art an honest man.
This news coming even now thus fresh and new,

All men take for good; no man taketh for true."

78. "OF LEAST AND MOST MASTERY."

"What is the least mastery thou canst devise?" [wise."

"Least mastery is a fool to ween himself

"What is the most mastery that thy wit spies?"

"The most mastery is, to make a fool wise."

79. "OF A MAN AND A CLOCK."

Men take man of earthly things most excellent,
But in one thing thou seemest under that extent:

A clock after noon above thee I avow—

A clock can go alone then; so canst not thou.

80. "OF A SPARE HORSE."

"Hast thou any spare horse, to lend me one?"

"A spare horse? There's one; take him and begone."

Saddled and bridled he was, and with that,
As the man leapt up, the horse fell down flat.

He fell without help; but then up to get,
Five men were too few him on foot to set.

"A spare horse," (quoth he), "the devil may spare him;

He that shall occupy him must bear him."

"Since this spare horse will not serve thee,
brother!

Yet of my spare horses here's another."

Up leapt the man, hence ran the horse amain;

In ten miles galloping he turned not again.

For judgment in spare horse, let this be compared :
Run ever, run never—which may best be [spared?

81. "OF A HUSBAND HANGED."

"Is thy husband hanged?" "He was; but he is nat;
In spite of his foes I found friends to ease that.
For or my dear heart had hanged fully hours twain,
I gat his pardon and cut him down again."

82. "OF HORSADOWN."

"Hiredst thou not this horse at Horsadown?" "Yis!"
"Where is Horsadown?" "That mayest thou learn by this : [field, town,
In high way, low way, fair way, foul way,
Wheresoever this horse is, there is Horsadown!"

83. "OF A COCK AND A CAPON."

A brave capon by a brag cock late being,
The proud cock thinking scorn, the same so seeing,
Said to the capon: "What thou barren bastard!
Perkest thou with me here as I were a hascard?
Where I—comely, combed, crowing, cocking cock—
Am husband or father to all this whole flock."
"What," (quoth the capon), "thou lewd lecherous wretch!
These chickens all for thine benefit thou this brag to stretch? [alone!
As though there were but one treading cock

Yes, cock, yes ! there be mo treading cocks than one ; [avaunt,
 But since thou thus proudly dost make this
 To repress thy pride, take this tale for a taunt.
 I have of mine own—I treading hens never—
 As many chickens as thou, treading thy hens ever.” [dead ;
 This strake the cock in a deep dump, dull and Having a still tongue he had a busy head.
 Two days after this, he trod not nor fed not,
 His comb sore cut ; but thanks to God ! it bled
 not.

84. “ OF DISDAIN.”

“ Is’t mastery to disdain things by envy’s school? ”
 “ Nay, nay ! no more mastery than to be a fool.”

85. “ OF PETER.”

Peter the proud, and Peter the poor, in which,
 Poor Peter oft as proud as Peter the rich.

86. “ OF ONE IN NEWGATE.”

“ Art thou in Newgate to stand to thy tackling? ” [ling.”
 “ Nay ; I am in Newgate to stand to my shack-

87. “ OF SAVING OF SHOES.”

Thou wearest, (to wear thy wit and thrift together),
 Moils of velvet to save thy shoes of leather.
 Oft have we seen moil men ride upon asses ;
 But to see asses go on moils : that passes.

88. "OF HOGSTOWN."

The head man in Hogstown, hogherd is expressed ;
 [best.
 Where hogs be parishioners, hogherd must be Yet hogshead in Hogstown is no John-a-droin, Pigs dare not quich there, if hogshead hang the groin.

89. "OF COLE-PROPHET."

Thy prophecy poisonly to the prick goeth :
 Cole-prophet and cole-poison thou art both.

90. "OF THINGS UNLIKE."

Like will to like, men say ; but not always so :
 Contrary to contrary ofttimes doth go.
 When folk be most open, their low parts most loose,
 Then go they to stools that be made most close.

91. "OF THE GENTLENESS OF A WIFE."

Thy wife is as gentle as a falcon : true !
 And namely in this kind of gentleness : Hugh !
 Being not hungry, lower falcons when ye list,
 They will check oft, but never come to the fist.

92. "OF CATCHING A FLY."

A boy on his book clapped hand to catch a fly.
 "Hast her?" cried his master. "Nay, God wot I."
 "Then thou shalt drink !" "Master, I have her, I think." [shalt drink."
 "If thou have her," said the master, "thou
 To furious masters, what helpeth fair speeches?
 Flies caught, or not caught, up go boys'
 breeches !

93. "OF A HORSE WEARING GREAT
BREECHES."

My horse to wear great breeches is now assigned :

Why? to keep him from interfering behind.

94. "OF A RECKONING AT A SHOT."

"Give us a reckoning upon this pot filling :
What have we to pay in all?" "Ten shilling!"

"What cometh our meat to?" "Four shillings, up and down!"

"What is drink?" "Six shillings; that's to say a French crown."

"Why? Have we drunk more than we have eaten, knave?"

"Yea, as many other men, many times have."
Look wheresoever malt is above wheat,
There in shot ever drink is above meat.

95. "OF USE."

Use maketh mastery: this hath been said
alway;

But all is not alway, as all men do say, [rote;
In April the cuckoo can sing her song by
In June, out of tune, she cannot sing a note :
At first, cuckoo, cuckoo, sing still can she do,
At last cuck, cuck, cuck—six cucks to one cu.

96. "OF ONE ASKING FOR SHEEP."

"Came there any sheep this way, you sheepish maids?" "Nay; [way."

But even as you came, there came a calf this

97. "OF WALKING AND TALKING."

Walk thou narrowly, walk thou nearly—
 Walk as thy walk may end cheerily.
 Talk thou basely, talk thou boldly—
 In all thy talk, talk thou coldly.
 Walk thou wetly, walk thou dryly—
 In thy walk, walk not too highly.
 Talk thou merrily, talk thou sadly—
 Talk as thy talk may take end gladly.
 Walk thou daily, walk thou weekly—
 In all thy walk, walk thou meekly.
 Talk thou softly, talk thou loudly—
 In any talk, talk not proudly.
 Walk thou firstly, walk thou lastly—
 Walk in the walk that standeth fastly.
 Talk or walk oldly or newly—
 Talk and walk plainly and truly.

98. "OF SEEING AND FEELING MONEY."

"Lacking spectacles, canst thou see money, John?"
 "Yea : but having spectacles I can feel none."

99. "OF TAKING THINGS WRONG."

"Perceived and taken things right, thou hast
 long, [wrong :
 But for one thing in thee long since taken Thy credit is touched, and thou thereby the worse."
 "What thing sayest thou have I taken wrong?" "A purse."

100. "OF A NUMBER OF RATS MISTAKEN FOR DEVILS IN A MAN'S SLOPS."

A big breeched man, fearing a dear year to come, [bum.
Bestowed in his breech a cheese, hard by his
And, leaving off those hose for days two or three, [be Rats two or three crept into that breech; they 'Pointing themselves of that cheese to be keepers: [sleepers.
In which ware watch be sure they were no
No wight riding men, from Sandwich to Sarum, Could win that cheese from them without a larum. [on,
At three days' end this man, putting these hose
Having tied his points, the rats began anon
To start and to stir that breech round about;
To seek and find some way, what way to get out.
But that breech was bolstered so with such broad bars,
Such cranks, such cony holes, such cuts and such stars, [fast
With ward within ward, that the rats were as
As though they with thieves in Newgate had been cast. [fumbling,
But this man, in his breech feeling such Such rolling, such rumbling, joisting and jumbling,
He was therewith stricken in a frantic fear;
Thinking sure to himself that some sprites were
there.
He ran out, he cried out, without coat or cloak,
Those rats in those rags whined like pigs in a poke.

“ A conjuror,” cried he, “ in all haste I beseech, [breech ! ”
To conjure the devil : the devil is in my Running, and turning in and out as he flung,
One of the rats by the ribs he so wrung,
That the rat in rage to his buttock gat her ;
She set in her teeth, his eyes ran a-water.
She bote, he cried, dogs barked, the people shouted, [doubted.
Horns blew, bells rang, the devil dreaded and To be in his breech to bring him straight to hell— [tell.
The woe and wonder whereof—too much to
At last to see what bugs in his breech frayed
him, [him.
Four or five manful men, manfully stayed
The rats hopping out at his hose pulling off,
All this sad matter turned to merry scoff.
When he saw these rats by this cheese brought this fear,
Rejoicing the 'scape he solemnly did swear
That in his breech should come no cheese after
that,
Except in his breech he were sure of a cat.

A DESCRIPTION OF A MOST NOBLE LADY

ADVISED BY JOHN HEYWOOD, PRESENTLY ; WHO ADVERTISING HER YEARS, AS FACE, SAITH OF HER THUS, IN MUCH ELOQUENT PHRASE :

Give place, ye ladies ! all be gone ;
Show not yourselves at all.
For why ? behold ! there cometh one Whose face yours all blank shall.

The virtue of her looks Excels the precious stone ;
Ye need none other books
To read, or look upon.

In each of her two eyes
There smiles a naked boy ;
It would you all suffice
To see those lamps of joy.

If all the world were sought full far,
Who could find such a wight ?
Her beauty twinkleth like a star
Within the frosty night.

Her colour comes and goes—
With such a goodly grace,
More ruddy than the rose—
Within her lively face.

Amongst her youthful years
She triumphs over age;
And yet she still appears
Both witty, grave, and sage.

I think nature hath lost her mould
Where she her form did take;
Or else I doubt that nature could
So fair a creature make.

She may be well compared Unto the phoenix kind;
Whose like hath not been heard
That any now can find.

In life a Dian chaste;
In truth Penelope;
In word and deed steadfast—
What need I more to say?

At Bacchus' feast none may her meet;
Or yet at any wanton play;
Nor gazing in the open street,
Or wandering, as astray.

The mirth that she doth use
Is mixed with shamefastness;
All vices she eschews,
And hateth idleness.

It is a world to see
How virtue can repair,
And deck such honesty
In her that is so fair.

Great suit to vice may some allure
That thinks to make no fault;
We see a fort had need be sure
Which many doth assault.

They seek an endless way
That think to win her love;
As well they may assay
The stony rock to move.

For she is none of those
That sets not by evil fame;
She will not lightly lose
Her truth and honest name.

How might we do to have a graff
Of this unspotted tree?
For all the rest they are but chaff
In praise of her to be.

She doth as far exceed
These women, nowadays,
As doth the flower the weed;

And more, a thousand ways.
This praise I shall her give
When Death doth what he can;
Her honest name shall live
Within the mouth of man.

This worthy lady to bewray—
A king's daughter was she—
Of whom John Heywood list to say,
In such worthy degree.

And Mary was her name, sweet ye,
With these graces indued;
At eighteen years so flourished she :
So doth his mean conclude.

A BALLAD OF THE GREEN WILLOW

*All a green willow, willow;
All a green willow is my garland.*

Alas! by what mean may I make ye to know
The unkindness for kindness that to me doth grow? [bestow,
That one who most kind love on me should
Most unkind unkindness to me doth show?
For all the green willow is my garland.

To have love, and hold love, where love is so
sped,
Oh, delicate food to the lover so fed!
From love won to love lost where lovers be led,
Oh desperate dolour! the lover is dead;
For all the green willow is my garland.

She said she did love me, and would love me
still;
She sware above all men I had her good will;
She said and she sware she would my will fulfil—
The promise all good, the performance all ill;
For all the green willow is my garland.

Now, woe worth the willow, and woe worth the wight

That windeth willow, willow garland to dight;
That dole dealt in alms is all amiss quite,
Where lovers are beggars for alms in sight;
No lover doth beg for this willow garland.

Of this willow garland the burden seem'th
small,

But my break-neck burden I may it well call;
Like the sow of lead on my head it doth fall,
Break head, and break neck, back, bones, brain,
heart and all;

All parts pressed in pieces.

Too ill for her think I best things may be had;
Too good for me thinketh she things being most bad;

All I do present her that may make her glad;
All she doth present me that make me sad;

This equity have I with this willow garland.

Could I forget thee as thou canst forget me,
That were my sound salve, which cannot nor shall be; [flee,

Though thou like the soaring hawk every way
I will be the turtle most steadfast still to thee;

And patiently wear this green willow garland.

All ye that have had love, and have my like wrong, [among;

My like truth and patience plant still you
When feminine fancies for new love do long,
Old love cannot hold them, new love is so strong

For all.

A BALLAD AGAINST SLANDER AND DETRACTION

*Gar call him down, gar call him down, gar call him down, down a :
God send the faction, of all detraction, called down and cast away.*

Almighty God
Doth shake His rod
Of justice, and all those
That unjustly,
Detractively,
Detract their friends or foes.

He telleth each one :
Thou shalt judge none ;
And if thou judge unbidden,
Thyself, saith He,
Shall judged be ;
This lesson is not hidden.

To this now stirred,
This is concord,
Which willeth us in each doubt ;
To deem the best
That may be jest,
Till time the truth try out.

Knowing by this,
That think amiss
 Against no man we may ;
Much more must we
Ill language flee,
 And call it down, down a ;
 Gar call him down, &c.

With sword or skain
To see babes slain,
 Abhorreth to look upon ;
Attend to me,
And ye shall see
 Murder and slander one.

Like as a knife,
By rueing life,
 So slander fame hath slain ;
And both once doon,
Both alike soon
 May be undone again.

Then what more ill,
With knife to kill,
 Or with the tongue to sting ?
With knife or tongue
Strike old or young,
 Both in effect one thing.

These words are short,
But they import
 Sentence at length to way ;
Of all which sense,
To flee offence,
 Call slander down I say ;
 Gar call him down, &c

When vice is fought
All vice is nought;
But some vice worse than some;
And each man sees
Sundry degrees
In each vice self doth come.

Now sins the least,
We should detest
Vice or degree in vice;
If in the most
We show our boast,
That showeth us most unwise.

If I in thee
Such faults once see,
As no man else doth know;
To thee alone,
And other none,
These faults I ought to show.

Then of intent
If I invent
False tales, and them display;
That is most vile,
Which to exile,
God calleth this down, down a.
Gar call him down, &c.

Some count no charge
To talk at large
Such ill as they do hear;
But God's account
Doth not amount
To take such talkers here.

Of work ill wrought,
When it is fought,
 In telling forth the same,
Though it be true,
The talk may brew
 Drink of damnable blame.

To frame excuse
Of tongue's misuse,
 We have no manner mean;
So that by this
No way there is Ill tales to carry clean.

Which makes me call Upon you all,
 As calling call you may;
Tales false or true,
Me to ensue,
 To call them down, down a.
 Gar call him down, &c.

Christ crieth out still:
Say good for ill;
 But we say harm for harm;
Yea, ill for good
Ill tongues do brood—
 Wrath is in them so warm.

Slander to fear,
And to forbear—
 This text stands well in place;
Woe by the tongue,
Whereby is sprung
 Slander in any case!

To slake this fire
Of slanders ire,
Repentance must devise
To set all hands
To quench the brands
With water of our eyes.

Which brand then blow
To make love glow,
That love by grace may stay,
And by resort
Of good report,
Call slander down I say.
Gar call him down, &c.

A BRIEF BALLET

TOUCHING THE TRAITOROUS TAKING OF SCARBOROUGH CASTLE

Imprinted at London, in Fleete-strete, by Tho. Powell.
Cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum.

Oh, valiant invaders ! gallantly gay ;
Who, with your compeers, conquering the route,
Castles or tow'rs, all standing in your way ;
Ye take, controlling all estates most stout,
Yet had it now been good to look about,
Scarborough castle to have let alone ;
And take Scarborough warning everyone.

By Scarborough castle, not Scarborough
I only mean—but further, understand,
Each haven, each hold, or other harborough
That our good King and Queen do hold in
hand :
As due obedience bindeth us in band
Their Scarborough castles to let alone ;
And take Scarborough warnings everyone.

The scalers of which castles evermore,
In books of old, and in our eyes of new,
Have always lost themselves, and theirs therefore;

All this ye did forget in time to view,
Which might have wrought both you and yours t'eschew,
Letting Scarborough castle now alone;
Taking Scarborough warning everyone.

This Scarborough castle simply standing,
Yet could that castle slyly you beguile;
Ye thought ye took the castle at your landing,
The castle taking you in the self while:
Each stone within the castle wall did smile
That Scarborough castle ye let not alone;
And took Scarborough warning everyone.

Your putting now in ure your devilish dream,
Hath made you see (and like enough to feel)
A few false traitors cannot win a ream;
Good subjects be, and will be, true as steel
To stand with you, the end they like no deal.

Scarborough castles they can let alone;
And take Scarborough warnings everyone.

They know God's law—to 'bey their King and Queen;

Not take from them, but keep for them their own;

And give to them, when such traitors are seen,
As ye are now, to bring all overthrow.

They work your overthrow, by God's power
grown.

God saith—let Scarborough castle alone;
Take Scarborough warning everyone.

Too late for you, and in time for the rest
Of your most traitorous sect (if any be);
You are all spectacles at full witnessed,
As other were to you—treason to flee,
Which in you past, yet may the rest of ye
The said Scarborough castles let alone;
And take Scarborough warnings everyone.

This term, Scarborough warning grew, (some say),

By hasty hanging, for rank robbery there.
Who that was met but suspect in that way, Straight was he truss'd up, whatever he wear.

Whereupon, thieves thinking good to forbear,
Scarborough robbing they let that alone;
And took Scarborough warning everyone.

If robbing in that way, bred hanging so,
By theft to take way, town, castle, and so,
What Scarborough hanging craveth this, lo!
Were yourselves herein judges capital,
I think your judgments on these words must fall,

Scarborough robbing, who lett'th not alone,
Scarborough hanging deserve everyone.

We would to God that you, and all of you
Had been considered, as well as ye knew
The end of all traitory, as you see it now,
Long to have lived, loving subjects true.
Alas! your loss we not rejoice, but rue
That Scarborough castle ye let not alone;
And took Scarborough warning everyone.

To crafts that ever thrive, wise men ever cleave;

To crafts that seeld when thrive, wise men
seeld when flee;

The crafts that never thrive a fool can learn to leave.

This thriftless crafty craft then clear leave we,

One God, one king, one queen, serve frank and free,

Their Scarborough castle let it alone;

Take we Scarborough warning everyone.

One sovereign lord and sovereign lady both,

Laud we our Lord, for their prosperity;

Beseeching Him for it, as it now go'th,

Continued so, in perpetuity;

We letting their Scarborough castles alone;

Taking Scarborough warnings everyone.

A BALLAD

SPECIFYING PARTLY THE MANNER, PARTLY THE MATTER, IN THE MOST EXCELLENT MEETING AND LIKE MARRIAGE BETWEEN OUR SOVEREIGN
LORD AND OUR SOVEREIGN LADY THE KING'S AND QUEEN'S HIGHNESS

PENNED BY JOHN HEYWOOD

Imprinted at London by William Ryddell.

The eagle's bird hath spread his wings,
And from far off hath taken flight,
In which mean way by no leverings
On bough or branch this bird would light;
Till on the rose, both red and white,
He 'lighteth now most lovingly,
And thereto most behovingly.

The month ensuing next to June,
This bird this flower for perch doth take,
Rejoicingly himself to prune,
He rouseth ripely to awake
Upon this perch to those his make :
Concluding straight, for ripe right rest,
In the lion's bower to build his nest.

A bird, a beast, to make, to choose,
Namely, the beast most furious,
It may seem strange, and so it does,
And to this bird injurious;
It seemeth a case right curious
To make construction in such sense,
As may stand for this bird's defence.

But mark, this lion so by name,
Is properly a lamb t'assign,
No lion wild, a lion tame,
No rampant lion masculine,
The lamb-like lion feminine,
Whose mild meek property allureth
This bird to light, and him assureth.

The eagle's bird, the eagle's heir,
All other birds far surmounting,
The crowned lion matcheth fair,
Crown unto crown this bird doth bring;
A queenly queen, a kingly king.
Thus, like to like here matched is—
What match may match more meet than this?

So meet a match in parentage,
So meet a match in dignity,
So meet a match in patronage,
So meet match in benignity,
So matched from all malignity,
As, (thanks to God given for the same),
Seldom hath been seen; thus sayeth the fame.

This meet-met match, at first meeting,
In their approach together near,
Lowly, lovely, lively greeting,

In each to other did so appear,
That lookers-on, all must grant clear,
Their usage of such humane reach,
As all might learn, but none could teach.

Thou, in conjoining of these twain,
Such sacred solemn solemnity,
Such fare in feast to entertain,
Such notable nobility,
Such honour with such honesty,
Such joy, all these to plat in plot,
Plat them who can, for I cannot.

But here one dainty president,
Number so great in place so small,
Nations so many, so different,
So suddenly met; so agree all,
Without offensive word let fall;
Save sight of twain, for whom all met,
No one sight there, like this to get.

This lamb-like lion and lamb-like bird,
To show effect as cause affords,
For that they lamb-like be concurred,
The lamb of lambs, the lord of lords;
Let us like lambs, as most accords,
Most meekly thank in humble wise,
As humble heart may most devise.

Which thanks full given most thankfully,
To prayer fall we on our knees,
That it may like that Lord on high
In health and wealth to prosper these,
As faith for their most high degree :
And that all we, their subjects, may
Them and their laws love and obey.

And that between these twain and one,
The three and one, one once to send.
In one to knit us everyone,
And to that one such mo at end,
As his will only shall extend.
Grant this, good God ! adding thy grace,
To make us meet to obtain this case.

A NOTE-BOOK, WORD-LIST, AND INDEX

INCLUDING

REFERENCES, NOTES, A COMPLETE INDEX TO ALL THE PROVERBS, PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,
COLLOQUIALISMS, &c., together with a
GLOSSARY OF WORDS AND PHRASES now
Archaic or Obsolete; the whole arranged in ONE ALPHABET IN DICTIONARY FORM

A FOREWORD TO NOTE-BOOK, WORD-LIST, AND INDEX

Reference from text to Note-Book is copious, and as complete as may be; so also, conversely, from Note-Book to text. The following pages may, with almost absolute certainty, be consulted on any point that may occur in the course of reading.

The scheme of reference from Note-Book to text assumes the division, in the mind's eye, of each page into four horizontal sections; which, beginning at the top, are indicated in the Note-Book by the letters a, b, c, d following the page figure. In practice this will be found easy, and an enormous help to the eye over the usual reference to page alone in "fixing" the "catchword." Thus 126a=the first quarter of page 126; 40c=the third quarter of page 40; and so forth.

The Index to the Proverbs, Proverbial Sayings, Colloquialisms, &c. (specifically as an Index, and not as a Glossary, which indeed would be largely superfluous), is made with much completeness, careful attention being given, as an aid to reference, to Cross-entries. The more noteworthy Proverbs are, in the text, brought into prominence by the use of italics.

INDEX, NOTE-BOOK, AND WORD-LIST

TO JOHN HEYWOOD'S PROVERBS, EPIGRAMS, AND MISCELLANIES

ABJECT, "cast out as an abject" (100b), vagabond, ne'er-do-well, despicable person. "I deemed it better so to die, Than at my foeman's feet an abject lie."—Mirroure for Magistrates (1599), 20.

ABROOD, "weather meet to set paddocks abroad in" (50b), i.e. weather fit for toads or frogs to be abroad: cf. "fine weather for ducks."

ABSENTETH, "her presence absenteth all maladies" (10c), makes absent, expels, cures: now always with the reflective pronouns. "... or what change Absents thee or what chance detains?"—Milton, Par. Lost (bk. x.).

ACCOMPTE, "the full accompte" (8d), account: the old spelling. "Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and caste accompt."—Shakspeare, 2 Henry VI. (1594), iv. 2.

ACCOMPTED (125a), see previous entry.

ACCORDETH, see Rhymes.

ACHE (a) (140c), i.e. "aitch"=letter "H": a play on ache=pain.
(b), see Eye.

ADVIEWED (299b), considered.

ADVOUTRY, "in advoutry to catch him" (71b), adultery. "Calling this match advoutrie, as it was."—Mirroure for Magistrates (1599), 342.

AFLOAT, "thou art afloat" (176a), see also "at an ebb in Newgate . . . afloat at Tyburn" (176b).

AFTERCLAPS, "for fear of afterclaps" (114d), consequences: especially if unexpected or disagreeable; now chiefly American. "He can give us an after-clap when we least ween."—Latimer, Sermons (1515), I. 27.

AGAINST, see Stream.

AGE, "age and appetite fell at a strong strife" (51d).

ALE, (a) "when ale is in wit is out" (200d).

(b) "as sour ale mendeth in summer" (91b), that is, not at all.

BEWRAYED, "things . . . might be bewrayed" (65*b*), spoilt, muddled, complicated.

BEYOND, see Moon.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. The Dialogue of the Effectual Proverbs in the English language Concerning Marriage seems to have been first printed, apart from the collected editions of Heywood's Works (Proverbs and Epigrams), in 1546 by T. Berthelet. A copy of this quarto appeared in the Roxburghe sale in 1812, and fetched £4 10s. Lowndes says this edition was reprinted in 1547, 1549, and 1556. Another edition, "newly overseen and somewhat corrected," appeared in 1561 in 8vo, an imperfect copy of which is preserved in the British Museum. In the following year it was appended to his Epigrams, and the whole was published as John Heywoodes Woorkes. This is the edition (collated with that of 1566) which forms the text of the present reprint. Another edition appeared in 1566, which Hazlitt erroneously says was "a reprint, without alterations, of the edition of 1562" (see Variorum Readings). Further editions appeared in 1576, 1587 (? edited by Thomas Newton, of Cheshire) and 1598. Altogether, ten editions within the first fifty years: a record that is not often surpassed! Moreover, it would appear from Dibdin (iv. 421) that the Epigrams were printed separately on flyleaves or broadsides; as he states that he possessed two, printed on a long slip of paper, on one side only, and bearing an imprint—"Printed at London for Rowland Hall for James Rowbotham, and are to be sold at his shoppe under Bow Church." Concerning the Ballads see the Terminal Essay [Works (E.E.D.S.) III.]. The text has been modernised except in cases where the rhyme or the interest attaching to a particular usage seemed to render desirable the retention of the old spelling. The punctuation has been altered only so far as to make intelligible what would otherwise be obscure.

BID, "his paternoster to bid" (136*b*), to bid beads originally=to pray prayers with or without a rosary, hence to count beads, each one dropped passing for a prayer.

BIG, see Body.

BILL, see Wing.

BIND, see Fast.

BIRD, (a) "better one bird in hand than ten in the wood" (36*d*; 173*d*), possession is everything; hazard of loss is not worth uncertain gain; the modern "two in the bush," is not so exacting. Fr., "Mieux vaut un tenez, que deux vous l'aurez." "An old proverb maketh with this which I take good. Better one bird in hand then ten in the wood."—Heywood, Witty and Witless (c. 1530), Works (E.E.D.S.) I, 213*b*.

(b) "it is a foul bird that fileth his own nest" (70*d*), fileth=defileth: the proverb occurs as early as 1250 in The Owl and the Nightingale. "Rede and lerne ye may, Howe olde proverbys say, that byrd ys nat honest, That flyth hys owne nest."—Skelton, Garnesche (1520).

(c) "as bare as a bird's arse" (89*a*), as bare as may be.

(d) "the birds were flown" (47*d*; 223*d*; 224*a*).

(e) "when birds shall roost . . . who shall appoint their hour, the cock or hen?" (56*b*); compare "He who pays the piper may call the tune."

(f) "we shall catch birds to-morrow" (88*c*).

(g) "I hear by one bird that in mine ear was late chanting" (70*a*); modern, "a little bird told me."

(h) see Bush and Crow.

BIRDERS, BIRDING, "birders . . . in their birding" (151*b*), bird-catchers, bird-catching. "I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after we'll a birding together."—Shakspeare, Merry Wives (1596), iii. 3.

BRIDAL (15b), a note as to the origin of the word may not be without interest. (a) "There were bride-ales, church-ales, clerk-ales, give-ales, lamb-ales, leet-ales, Midsummer-ales, Scot-ales, Whitsun-ales, and several more."—Brand's Popular Antiquities.

(b) "it is meet that a man be at his own bridal" (15b), a variant of "every man must attend his own funeral."

BRIDLE, (a) "I gave her the bridle at beginning" (87b), let her have her own way.

(b) "she taketh the bridle in the teeth and runneth away with it " (87*b*), the modern version alters "bridle" to "bit."

(c) see Rough Bit.

BRIDLED, "I should have bridled her first with rough bit, To have made her chew on the bridle one fit" (87*b*), fit=a portion or bout of anything—stanza of a song, stave of a tune, scene of a play, round at fisticuffs: here=a space of time.

BRIKE, "ye brike all from her, that brought all to you" (76*a*), brike=breach, violation of, or injury done to, anyone: hence deplete, "suck dry" (of money and goods).

BRIM, "better spare at brim than at bottom" (66*c*), i.e. at the beginning rather than at the end of one's tether.

BROID, "better dissemble . . . than to broid him with it" (69*b*), braid, abraid, reproach.

BROKEN, see Pot.

BROKER, see Knave.

BROOM, "the green new broom sweepeth clean" (54*a*), still proverbial; in the Epigrams "new broom sweepeth clean" is nearer the modern version (178*a*).

BROTHER, "I will not trust him though he were my brother" (40*c*).

BUCKETS, see Well.

BUCKLE, "till he at length came to buckle and bare thong" (89*a*), poverty, distress: thong=shoestring.

BUD, "This bood sheweth what fruit will follow" (26*b*), bood=bud.

BUG, "bug's words" (66*c*), swaggering or threatening language; also "bugbear words"; of "such bugbear thoughts" (Locke). Bug=an object of terror, bogey. "Matrimony hath euer been a blacke bugge in their sinagoge and churche."—Bale, Notaryes (Pref.): see Bear bugs.

BUILT, see Rome.

BULL, see Cow calf.

BUM, see Body.

BURDEN, "light burden far heavy" (97*b*; 188*c* and d; 189*a*).

BURNT CHILD, see Child.

BURR, (a) "I take her for a rose, but she breedeth a burr" (26*b*).

(b) "they cleave together like burrs" (72*b*).

BUSH, (a) "while I . . . beat the bush . . . other men . . . catch the birds" (9*a*). Henry the Fifth is reported to have uttered this proverb at the siege of Orleans, when the citizens, besieged by the English, declared themselves willing to yield the town to the Duke of Burgundy, who was in the English camp. "Shall I beat the bush, and another take the bird?" said King Henry. The Duke was so offended that he withdrew his troops and concluded a peace. "I beat the bush, and others catch the bird, Reason exclaimes and sweares my hap is hard."—Pettowe, Philochasander and Elanira (1599).

(b) see Bird.

BUTTER, (a) "there will no butter cleave on my bread" (86*c*), i.e. nothing by which to profit or advantage.

(b) "it is not all butter that the cow shits" (94*d*).

(c) "she looketh as butter would not melt in her mouth" (27*b*), in contempt of persons of simple demeanour. "A cette parolle mist dame Mehault ses mains à ses costez et en grant couroux luy respondy que . . . et que, Dieu merci, aincores fondoit le burre en sa bouche, combien qu'elle ne peust croquier noisettes, car elle n'avoit que un seul dent."—Les Evangiles des Quenouilles (c. 1475).

(d) "As sure as it were sealed with butter" (86*c*; 189*d*), shaky, uncertain.

BUTTERED, see Bread.

BUTTERY, "thy buttery door" (125*c*), a larder for dairy stuff: hence (now chiefly at the universities and colleges) a pantry for provisions generally.

BUY, (a) "you to buy and sell" (23*d*), betray, impose upon, do for utterly.

(b) see Borage, Pig.

BY AND BY (50*a*, et passim), immediately, forthwith.

CAGE, see Cow.

CAKE, "would ye both eat your cake and have your cake?" (96a).

CALF, see Cow and Cow calf.

CALL, "things past my hands I cannot call again" (26a).

CALLET (70b), scold, drab, trull. "A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns, To make this shameless callet know herself—Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou."—Shakspeare, 3 Henry VI. (1592), ii. 2.

CALVES, "change of pasture maketh fat calves" (62a). "Boniface. You may see what change of pasture is able to do. Honeysuckle. It makes fat calves in Romney Marsh, and lean knaves in London, therefore, Boniface, keep your ground."—Dekker and Webster, Westward Hoe (1607).

CAMBERS, "gable ends, cambers, parlours" (239d), chambers.

CAMMOCK, "timely crooketh the tree that would a cammock be" (94a), cammock=a crooked tree or beam, a knee of timber: as used in shipbuilding. "Camocks must be bowed with sleight not strength."—Lyly, Sappho and Phao (1591).

CAN, (a) "can very good skill" (12a), know, able, possess. "Though he be ignorant and can little skill."—Four Elements (c. 1510), E.E.D.S., Anon. Pl., Ser. I., 3c.

(b) see Cup, Thank.

CANDLE, (a) "to set up a candle before [or hold a candle to] the devil" (24d; 173b), propitiate through fear, to assist in, or wink at, wrong-doing. "Though not for hope of good, yet for the feare of euill, Thou maist find ease so proffering up a candell to the deuill."—Tusser, Husbandrie (1557), 148.

(b) "upright as a candle standeth in the socket" (52b), as erect as may be.

(c) "who that worst may shall hold the candle" (56d).

(d) see Cat.

CANSTICK, "coll under canstick" (24*b*), coll=(a) kiss, embrace, or (b), deceit: see Coleprophet; canstick=candlestick, which was very generally pronounced thus. There was, however, a Christmas game called "coll (or coal) under canstick."—(Harsenet, Ded. Pop. Impost, 1603.)

CAP, "my cap is better at ease than my head" (85*d*; 177*c*).

CARDS, "tell thy cards and then tell me what thou hast won" (36*b*).

CARE, see Corner.

CARPENTER, "such carpenters, such chips" (80*d*), "like to its like." "New. By the faith of my body, such carpenter, such chips, And as the wise man said, such lettuce, such lips. For, like master, like man: like tutor, like scholar; And, like will to like, quoth the Devil to the Collier."—Fulwell, Like Will to Like (E.E.D.S.), 24*d*.

CARRAIN, "her carrain carcase" (56*c*), rotten, withered: a generic reproach.

CARRIER, "I will send it him by John Long the carrier" (35*d*), see John Long.

CARRON, "daws are carron" (151*a*), carrion.

CART, (a) "set the cart before the horse" (79*a*), to begin at the wrong end; to set things hind side before: Fr. "Il mettoyt la charette devant les beufz" (Rabelais). "He deemes that a preposterous government where the wife predominates, and the husband submits to her discretion, that is Hysterion and Proteron, the cart before the horse."—Harry White, his Humour.

(b) "the best cart may overthrow" (35*c*), "accidents may happen," "there's nothing certain save the unforeseen."

(c) "I am cast at cart's arse" (21*b*), in disgrace: offenders were formerly punished by being flogged when tied to the hinder part of a driven cart.

(d) "carts well driven go long upright" (35*c*), see section b supra.

CARTERLY, "carterly knave" (145*d*), "carterly collar" (258*c*), rough, unmannerly.

CARTWEAR, "cartwear of good horse" (186c), carter, driver.

CARVING, "he at meat carving her, and none else before, Now carved he to all but her, and her no more" (54b).

CASE, (a) "put case" (passim), to suppose or propose a hypothetical instance or illustration: an idiomatic expression formerly common in arguments. "Put case there be three brethren, John-a-Nokes, John-a-Nash, and John-a-Stile."—Returne from Parnassus (1606).

(b) "clear out of the case" (32a), out of the running, beyond consideration.

CAST, (a) "privy nips or casts overthwart the shins" (24c)—"even the like cast hast thou" (33d)—"ye nother care nor wellnigh cast what ye pay" (81c), both as subs. and verb cast was in full work—throw, motion, turn, glance, blow, advice, counsel, plan, design, object of desire, attempt at flight, skill, art, trick, juggle, fashion, form, pattern, shade, colour, tinge, chance, venture, touch, stroke, and many more glosses beside, each with their corresponding verbal usages.

(b) see Cart, Hog, Moon, Sheep's eye, Shoe, Turn.

CASTETH, see Moon.

CASTING, "far casting for commonwealth" (50d), roundabout search for joint benefit.

CAT, (a) "a cat may look on a king" (70c; 189c), said of impertinent or misplaced interference; there are certain things an inferior may do in the presence of a superior.

(b) "the cat would (or will) eat fish and would (or will) not wet her feet" (34d; 220a); cf. Shakspeare (Macbeth), "Letting, I dare not, wait upon, I would, Like the poor cat i' the adage." "Cat lufat visch, ac he nele his feth wete."—MS. Trin. Coll. Camb. (c. 1250).

(c) "a woman hath nine lives like a cat" (60c; 203b).

(d) "let the cat wink and let the mouse run" (61b; 213d; 214a).

(e) "it hath need to be a wily mouse that should breed in the cat's ear " (71d). " A hardy mowse that is bold to breede In cattis eeris."—Order of Foles, MS. (c. 1450). " It is a wyly mouse That can build his dwellinge house Within the cattes eare."—Skelton (1520).

(f) " somewhat it is . . . when the cat winketh and both her eyne out " (61a).

(g) " cat after kind, good mouse hunt " (33c). " Cat after kind . . . sweet milk will lap."—Jacob and Esau (1568), iv. 4 (E.E.D.S. Anon. Pl. 2 Ser., 58a).

(h) " little and little the cat eateth the flickle " (82b).

(i) " no playing with a straw before an old cat " (88a).

(j) " the cat knoweth whose lips she licketh " (98b). " Li vilains reproche du chat Qu'il set bien qui barbes il leche."—Des trois Dames qui trouvèrent un Anel (c. 1300).

(k) " to turne the cat in the pan " (79a), to " rat "; to reverse one's position through self-interest; to play the turncoat; the derivation is absolutely unknown; cat="cate" or "cake" is historically (says Murray) untenable. " Now am I true araid like a phesitien; I am as very a turncote as the wethercoke of Poles; For now I will calle my name Due Disporte. So, so, finely I can turne the catt in the pane."—Wit and Wisdom (E.E.D.S., Anon. Pl., Ser. 4), 3 (c. 1559), " As for Bernard, often tyme he turneth the cat in the pan."—Shacklock, Hatchet of Heresies (1565).

(l) " my cat's leering look . . . showeth me that my cat goeth a catterwawing " (70c), i.e. is given to wantonness.

(m) " they two agreed like two cats in a gutter " (54c).

(n) " by scratching and biting cats and dogs come together " (54c).

(o) " when all candles be out cats be grey " (13c), cf. " If you cannot kiss the mistress kiss the maid "; " Joan in the dark is as good as my lady."

(p) see Bell.

CATCH, (a) " catch that catch may " (226d), in modern form, " catch as catch can."

(b) see Hare.

CATTERWAWING, see Cat.

CAUSE, "cause causeth" (22*b*).

CHA, see Cham.

CHAD, see Cham.

CHAIR, "every man may not sit in the chair" (46*c*), it is not given to everyone to rule; all cannot be masters.

CHALK, (a) "to compare in taste, chalk and cheese" (63*c*), to compare (or mistake) things utterly different. The modern form is "to know chalk from cheese" = to have one's wits about one, to know what is worthless from what is of value. "Lo! how they feignen chalk for cheese."—Gower, Confessio Amantis (1393). "Though I have no learning, yet I know chese from chalke."—John Bon and Mast Person (1548). "Do not these thynges differ as much as chalcke and chese?"—Shacklock, Hatchet of Heresies (1565). "To French and Scots so fayr a taell I tolde, That they beleaved whyt-chalk and chees was oen."—Churchyard, Chippes (1573).

(b) "alike in colour to deem ink and chalk" (63*c*), a variant of the foregoing entry.

CHAM, "cham ashamed" (136*b*), cham=I am: the conventional rustic speech of early plays is a mixture of southern and northern dialect, but chiefly the former. See other volumes of this series.

CHANGE, (a) "change be no robbery" (63*b*; 204*b*), an excuse for a forced or jesting imposition; a delicate way of making a present: now usually "fair exchange is no robbery."

(b) see Calves.

CHANGED, "would to God he and you had changed places" (80*c*).

CHAT, "no man may chat ought in ought of her charge" (24*b*), chat=talk. "Into a rapture lets her baby cry, While she chats him . . ."—Shakspeare, Coriolanus (1610), ii. 1.

CHATTING, "chatting to chiding is not worth a chute" (69*a*), it is hardly worth while to answer a scolding.

CHEAP, see Bargains, Best.

CHEAPEN, "cheapen a cony" (242*d*), price a rabbit.

CHECK, "checks and choking oysters" (43c; 122c; 135b; 244c), taunts, reproaches: see Choking oyster.

CHECKER, "not checker a-board, all was not clear in the coast" (89b) ? a-board=to jest, the prefix a being the old intensive. "Not as a checker, reprover, or despiser."—Coverdale, Lewis's Hist. Bible into English, 95.

CHEESE, (a) "ye may see no green cheese, but your teeth must water" (97c), green cheese=cream cheese.

(b) see Chalk.

CHICKENS, (a) "there is a nest of chickens, which doth brood, That will sure make his hair grow through his hood" (66b), i.e. deceived, cuckolded as it were.

CHIDING, see Chatting.

CHIEVING (10d and 48d), doing, accomplishment.

CHIL, see Cham.

CHILD, "burnt child, fire dreadeth" (55b), once bit, twice shy. "So that child withdraweth is hond, From the fur ant the brond, That hath byfore bue brend, Brend child fur dredth, Quoth Hendyng."—Proverbs of Hendyng, MS. (c. 1320). "Timon. Why urge yee me? my hart doth boyle with heate, And will not stoope to any of your lures: A burnt childe dreads the flyre."—Timon (c. 1590).

CHILDREN, (a) "children learn to creep ere they can learn to go" (37b; 176a).

(b) "children and fools cannot lie" (38a). "Master Constable says: You know neighbours 'tis an old saw, Children and fools speake true."—Lyly, Endimion (1591).

(c) "better children weep than old men" (34b; 175c). It is related in connection with the Gowrie conspiracy, that King James VI., about to depart from Gowrie Castle, was forcibly prevented by the Master of Glamis, and as the tears started to the eyes of the young king, "better bairns weep than bearded men" was the other's observation.

(d) "ye have many godchildren to look upon, and ye bless them all, but ye bass but one" (84d).

CHIN, see Swim.

CHIP, (a) "who lacketh a stock his gain is not worth a chip" (94c).

(b) "as merry as three chips" (17c), cf. Shakespeare's "dancing chips" (Sonnets, 128).

(c) see Carpenters, Hew.

CHOKING OYSTERS, "checks and choking oysters" (43c), taunts and replies that put one to silence. "I have a stoppyng oyster in my poke."—Skelton, Bowge of Court (c. 1529), 477. "To a feloe laiying to his rebuke that he was over deintie of his mouthe and diete, he did with this reason give a stopping oistre."—Udall, Apoph. (1542), 61.

CHOOSE, see Ill.

CHOOSERS, see Beggars.

CHOPPED, "chopped down empty candlesticks" (131c), "planked" down: chop down=to place with a sudden or violent motion.

CHURCH, "the nearer to the church, the further from God" (21a; 200a). "Qui est près de l'église est souvent loin de Dieu."—Les Proverbes communs (c. 1500).

CHURL, see Claw.

CHUTE, see Chatting.

CIRCUMQUAQUES (84d), far-fetched and roundabout stories.

CLARGY, "to put me to my clargy" (64b), see rhyme: clergy=learning, science, knowledge. "I rede how besy that he was Upon clergie, an hed of bras To forge and make it for to telle."—Gower, MS. Soc. Antiq., 134, f. 104.

CLAW, (a) "thou makest me claw where it itcheth not" (85c).

(b) "claw a churl by th' arse and he shitteth in my hand" (Soc). "Claw a churl by the tail and he will file your hand."—Jacob and Esau (1568), ii. 3 (E.E.D.S. Anon. Pl. 2 Ser., 36a).

CLAWED, "I clawed her by the back" (24d).

CLEAN, see Broom.

CLEANSING, "in the cleansing week" (136d), Shrovetide: specifically from the evening of the Saturday before Quinquagesima Sunday and Ash Wednesday. On the Tuesday all Catholics were accustomed to confess.

CLEAR, see Case.

CLERKS, "the greatest clerks be not the wisest men" (67*a*; 211*a*). "The greatest clerks ben not the wisest men, As whilom to the wolf this spake the mare."—Chaucer, Cant. Tales (1383), Miller's Tale. "Now I here wel, it is treue that I long syth have redde and herde, that the best clerkes ben rot the wysest men."—Historye of Reynard the Foxe (1481).

CLIMBED, "he that never climbed never fell" (46*d*; 220*c*).

CLIMME, "yes, climme" (242*a*), i.e. challenge me to say.

CLOAK, "what cloak for the rain soever ye bring me" (69*d*). "Nicholas. 'Tis good to have a cloake for the raine; a bad shift is better then none at all; Ile sit heere, as if I were as dead as a doore naile."—Two Angry Women of Abingdon (1599).

CLOCK, "and looked . . . what it was o'clock" (99*b*), saw how matters stood; became aware of the facts: the phrase is still colloquial or slang. "To know what ys a clocke."—Skelton, Works (c. 1513), ii. 132 (Dyce).

CLOG, "where nought is to wed with, wise men flee the clog" (32*a*), originally clog=incumbrance; hence a wife: this metaphor occurs very early. "Science. Ye have woon me for ever, dowghter, Although ye have woon a clog wyth all. Wyt. A clogg, sweete hart, what? Science. Such as doth fall To all men that joyne themselves in marriage."—Wyt and Science (c. 1540), Anon. Plays, 4 Ser. (E.E.D.S.). "The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity, Stealing away from his father with his clog at his heels."—Shakespeare, Winter's Tale (1604), iv. 4.

CLOTH, (a) "it is a bad cloth that will take no colour" (92*d*).

(b) see Coat, Cut.

CLOTHES, (a) "to rent off my clothes fro my back" (26*b*).

(b) see God.

CLOUDS, "after clouds black we shall have weather clear" (36*c*; 173*c*).

COAL, see Cold.

COAT, "cut my coat after my cloth" (20*b*), to adapt oneself to circumstances; to measure expense by income. A relic of the sumptuary laws: an early allusion occurs in the interlude of Godly Queene Hestor (c. 1530): "There is a cause why, That I go not gay: I tell you of a word, Aman that new lord, Hath brought up all good clothe, And hath so many gowns, as would serve ten towns, Be ye never so loth: And any man in the town, do buy him a good gown, He is very wroth. And will him straight tell, the statute of apparel Shall teach him good" (E.E.D.S., Anon. Pl., 2nd Ser., 262*a*).

COCK, (a) "the young cock croweth as he the old heareth" (23*c*), other readings are: "The young cock learneth to crow of the old" (1509); "as the old cock crows so does the chick" (1589).

(b) "every cock is proud on his own dunghill" (31*b*; 217*d*), every man is a hero in his own circle; one fights best with friends and backers about him. "þet fleshs is her et home, ase eorðe, þet is et eorðe: aut for þui hit is cwointe~t cwiuer, e ase me seið, þet coc is kene on his owne mixenne."—þe Ancren Riivle (c. 1250).

(c) "as oft change from hue to hue as doth the cocks of Ind" (31*a*), ? Ind=indigo, the allusion being to the changing sheen of the cock's bluish-black feathers.

(d) "he setteth cock on the hoop" (65*d*), gives way to reckless enjoyment; sets all by the ears; is proud, vaunting, and exultant. "You'll make a mutiny among my guests! You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!"—Shakspeare, Romeo and Juliet (1505), i. 5.

COCKNEY, (a) "he that cometh every day shall have a cockney, He that cometh now and then shall have a fat hen" (44*a*), Murray breaks up M.E. cokeney into coken ey=cock's egg, and defines the word when used by Langland as "egg," a rendering which seems confirmed in the present instance. "I have no salt bacon, Ne no cokeney, by Crist, coloppes for to make."—Langland, P. Plowman (1363), 4370.

(b) "a good cockney coke" (97*d*), i.e. a cockney cook: in derision and contempt, with perhaps a play on cokes=fool. The origin of cockney (=one born within the sound of Bow Bells) has been much debated; but, says Dr. Murray, in the course of an exhaustive statement (Academy, May 10, 1890, p. 320), "the history of the word, so far as it means a person, is very clear and simple. We have the senses (1) 'cockered or pet child,' 'nestle-cock,' 'mother's darling,' 'milksoy,' primarily the child, but continued to the squeamish and effeminate man into which he grows up. (2) A nickname applied by country people to the inhabitants of great towns, whom they considered 'milksoys,' from their daintier habits and incapacity for rough work. York, London, Perugia, were, according to Harman, all nests of cockneys. (3) By about 1600 the name began to be attached especially to Londoners, as the representatives par excellence of the city milksoy. One understands the disgust with which a cavalier in 1641 wrote that he was 'obliged to quit Oxford at the approach of Essex and Waller with their prodigious number of cockneys.'"

COCKSCOMB, "to wear a cockscomb" (67*d*), the comb of a cock was one of the ensigns or tokens of a professional fool.

COIN, "when coin is not common, commons must be scant" (51*b*).

COLD, (a) "let them that be a-cold, blow at the coal" (29*d*). "Our talwod is all brent, Our faggottes are all spent, We may blow at the cole."—Skelton, Why come ye not to Court (c. 1520).

(b) see God, Hot, Key.

COLEPROPHET, "ye play coleprophet (quoth I) who taketh in hand To know his answer before he do his errand" (21*a*), coleprophet=a false prophet or cheat. "Coleprophet and cole-poyson, thou art both."—Heywood, Ep., 89, Cent. vi.

COLL, "coll under canstick she can play both hands" (24*b*), see Canstick.

COLLOP, "it is a dear collop that is cut out of th' own flesh" (28*d*). "God knows thou art a colup of my flesh."—Shakspeare, 1 Henry VI. (1592), v. 5.

COLOURS, see Blind, Cloth.

COLT, (a) "of a ragged colt there cometh a good horse" (33*b*). "Touchstone. This cannot be fained, sure. Heaven pardon my severitie! 'The ragged colt may prove a good horse.'"—Jonson, &c., Eastward Hoe (1605).

(b) "colts may prove well with tatches ill" (33*b*), tache (or tatch) = spot, blemish.

COME, (a) "come what, come would" (44*b*).

(b) "you come to your cost" (34*a*).

(c) see Come, Light, Thieves.

COMETH, (a) "all cometh to one" (50*b*), in modern phrase, "all cometh to him that waits."

(b) see Eggs, Goeth, Last, Seldom, Time.

COMING, "it is ill coming . . . to th' end of a shot and beginning of a fray" (79*c*).

COMMODITIES (10*b*), matters of advantage or convenience (also 120*b*; 125*a*).

COMMON, see Jack.

COMMONS, "the commons common so" (243*b*), "people say."

COMMONWEALTH, see Casting.

CONSITHER (5*b*; 278*c*), consider.

CONSTANTINE (193*c*), Constantinople.

CONSTER (13*d*), construe, explain.

CONTENTATION, "rich by his contentation" (144*c*), satisfaction, content.

CONVERSION, "join this conversion" (208*d*). "Conversion is the changing or altering of words in a proposition. . . ."—Wilson (1551), The Arte of Logike, fol. 21.

CONVEY (48*b*), steal. The classical quotation is of course from Shakspeare, and from the same authority I give illustrations of derivatives: the rendering was popular. "Nym. The good humour is, to steal at a minute's rest. Pist. Convey, the wise it call."—Shakspeare, Merry Wives of Windsor (1596), Act i., Sc. 3. "Since Henry's death, I fear there is conveyance."—Shakspeare, 1 Henry VI. (1592), i. 3. "O good! convey? Conveyers are you all, That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall."—Shakspeare, Richard II. 1597), iv. 315.

CONY MOP, "sweet cony mop" (242c), an endearment.

COOK, "a poor cook that may not lick his own fingers" (89b). "He is an evyll coke yt can not lycke his owne lippes."—Vulgaria Stambrigi (c. 1510). "Capulet. Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks. 2 Servant. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers."—Shakspeare, Romeo and Juliet (1595), iv. 2.

COOKQUEAN, see Cuckquean.

COPE, "segging is good cope" (94a), sedge is good covering.

CORD, "would to our lord ye had . . . hanged both in one cord" (80b).

CORNER, "the corner of our care (quoth he) I you tell" (20b), corner=gist, the furthest point of probing.

CORSE, "my comely corse" (85a), body.

COTSOLD LION, see Lion.

COUCH, (a) "couch malt and water in house together" (242b), lay, place.

(b) "couch a hogshead" (58b), go to sleep: hogs-head=head. "I couched a hogshead in a skypper this darkmans."—Harman, Caveat (1567), 66 (1814).

COUGH, "thou canst cough in the aumbry" (82d), aumbry=cupboard, pantry. "Some slovens from sleeping no sooner be up, But hand is in aumbrie, and nose in the cup."—Tusser, Five Hundred Points (1573), ii. 5.

COUNSEL, see Court, Mum, Three.

COUNTERPOISE, "whether they counterpoise or outweigh" (10a).

COURT, "I was neither of court nor of counsel made" (43*b*), i.e. neither approached for advice, nor invited to express an opinion.

COURTESY, "so courtesy, so kind" (255*a*), polished, courteous.

COVET, "all covet, all lose" (97*c*; 184*a*).

COVETISE (12*c*), covetousness.

COW, (a) "the cow is wood" (78*a*), wood=mad, furious.

(b) "God sendeth the shrewd cow short horns" (27*c*), shrewd=malicious, badly disposed. "The Bishop of Sarum sayd, That he trusted ere Christmas Day to visit and cleanse a good part of the kingdom. But most commonly God sendeth a shrewd cow short horns, or else many a thousand in England had smarted."—Foxe, Acts and Manuments.

(c) "as comely as is a cow in a cage" (52*d*).

(d) "Margery, good cow, gave a good meal, but then she cast it down again with her heel" (86*a*).

(e) "every man as he loveth, Quoth the good man, when that he kissed his cow" (53*a*).

(f) "many a good cow hath an evil calf" (28*a*).

COW-CALF, "as well for the cow-calf as for the bull" (62*a*).

COY, "as coy as a croker's mare" (52*b*), croker=saffron-dealer.

CRABS, "the greatest crabs be not all the best meat" (40*d*).

CREED, see Paternoster.

CREEP, see Children, Kind.

CRIPPLE, "it is hard halting before a cripple" (71*d*). "I perceyve (quod she) it is evill to halte before a creple . . . and it is evill to hop before them that runne for the bell."—Gascoigne, Fable of Ferdinando Jeronimi and Leonora de Valases (1575).

CROKER'S MARE, see Coy.

CROOK, see Hook.

CROSS, (a) "now will I make a cross on this gate" (43*d*; 226*b*), the cross as the emblem of disappointment and misfortune, and the fact that many pieces of money were stamped on one side with a cross gave rise to many quibbles: see b and c infra, and 226*a*. "I will make a cross upon his gate; yea, cross on, Thy crosses be on gates all, in thy purse none."

(b) "I cross thee quite out of my book" (44*a*).

(c) "since thou art cross failed, avail, unhappy hook" (44*a*), cross=money (see a supra); unhappy hook=a commiserating address. "Now I have never a crose to blesse me, Now I goe a-mumming, Like a poore pennillesse spirit, Without pipe or druming."—Marriage of Witt and Wisdome, 1579 (E.E.D.S., Anon. Plays, Ser. 4, 227*a*). "Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses."—Shakespeare, 2 Henry IV. (1598), i. 2.

CROSS ROW, "worst among letters in the cross row" (140*b*), cross row=Christ-cross row, i.e. the alphabet; from a cross placed at either end; or from an old practice of writing the alphabet in the form of a cross by way of a charm. Note the difference between the old and modern girds at the letter "H"—"aitch" v "ache."

CROW, (a) "we have a crow to pull" (70*d*), complaint to make, quarrel, a bone to pick. "Abelle. Dere brother, I will fayre On feld ther our bestes ar, To looke if they be holgh or fulle. Cayn. Na, na, abide, we have a craw to pulle."—Mactacio Abel, in Towneley Mysteries (c. 1420).

(b) "the crow thinketh her own birds fairest in the wood" (61*c*). "It must needs be good ground that brings forth such good corne; When I look on him, methinks him to be evill favoured, Yet the crowe thinkes her black birds of all other the fairest."—Lupton, All for Money (1578).

(c) "as good then to say, the crow is white" (69*a*; 203*b*, and c), "You're talking nonsense, or worse, telling lies."

(d) see High.

CROWETH, see Cock.

CRUMMETH, "cracketh and crummeth" (79*a*), crumbleth.

CRY A LEISON (78*b*), i.e. Kyrie eleison ("Lord, have mercy"), a short petition used at the beginning of the Roman Mass. The phrase was early the subject of punning allusions. Tyndale uses it in the sense of a complaint or scolding (Obed. Chr. Man, 130*b*, 1528); and Heywood, in the present instance, apparently means something of the same kind, with an added sarcasm in his corrupted orthography, "cry a leison" (= a cry à [la] Alison, which appears (89*b*) to be the name of the wife of whom the husband is speaking).

CUCKQUEAN, "ye make her a cookquean" (76*b*), a female cuckold: here possibly also a play on "cook."

CUMBRETH, "the kitchen cumbreth not by heat" (125*c*), is not a trouble, source of annoyance.

CUNNING, "that cunning man" (66*d*), orig. knowledge, skill, learning, no bad sense being implied: as early as the time of Lord Bacon, however, the word was on the down-grade in meaning, influenced, no doubt, by the mundane truth that skill in the hands of the unscrupulous is used to defraud those less gifted. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning."—Bible, Auth. Vers. (1611), Psalm cxxxvii. 5. "The cunning manner of our flight, Determined of."—Shakspeare, Two Gent., ii. 4.

CUP, "merry . . . as cup and can could hold" (60*a*).

CUPSHOTTEN, "somewhat cupshotten" (31*a*), drunk.

CURRIED, see Horse.

CURRYFAVEL, "they can curryfavel and make fair weather" (66*b*), curryfavel = flatter.

CUSHION, (a) "ye missed the cushion, for all your haste" (97*c*), idiomatic: from the practice of archery = to fail in an attempt, to miss the point. "Trulie, Euphues, you have mist the cushion, for I was neither angrie with your long absence, neither am I well pleased at your presence."—Lyly, Euphues (1581).

(b) "I may set you beside the cushion" (97*c*), i.e. pass over with contempt, ignore, shelve. "Thus is he set beside the cushion, for his sincerity and forwardness in the good cause."—Spalding, Hist. i. 291.

CUT, see Coat.

DAGGER, (a) "he beareth a dagger in his sleeve" (35*b*), i.e. hidden, in reserve, ready for use.

(b) "it be ill playing with short daggers" (47*c*), in modern phrase, "edged tools."

DAIMENT, "sufferancee is no quittance in this daiment" (64*d*), ? judgment, settlement: cf. daysman=umpire, arbitrator. Day (in legal sense)=return of a writ, appearance.

DAINTIES, see Dear.

DAME, "he that will not be ruled by his own dame shall be ruled by his stepdame" (92*d*).

DANCE, "sufferance is your dance" (68*b*), rôle, lot: cf. "to lead one a dance."

DANCETH, "he danceth attendance" (219*d*), to wait upon constantly and obsequiously.

DARK, see Fair.

DARLING, "it is better to be an old man's darling than a young man's warling" (80*a*), wawl as verb=to wrangle; hence as subs. (it occurs only in this proverb) it probably=an object of nagging or bad temper. "Leave this brawling and wawling."—Misogonus, Anon. Plays, 2 Ser. 227*a*.

DAW (passim), an empty-headed, foolish fellow. "He that for commyn welth bysyly Studyeth and laboryth, and lyveth by Goddes law, Except he waxe ryche, men count hym but a daw!"—Four Elements (c. 1510), Anon. Plays, Ser. 1 (E.E.D.S.), 4*d*. "Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw."—Shakspeare, 1 Henry VI. (1592), ii. 4.

DAY, (a) "one day was three till liberty was borrow" (27*c*), borrow=pledged, mortgaged.

(b) "I see day at this little hole" (26*b*), in modern phrase, "daylight"; an echo, possibly, of another proverbial saying—"It is always darkest before the dawn."

(c) "Say no more till the day be longer" (202*b*).

(d) "be the day never so long, evermore at last they ring to evensong" (82*b*). "For though the day be never so long At last the bell rings for evensong."—Hawes, Pastime of Pleasure.

(e) "the day of doom shall be done" (85*a*).

(f) "farewell, my good days, they will be soon gone" (57a).

(g) see Dog, Fair, Rome.

DAYMENT (281d), judgment.

DEAD, (a) "for gain (he) is dead and laid in tomb" (66a).

(b) "I have . . . a dead man's head in my dish" (80b), the "dear departed" of modern phrase. "As bold-fac'd women, when they wed another, Banquet their husbands with their dead love's heads."—Marston, Insatiate Countess.

(c) see Devil, Shoes.

DEAF, (a) "then were ye deaf, ye could not hear on that side" (90d), i.e. wilfully deaf.

(b) "who is so deaf as he that will not hear?" (186d).

DEAR, (a) "whoso that knew what would be dear, should need be a merchant but one year" (4b; 171a).

(b) "dear bought and far fet are dainties for ladies" (38d), fet=fetched. "Some far fet trick, trick good for ladies, some stale toy or other."—Marston, Malcontent (1604). "Niece. Ay, marry, sir, this was a rich conceit indeed. Pompey. And far fetched; therefore good for you, lady."—Beaumont and Fletcher, Wit at Several Weapons (1614).

DEAREST, "to buy the dearest for the best alway" (81c), cf. "cheap and nasty."

DEATH, (a) "death! . . . take me that time, to take a breath" (45a), waiting for dead men's shoes profiteth little.

(b) "though love decree departure death to be" (48c).

DEED, "deed without words" (71b).

DENAY (222d), deny: note the rhyme.

DESTINY, see Wedding.

DEVIL, (a) "the devil hath cast a bone to set strife" (57c).

(b) "young saint, old devil" (27c; 177a), this occurs in MS. Harleian (c. 1490).

(c) "he must have a long spoon that would sup (or eat) with the devil" (71d). "Therefore behoveth him a ful long spone, That shal ete with a fend: thus herd I say."—Chaucer, Squieres Tale (Cant. Tales, c. 1383). "Courtesan. Will you go with me? Dromio. Master, if you do, expect spoonmeat or bespeak a long spoon. Antipholus. Why, Dromio? Dromio. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil."—Shakspeare, Comedy of Errors (1593), iv. 3.

(d) "like as the devil looked over Lincoln" (91c). "The middle or Rood tower of Lincoln Cathedral is the highest in the whole kingdom, and when the spire was standing on it, it must, in proportion to the height of the tower, have exceeded that of old St. Paul's, which was five hundred and twenty feet. The monks were so proud of this structure, that they would have it that the devil looked upon it with an envious eye: whence the proverb of a man who looks invidious and malignant, 'he looks as the devil over Lincoln.'"—Tour through England and Wales (1742). Ray gives another account: "It is probable that it took its rise from a small image of the devil standing on the top of Lincoln College, in Oxford."—Proverbs (1737).

(e) "he must needs go when the devil doth drive" (78c). "There is a proverb which trewe now preveth, He must nedes go that the dyvell dryveth."—Heywood, Johan Johan, Tyb, and Syr Jhan.

(f) "the devil is no falsar than is he" (71d).

(g) "the devil go with thee down the lane" (83d).

(h) "meet to set the devil on sale" (77b).

(b) "as we may we love to go gay" (27a).

GEAN, see Triacle.

GEAR, "ware that gear" (71d), i.e. be careful of that matter: gear formerly did service for not only dress or ornament, but for outfit of all kinds, goods, and property generally; also matter, business, affair, &c. "I will remedy this gear ere long!"—Shakspeare, 2 Henry VI. (1594), iii. 1.

GEAT, "nor nought we can geat" (111a), get: see the rhyme with "meat" in next line. Another example occurs (151b), where "geat me" rhymes with "eat me."

GEESE, see Fox.

GENTLE, "farewell, gentle Geoffrey" (36b).

GENTLEMAN, "Jack would be a gentleman if he could speak French" (35b) is obviously a relic of the Norman subversion of England. Speaking of the rule of the Anglo-Norman kings, the elder Disraeli writes:—"This was the time when it was held a shame among Englishmen to appear English. It became proverbial to describe a Saxon who ambitioned some distinguished rank, that 'he would be a gentleman if he could but talk French.'"—Amenities of Literature.

GERMAN'S LIPS, see Jerman.

GID, "such a gid did her head take" (40c), properly a disease in sheep, now known as "sturdy," marked by staggers, stupor, &c., and which is caused by an insect in the brain: hence gid here="maggot," fancy, "bee in bonnet."

(h) "with many conditions good, one that is ill Defaceth the flower of all, and doth all spill" (76d), i.e. "the strength of a chain is that of its weakest link."

(i) "evil gotten good never proveth well" (42*d*).

(j) "her good be laid up so, lest thieves might spy it, that n'other she could, nor he can, come by it" (100*c*).

(k) "he that hath plenty of goods shall have more; He that hath but little, he shall have less; He that hath right nought, right nought shall possess" (46*b*).

(l) "I hope good hap be not all outworn" (93*d*).

(m) "she . . . for love . . . he . . . for good . . . to wed" (128*c*), good (as in c, d, i, j) = property.

(n) see Beginning, Enough, Farthing, Feast, Good, Horse, Merry, Play, Wind, Wit.

GOOD CHEAP, see Bargains, Best.

GOODWIN SANDS, "set up shop upon Goodwin's sands" (92*c*), properly Godwin Sands, from Godwin Earl of Kent, the father of King Harold II. The land now represented by these quicksands (off the east coast of Kent) was given to the monastery of St. Augustin at Canterbury, but the abbot neglecting to keep the sea wall in repair, the tract was submerged about 1100.

GOOSE, (a) "the pure penitent that stole a goose and stuck down a feather" (42*c*; 201*a*), otherwise "to steal a goose and give the giblets in alms."

(b) "as deep drinketh the goose as the gander" (82*d*), "what is good for the goose is good for the gander" is the modern version. "Gentlewoman, either you thought my wits very short, that a sip of wine could alter me, or else yours very sharp, to cut me off so roundly, when as I (without offence be it spoken) have heard, that as deepe drinketh the goose as the gander."—Lyly, Euphues and his England.

GOOSE GIBLET, see Hare.

GOSLING, "who meddleth in all things may shoe the gosling" (59*d*; 209*c*), undertake a work of supererogation, engage in a foolish or profitless task. "Whoso melles of wat men dos, Let hym cum hier and shoo the ghos."—Inscrip. in Whalley Church (c. 1434). "What hath lay men to do The gray goose for to sho!"—Skelton, Colin Clout (c. 1510). Compare "It is as great pyte to se a woman wepe as a gose to go barefote."—Hundred Mery Talys (c. 1525).

HAB OR NAB (9b), have or have not, without order, by fair means or foul.

HACKNEY-MEN (40b), originally proprietors of horses let for hire: hackney=a saddle horse. It was not until the reign of Charles I. that the title was transferred to the drivers of vehicles, the year 1625 being the date of the first appearance of hackney coaches in the streets of London. They were then only twenty in number, but the innovation occasioned an outcry (Sharman): "The world runs on wheelles. The hackney-men, who were wont to have furnished travellers in all places with fitting and serviceable horses for any journey, (by the multitude of coaches) are undone by the dozens, and the whole commonwealth most abominably jaded, that in many places a man had as good to ride on a wooden post, as to poast it upon one of those hunger-starv'd hirelings."—Taylor, Works (1630).

HAD, (a) "had I wist" (6c; 219d), had I known: a common exclamation in old writers, who also used it substantively. "But, out alas, I wretch too late did sorrowe my amys, Unless lord Promos graunt me grace, in vayne is had-y-wist."—Whetstone, Promos and Cassandra (1578), ii. 2. "His pallid feares, his sorrows, his affrightings, His late-wisht had-I-wists, remorsefull bitings."—Browne, Brit. Past. (1613), I., ii. 57.

(b) "who had that he hath not would do that he doeth not" (95d).

HADDOCK, (a) "not worth a haddock" (99d), of small value: cf. "as witty as a haddock"=downright foolish (Hickscorner [c. 1550], E.E.D.S., Anon. Plays, Ser. 1, 153b).

(b) "thus had he brought haddock to paddock" (99d), outrun the constable: haddock=cod=purse ("the fish we call a hadock, or a cod" [Florio])—the meaning thus being, a purse or bag of money has melted as if cast to the paddocks (frogs).

HAIR, (a) "make his hair grow through his hood" (66b; 198a), go-betweens will become rivals: usually the phrase means "to cuckold." "It will make his hair grow through his hood."—Ingelend, Disobedient Child (c. 1550), Works (E.E.D.S.), 74b. "French hood, French hood, I will make your hair grow thorough."—Middleton, Anything for a Quiet Life (1662).

(b) "long hair and short wit" (82*d*). "Hair! 'tis the basest stubble; in scorn of it The proverb sprung, —He has more hair than wit."—Decker, Satiromastix (1602). "More hair than wit,—it may be; I'll prove it: The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt: the hair, that covers the wit, is more than the wit, for the greater hides the less."—Shakspeare, Two Gentlemen of Verona (1595), iii. 2.

(c) "take a hair from his beard" (78*d*).

(d) see Chickens, Dog.

HALF, (a) "this half sheweth what the whole meaneth" (84*d*).

(b) "that's just if the half shall judge the whole" (50*a*).

(c) "half warned, half armed" (77*a*), the modern version is "forewarned, forearmed."

HALFPENNY, see Hand.

HALL, "it is merry in hall when beards wag all" (79*d*), an extremely popular saying in olden times. "'It is merry in hall when beards wag all.' Husband, for this, these words to mind I call: This is meant by men, in their merry eating, Not to wag their beards in brawling and threatening.—Wife, the meaning hereof differeth not two pins, Between wagging of men's beards and women's chins" (167*b*).

HALTING, see Cripple.

HALTER, "thy taking of thine halter in thine arms teacheth other to beware of their harms by thine" (42*b*).

• HALVES, "as for that, reason runneth to halves—As well for the cow calf as for the bull" (62*a*), see Cow-calf.

HAND, (a) "so hard is your hand set on your half-penny" (14*c*; 174*b*), eye on main chance, attention on self-interest. "Ri. Dromio, looke heere, now is my hand on my half-peny. Half. Thou liest, thou hast not a farthing to lay thy hands on."—Lyly, Mother Bombie (1594).

(b) "lay your hand on your heart" (101c), as a symbol of sincerity.

(c) "glad is he that hath her in hand" (52d), under control.

(d) "many hands make light wark" (66b; 221d). "The werke is the soner done that hathe many handes: Many handys make light werke: my leve child."—How the Goode Wif Thought hir Doughter (c. 1471), 113.

HARD, (a) "ill believed and worse hard" (91*b*), heard: note the rhyme.
(b) see Cripple.

HARDLY, "hardly if ye can" (59*c*), boldly, certainly. "And hardly, aungel, trust therto, For doughtles it shal be do."—MS. Coll. Trin. Dubl. D. iv. 18.

HARD WALL, see Wall.

HARDY, "ye be hardy" (135*d*), courageous, bold.

HARE, (a) "there goeth the hare away" (73*a*; 190*a*), "that's the gist, trend, secret, why and wherefore of the matter." "Man. By my fayth a lytell season I folowd the counsell and dyet of reason. Gets. There went the hare away."—Medwall, Nature (1510).

(b) "to hold with the hare and run with the hound" (24*a*; 180*c*), play a double game, keep on good terms with two contending parties.

(c) "mad as March hare" (73*a*; 184*b*), a proverbial type of madness; but Skelton has it differently. "Thanne they begynne to swere and to stare, And be as braynles as a Marshe hare."—Blowbol's Test (14—?). "As mery as a Marche hare."—Skelton, Magn. (1526), 930. "I saye, thou madde Marche hare."—Skelton, Replycation Against Certayne Yong Scolers (1520).

(d) "catch (or hunt for) a hare with a taber" (21*a*), to engage in or attempt a hopeless task: the taber was a shallow drum beaten with the fingers. "The poore man that gives but his bare fee, or perhaps pleads in formâ pauperis, he hunteth for hares with a taber, and gropeth in the darke to find a needle in a botle of hay."—Greene, Quip for an Upstart Courtier (1592), Harl. Misc., v. 407. "One day after the set of this comet men shall catch hares with tabers."—Simon Smel-knave, Fearefull and Lamentable Effects of Two Dangerous Comets (1591).

(e) "set the hare's head against the goose jiblet"

(64a). "Ide set mine old debts against my new driblets, And the hare's foot against the goose giblets."—Decker, Shomakers Holiday (1600).

HARM, (a) "there is no harm done in all this fray, Neither pot broken nor water spilt" (44c).

(b) "thou art so wood thou knowest not who doth thee harm, who doth thee good" (86c).

(c) "it is good to beware by other men's harms" (42b).

HARP, (a) "ye harp on the string that giveth no melody" (63d), dwell persistently: see infra.

(b) "harp no more on that string" (96d; 184c), supra.

HARPERS, "have among you blind harpers" (79b), a proverbial pledge in drinking. Macaulay observes that in the old ballad poetry, all the gold is "red" and all the ladies "gay." So, also, the harpers are blind. The Poet's Blind Man's Bough: or, Have among you blinde Harpers, was the title of a tract by Martin Parker, printed in 1651. "Leoc. Have towards thee, Philotas. Phil. To thee, Archippus. Arch. To thee, Molops. Molops. Have among you, blind fiddlers."—Cartwright, Royall Slave (1651).

HOPPETH, "when wooers hop in and out, long time may bring him that hoppeth best at last to have the ring" (9a).

HORNS, see Cow.

HORN WOOD (99c), i.e. horn-mad, stark staring mad, originally because cuckolded; see Wood. "Sure my mistress is horn-mad."—Shakspeare, Comedy of Errors (1593), ii. 1.

HOROLOGE, see Devil.

HORSADOWN (291b), ? Horsleydown.

HORSE, (a) "rub a galled horse on the back and he will kick" (196c), see next entry.

(b) "I rub the galled horse back till he winch" (84c), winch = wince.

(c) "a scald horse is good enough for a scabb'd squire" (40b), i.e. like to like; a mangy screw is good enough for a disreputable rider: "scald" and "scabb'd" are synonymous, and both are used in contempt of anything shabby, disgusting, or paltry. "Like lettuce like lips, a scabb'd horse for a scald squire."—New Custom, Anon. Pl., Ser. 1 (E.E.D.S.), 174*d*. In the Epigrams (200*c*), the identity of "scald" and "scabb'd" is shown by the wording of the proverb being reversed.

(d) "a short horse is soon curried" (23*b*; 174*c*).

(e) "a man may well lead a horse to the water, but he cannot make him drink" (33*a*; 175*b*).

(f) "a good horse that never stumbleth" (20*a*; 187*a*). "A good horse that trippeth not once in a journey."—Three Proper and Wittie Familiar Letters (1580).

(g) "some man may steal a horse better than some other may stand and look" (91*d*; 203*a*). "Good Epi, let mee take a nap; for as some man may better steale a horse then another looke over a hedge; so divers shall be sleepe when they would faintest take rest."—Lyly, Endimion (1591).

(h) "it is . . . a proud horse that will not bear his own provender" (98*b*). "Sir, hee's a proud horse that will not carry his own provander, I warrant yee."—Porter, Two Angry Women of Abingdon (1599).

(i) "recover the horse, or lese the saddle too" (95*a*).

(j) "no man ought to look a given horse in the mouth" (13*c*). "A gyven hors may not be loked in the tethe."—Vulgaria Stambrigi (c. 1510). "It is certainly as old as Jerome, a Latin father of the fourth century; who when found fault with . . . quoted the proverb, that it did not behove to look a gift horse in the mouth."—Trench, Proverbs and their Lessons.

(k) "as shortly as a horse will lick his ear" (93*d*).

(m) "God have mercy, horse" (78*c*), i.e. God help us; according to Tarlton's Jests (1611), this arose from an adventure of Richard Tarlton, the player, with Banks's performing horse, Morocco, the phrase being a retort that tickled the ears of the assembled crowd and "caught on."

(n) "the grey mare is the better horse" (64*a*), the wife is master: a tradition, perhaps, of the time when priests were forbidden to carry arms or ride on a male horse: Non enim licuerat pontificem sacrorum vel arma ferre, vel praeter quam in equâ equitare.—Beda, Hist. Eccl. ii. 13. Cf. Fr. Mariage d'épervier = a hawk's marriage; the female hawk being the larger and stronger bird. Lord Macaulay's explanation (preference given to the grey mares of Flanders over the finest coach horses of England) is the merest guess-work. "What! shall the graye mayre be the better horse, And the wanton styll at home?"—Pryde and Abuse of Women Now a Dayes (c. 1550).

(o) "evermore the common horse is worst shod" (42a), cf. "the shoemaker's wife is worst shod."

(p) "folk call on the horse that will carry away" (42a), in modern phrase, "the willing horse is always most ridden."

(q) "as wholesome a morsel for my comely corse as a shoulder of mutton for a sick horse" (85a), utterly worthless, distasteful. "Counsel to him is as good as a shoulder of mutton to a sick horse."—Jonson, Every Man in his Humour (1596), ii. 1.

(r) see Cart, Colt, Galled, Grass.

HORSE LOAVES, "as high as two horse loaves her person is" (24c), a jocular standard of measurement (sometimes three horse loaves): compare the phrase, still current, which says that diminutive persons must stand on three penny loaves to look over the back of a goat, or a duck. The horse-loaf was made of beans and wheat. "Her stature scant three horse loaves did exceed."—Harington, Ariosto.

HORSE PLUM, "purple ruddy like a horse plum" (24c), horse, a generic qualificative=coarse, large.

HOSE, "your heart is in your hose" (36d; 175d). "Primus Pastor. Breck outt youre voce, yet se as ye yelp. Tercius Pastor. I may not for the pose bot I have help. Secundus Pastor. A, thy hert is in thy hose."—Towneley Mysteries (c. 1430).

HOST, see Oste, Reckoners.

HOT, (a) "hot love soon cold" (6d). "Dowghter, in this I can thinke none oother But that it is true thys proverbe old, Hastye love is soone hot and soone cold!"—Wyt and Science (c. 1540), Anon. Pl., Ser. 4.

(b) "when th' iron is hot, strike" (8c), act at the right moment, seize an opportunity. Fr. "Messieurs, ce pendant que le fer est chaud il le fault battre"

(Rabelais, II. 31). "Birdlime. Strike whilst the iron is hot. A woman, when there be roses in her cheeks, cherries on her lips, civet in her breath, ivory in her teeth, lilies in her hand, and liquorice in her heart, why, she's like a play: if new, very good company; but if stale, like old Jeronimo, go by, go by, therefore, as I said before, strike."—Webster, Westward Ho (1607). See Iron.

(c) "little pot soon hot," see Pot.

(d) "neither too heavy nor too hot" (48b).

(e) "soon hot, soon cold" (88b).

NUT, "knack me that nut" (80c), solve me that problem, explain that, overcome this difficulty: knack = crack.

NYCEBECETUR, "your ginifinee nycebecetur" (32d), apparently a term of contempt: Heywood uses it again in Play of the Weather (E.E.D.S., Works, I. 123), "such nycebyceturs as she is." The word has puzzled all editors so far; all that seems clear is that Heywood in each case employs the word in contempt of a woman. A somewhat exhaustive enquiry on the phrase is summed up in Heywood's Works (E.E.D.S.), III. Notebook s.v. Nicebecetur: see also Udall's Works (E.E.D.S.), pp. 138-9.

OAR, "she (or he) must have an oar in every man's barge" (24b; 207a), meddle in the business or affairs of others: somewhat earlier, the proverb occurs in a ballad entitled "Long have I bene a singing man," by John Redford (c. 1540). "In each mannes bote would he have an ore."—Udall, Apoph. (c. 1543), II. 180.

OCCUPY (289c), use, with an eye in the Epigram on the obscene sense of the word. "Inke made of soote, such as printers occupie."—Nomenclator (1585). "These villains will make the word captain as odious as the word occupy."—Shakspeare, 2 Hen. IV. (1598), II. 4.

OFFERING, "long standing and small offering maketh poor parsons" (226c).

OFFICE, see Jack.

OLD, see Children, Devil, Dog, Fool, Need, Saint, Shoe.

ONE, see Cometh.

ONY, "had I ony" (96*b*), any.

OR (passim), ere, before, lest, than.

OROLOGE, see Devil.

OSTE, "ye would now here oste" (34*c*), dwell, remain : i.e. host.

OTHER, "other thou art a fool or . . . I am one" (144*b*), either.

O'THING, "this o'thing" (29*c*), one thing : O=numeral adjective, a reduced form of ôn, oon : cf. nothing. "O flessh they been, and o flessh as I gesse Hath but oon herte, in wele and in distresse."—Chaucer, Merch. T. (c. 1386), 91. "Ill huswiferie othing or other must craue."—Tusser, Husb. (1573), 184 (1878). Also in Epigrams (172*b*), "I grant this othing."

OUT, (a) "out of sight, out of mind" (8*d*).
(b) see Smelled, Way.

OUT ILES (41*d*), properly islands away from the mainland : here figuratively for an outlandish district, up-country, away from a centre of population.

OVEN, "no man will another in the oven seek, except that himself have been there before" (84*b*), the commonest version is, "no woman will her daughter seek in the oven," &c. "A hackney proverb in men's mouths ever since King Lud was a little boy, or Belinus, Brennus' brother, for the love hee bare to oysters, built Billingsgate."—Nash, Have with you to Saffron Waldon (1596), 157.

OVERBLOW, see Wind.

OVERCOMETH, see Might.

OVERTHWART, "overthwart the shins" (24*c*), across.

OWL, "keep corners, or hollow trees with th' owl" (71*c*).

OWN, "alway own is own at the reckoning's end"
(64*d*; 214*d*; 215*a*).

OX, see Black ox.

PAD, "it will breed a pad in the straw" (63*d*; 226*b*), a lurking or hidden danger. "Though they make never so fayre a face, yet there is a padde in the strawe."—Palsgrave, &c. (1530), 595, 1.

PADDOCK, see Haddock, Weather.

PAIN, (a) "change from ill pain to worse is worth small hire" (72*c*).

(b) "plant your own pain" (69*b*).

(c) "I have wrought mine own pain" (26*a*).

(d) "take a pain for a pleasure all wise men can"
(13*d*).

PAINTED SHEATH, see Sheath.

PAIR, see Mend.

PAN, see Cat.

PANNIER, see Pig.

PARING, "she will not part with the paring of her nails" (40*a*).

PARISH PRIEST, "the parish priest forgetteth that ever he hath been holy water clerk" (38*b*; 174*d*).

PARS VERS, "tell him he's pars vers" (59*c*), perverse.

PARSONS, "long standing and small offering maketh poor parsons" (98*a*; 226*c*).

PARSON'S LEMAN, see Leman.

PART, see Paring, Poverty.

PAST, "let all things past, pass" (90*b*), let bygones be bygones; let sleeping dogs lie.

PASTURE, see Calves.

PATERNOSTER, (a) "he may be in my paternoster . . but . . he shall never come in my creed" (96*c*; 189*c*).
"I trust yee remember your jugling at Newington with a christall stone, your knaveries in the wood by Wanstead, the wondrous treasure you would discover in the Isle of Wight, al your villanies about that peece of service, as perfectly known to some of my friends yet living as their Paster-noster, who curse the time you ever came into their creed."—Chettle, Kind-Heart's Dream (1592).

(b) "no penny, no paternoster" (96c), no pay, no prayers. "The Pater-noster, which was wont to fill a sheet of paper, is written in the compasse of a penny; whereupon one merrily assumed that proverbe to be derived, No penny no pater-noster. Which their nice curtayling putteth mee in minde of the custome of the Scythians, who, if they had beene at any time distressed with famine, tooke in their girdles shorter."—Greene, Arcadia (1587).

(c) "pattering the devil's paternoster to himself" (39b), grumbling, muttering imprecations. "Yet wol they seyn harm and grucche and murmure priuely for verray despit, whiche wordes men clepen the deueles Pater noster."—Chaucer, Pars. T. (c. 1386), 434.

PATIENCE, "let patience grow in your garden alway" (44d).

PATTEN, "her tongue was clapping like a patten" (135b), i.e., click-clack like a pair of pattens; "nineteen to the dozen": see Tongue.

PAUL, see Peter.

PAUL'S WEATHERCOCK, (115d); frequently referred to in old writers. "I am as very a turncote as the wethercoke of Poles."—Mariage of Witt and Wisdome (E.E.D.S. Anon. Pl. 4 Ser.).

PAY, see Peter, Shot.

PAYMENT, "misreckoning is no payment" (64d; 212d).

PEAL, see Ringeth.

PEAS, "who hath many peas may put the more in the pot" (12c).

PENNY, (a) "a penny for your thought" (61b), a call to persons in a "brown study." "Come, friar, I will shake him from his dumps. How cheer you, sir? a penny for your thought."—Greene, Friar Bacon (1588), 161.

(b) "to turn the penny" (92b), earn money: the phrase occurs (1510) in Foxe's Acts and Monuments, iv. "His wyfe made hym so wyse, That he wolde tourne a peny twyse, And then he called it a ferthynges."—Maid Emlyn (c. 1520) [Hazlitt, Early Pop. Poet. iv. 85].

(c) "not one penny to bliss him" (89a), very poor.

PENNY FATHER, (123c), miser, niggard. "Alas, this reconfirms what I said rather, Cosmus has ever been a penny-father.—Harington, Epigrams (d. 1612), ii. 21.

PEPPER, (a) "pepper in the nose" (64c; 212a), quick at offence, testy: Fr., moutarde au nez. "There are ful proude-herted men paciente of tonge, And boxome as of berynge to burgeys and to lordes, And to pore peple hav peper in the nose."—Langland, Piers Plowman (1362), xv. 197.

(b) "pepper is black and hath a good smack" (62d).

PERSEVER, "doth persever" (143d), note the rhyme with "ever."

PESCOD ALE, (189b), pescod=pea-pod: much rustic folklore was formerly attached to pea-time, of which not a little found survival in New England. In As You Like It (ii. 4) Touchstone says to Rosalind, "I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her," which perhaps is the most fitly paralleled in the following passage from Browne's Brit. Past. (p. 71): "The peascod greene oft with no little toyle Hee'd seeke for in the fattest fertil'st soile, And rend it from the stalke to bring it to her, And in her bosome for acceptance wooe her." Both Nares and Halliwell may be consulted in this respect. Pescod-ale is doubtless the brew made for "pescod-time." "In pescod time, when hound and horne, Gives ear till buck be kill'd."—England's Helicon.

PETER, "rob Peter and pay Paul" (31c; 170c), take of one to give to another. The proverb pretty certainly derives its origin from the fact that in the reign of Edward VI. the lands of St. Peter at Westminster were appropriated to raise money for the repair of St. Paul's in London. John Thirlby, the first and only Bishop of Westminster (1541-50), "having wasted the patrimony allotted by the King (Hen. VIII.) for the support of the see, was translated to Norwich, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster" (Haydn, Dignities). Heylin (Hist. Ref. i. 256, 1661) says that the lands at Westminster were so dilapidated by Bishop Thirlby that there was almost nothing to support the dignity. . . . Most of the lands invaded by the great men of the Court, the rest laid out for reparation to the Church of St. Paul, pared almost to the very quick in those days of rapine. From hence, he says, came first that significant byword (as is said by some) of robbing Peter to pay Paul. The French form of the proverb, "découvrir saint Pierre pour couvrir saint Paul" gives additional colouring to the statement, and is supported by Barclay in his Eclogues (Percy Soc. xxiii. xvii.), "They robbe St. Peter to cloth St. Paul."

PICKPURSE (31c), pickpocket.

PICKTHANK (23d), toady: also as verb. "There be two tythes, rude and ranke, Symkyn Tytyuell and Pers Pykthanke."—Skelton, Works (1513-25), ii. 60 (Dyce). "Smiling pickthanks and base newsmongers."—Shakspeare, 1 Henry IV. (1598), iii. 2.

PIE, (a) "merry as a pie" (60a).
(b) see High.

PIECE, "this maid, the piece peerless in mine eye" (10c), piece=a person, male or female: often in contempt. "His princess say you? . . . Ay, the most peerless piece."—Shakspeare, Winter's Tale (1604), v. I.

PIG, (a) "a pig of mine own sow" (78c; 204b).

(b) "buy the pig in the poke" (97d; 182b), of a blind bargain. "And in the floor, with nose and mouth to broke, They walwe as doon two pigges in a poke."—Chaucer, Reeves Tale (c. 1386), 358.

(c) "yet snatch ye at the poke that the pig is in, not for the poke, but the pig good cheap to win" (97d).

(d) "when the pig is proffered . . . hold up the poke" (8c), "never refuse a good bargain." "When me profereth the pigge, open the poghe."—Douce MS. (c. 1400), 52.

(e) "bid me welcome, pig; I pray thee kiss me" (79d).

(f) "a pig of the worse panier" (102c).

PIKE, "one good lesson . . . I pike" (8c, 11a, 72b), mark, note, learn, pick out.

PIKED, "a pretty piked matter" (44c), cf. "a pretty kettle of fish"; piked = marked.

PILATE'S VOICE (25a), a loud, ranting voice. "In Pilate voys he gan to cry, And swor by armes, and by blood and bones."—Chaucer, Cant. Tales (c. 1386), 3126.

PILLAR, see Post.

PINCHPENNY, "that benchwhistler is a pinchpenny" (37c), a niggard in food, dress, or money: it early occurs in Occleve (1412), De Reg. Princip. "They accompt one . . . a pynch penny if he be not prodygall."—Lyly, Euphues, Anat. of Wit (1579), 109.

PINSONS, "pinching pinsons" (263a), pincers. "Two crosse forkes of tonges which come from it one both sides, in the toppes whereof are little thinges like pynsons, to detaine and hold fast."—Topsell, Hist. Serp. (1608), 224.

PIPE, (a) "who that leaveth surety and leaneth unto chance when fools pipe, by authority he may dance" (101d).

(b) "to dance after her pipe" (75b).

(c) "he can ill pipe that lacketh his upper lip" (94c).

PISS, see Fart, Nettle.

PITCHERS, "small pitchers have wide ears" (65c), usually of children: what children hear at home soon flies abroad. "Q. Elizabeth. A parlous boy; go to, you are too shrewd. Archbishop. Good madam, be not angry with the child. Q. Elizabeth. Pitchers have ears."—Shakspeare, Richard III. (1597), ii. 4.

PLAIN, (a) "plain without pleats" (69b), in the Epi-grams on Proverbs (210a) it is thus amplified, "the plain fashion is best . . . plain without pleats."

(b) see Best.

PLAT, "in any place or plat" (257b), situation, place, locality.

PLAY, "as good play for nought as work for nought" (44b; 180b).

PLAYETH, see Win.

PLEASURE, (a) "who will, in time present, pleasure refrain, shall in time to come more pleasure obtain" (32*d*).

(b) "follow pleasure and then will pleasure flee: flee pleasure and pleasure will follow thee" (32*d*).

PLENTY, "plenty is no dainty" (62*b*).

POKE, see Pig.

POLL, POUL (passim), rob, plunder, pillage: a play on poll=shave frequently occurs (see 259*d*).

POMPOUS PROVISION, "pompous provision cometh not all alway of gluttony but of pride some time" (81*d*).

POOR, see Offering, Souls.

POST, (a) "from post to pillar . . . tost" (55*c*; 218*d*), hither and thither, with aimless effort or action: literally, from the same to the same—pillar=Lat. columna=post. Thus in the Ayenbite of Inwit a good man becomes a post in God's temple. "And, dainty duke, whose doughty dismal fame From Dis to Dædalus, from post to pillar, Is blown abroad."—Shakspeare and Fletcher, Two Noble Kinsmen (c. 1611), iii. 5.

(b) "in post pace" (51*b*), with all possible speed or expedition. "Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself, In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you."—Shakspeare, 3 Henry VI. (1594), ii. 1.

(c) "a mill post thwitten to a pudding prick" (101*a*), said of unthrifths: twitten=to whittle down; pudding prick=the skewer used to fasten a pudding bag.

(d) "a post of physic" (55*c*), probably a posset.

POT, (a) "the weaker goeth to the pot" (68*d*; 226*c*), pot has been thought to=(a) pit (i.e. of destruction), or (b) the melting pot of the refiner: the meaning, however, is clear, and the colloquialism, though ancient, is still in common use. In the illustration (infra) and in many monkish references the "pit" or "pot" is obviously a kind of oubliette, in which refractory monks or impenitent heretics were immured, suffering a lingering or speedy death at the will of their gaolers. "Under a pot he schal be put in a pryvie chamber."—Piers Plowman, 62. "Not one of them shall 'scape, but they shall to the pot."—Jacob and Esau (E.E.D.S., Anon. Pl. 2 Ser. 77a), v. 4 (1568).

(b) "the pot so long to the water goeth, till at the last it cometh home broken" (82*b*), i.e. the inevitable must happen. "So long went the pot to the water, that at last it came broken home, and so long put he his hand into his purse, that at last the empty bottome returned him a writ of Non est inventus."—Greene, Never too Late (1590).

(c) "neither pot broken nor water spilt" (227*c*).

(d) "to see the pot both skimmed for running over and also all the liquor run at rover" (99*b*), to run at rover=to have too much liberty: here=squandered, wasted, dissipated.

(e) "he that cometh last to the pot is soonest wroth" (99*b*).

(f) "my pot is whole and my water clean" (83*a*).

(g) "little pot soon hot" (31*b*), a little suffices; little people (or minds) are soon angered. "Now were I not a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my very teeth, . . . for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold."—Shakespeare, Taming of the Shrew (1593), iv. 1.

POTTED, "she was potted thus like a sot" (99*b*), ruined: see Pot (a).

POULST, (170*c*), see Poll.

POVERTY, "poverty parteth fellowship" (48*d*; 218*c*).

POWDERING TUB (245*a*), properly a salting tub, but also applied to the salivation bed or cradle, formerly used in the cure of the lues venerea.

PERIL, "the peril of prating out of tune by note" (68*c*).

PRAYERS, "much motion . . . to prayers with . . . little devotion" (96*c*).

PREASE, "som folk in luck cannot prease" (21*b*, 34*c*), press forward hasten, "crowd in." "No humble suitors prease to speak for right."—Shakspeare, 3 Henry VI. (1595), iii. 1.

PRECIOUS STONES, see Hog.

PREFE (in pl. PREVES), "some case . . . showeth prefe" (46*d*, 27*d*), proof: also Prefe (120*b*).

PRESSED (220*b*), ready: Fr. prêt or O. Fr. prest.

PRICK, (a) "folly it is to spurn against a prick" (68*b*), in Biblical phrase, "to kick against," &c.

(b) "ye shoot nigh the prick" (15*a*), in archery the point or mark in the centre of the butts; or, as we should now say, "the bull's-eye." "Therefore seeing that which is most perfect and best in shootinge, as alwayes to hit the pricke, was never seene nor hard tell on yet amonges men."—Ascham, Toxoph. (1544), 123.

PRICKETH, see Provender, Sharp thorn.

PRIDE, (a) "pride will have a fall" (27*a*).

(b) "pride goeth before and shame cometh after" (27*b*). "Pryde gothe before and shame cometh behynde . . . We may wayle the tyme that ever it came here."—Treatise of a Gallant (c. 1510).

PRIEST, "I would do more than the priest spake of on Sunday" (95*d*).

PRICHT, "his nostrils so pricht" (129*c*), pricked: still dialectical.

PROFACE (79*b*), "much good may it do you!" a common welcome at meals: in the Epigrams we find (page 267): "Reader . . . for preface, proface." "The dinner's half done before I say grace, And bid the old knight and his guest proface."—Heywood, Wise Wom. of Hogsdon (1638).

PROFFERED, "proffered service stinketh" (61*a*; 209*a* and b).

PROPERTY, "her property preves" (27*d*), cloak, disguise.

PROPHET, "not to my profit a prophet was I" (91*b*), the pun still does yeoman service.

PROUD, (a) "I proud and thou proud who shall bear th' ashes out?" (26*d*).

(b) see Cock.

PROVE, see Friend.

PROVENDER, "his provender pricketh him" (33*d*; 216*c* and d).

PROVIDE, see Worst.

PUDDING, see Dog.

PUDDING TIME, "this year cometh . . . in pudding time" (97c), in the nick of time, opportunely. "You come in pudding time, or else I had dress'd them."—Tylney, Locrine (1594), iii. 3.

PULL, see Crow.

PULPIT, "a proper pulpit piece" (82c), "gospel," something to be received without question because expounded as it were ex cathedrâ.

PURSE, (a) "the purse is threadbare" (20b; 221c).

(b) "he is purse sick and lacketh a physician" (41b), needy, hard up.

(c) "ye would buy my purse—give me a purgation" (41a).

(d) "be it better, be it worse, do ye after him that beareth the purse" (13a).

(e) see Light.

PUT, see Case.

QUARRELOUS (231a), here=apt to engender contention, fault-finding, complaining. "Goete wepynges and quarrellouse plaintes."—Caxton, Encydos (1490), xxii. 80.

QUARTERS, see Four Quarters.

QUEANS, "flearing queans" (66a), wantons, strumpets: primarily quean (like queen)=a woman without regard to character or position; the spelling ultimately differentiated the debased from the reputable meaning, a noteworthy instance occurring in Langland (Piers Plowman [1363], ix. 46, "At church in the charnel cheorles aren yuel to knowe Other a knyght fro a knave other a queyne fro a queene.")

QUESTION, "this is a question of old enquiring" (91a).

QUICH, "pigs dare not quich there" (293a), quich=stir, move.

QUICK, "quick as a bee" (21d).

QUIGHT (47d), quit.

QUITTANCE, see Sufferance.

RABBIT, "who the devil will change a rabbit for a rat" (86a).

RAIN, see Clouk.

RATE, "rise ye as ye rate" (55d), reckon, fix, decide.

RAVINE, "ruin of one ravine" (93c), ravine=an act of rapine. "I sorowed for the provinces misfortunes, wrackt by private ravins and publick taxes."—Q. Eliz. tr. Boeth. (1593), I. pr. iv. 9.

REAM, "a ream thence" (200a), realm, kingdom; here a type of great distance: the usage is unrecorded in the O.E.D.

RECEIVERS, "where be no receivers, there be no thieves" (48c; 180b). "It is a comon sayinge, ware there no receyver there shoulde be no thefe. So ware there no stewes, there shulde not so many honeste mennes doughters rune away from there fathers and playe the whores as dothe."—A Christen Exhortation unto Customable Swearers (1575).

RECKONERS, (a) "reckoners without their host must reckon twice" (19d). Fr., "Comptoit sans son hoste."—Rabelais, Gargantua.

(b) "even reckoning maketh long friends" (64d: 213a).

(c) "reckoning without thine host thou must reckon twice" (173b).

RECKONING, see Reckoners.

RECUMBENTIBUS (85b), a knock-down blow: cf. "circumbendibus." "He yaff the Kyng Episcropus Suche a recumbentibus, He smot in-two bothe helme and mayle."—Laud Troy Bk. (c. 1400), 7400.

RED HERRING, see Fish.

RELEVAVITH, "what shall be his relevavith" (36a), relief. "I see not any greate lightlywod that any good summe will comm in, tyl after Christmas, and then no more than the releuauithes."—State Papers, Hen. VIII. (1546), I. ii. 840.

REN, RENNING, "to ren as swiftly" (118d), run: hence (119a), running; and so forth.

REST, "money . . . thou dost rest so" (255c), lay by, store for use.

RESTY, "resty wealth" (12*d*): resty may be subject to three glosses=(a) indolent, lazy: meaning that wealth obtained by a rich marriage tends thereto; or (b) it may=restive, coy (as hard to get); or (c)=it may be a contemptuous application of resty=rancid, thus referring to money as "dross," "muck," &c. "Where the master is too resty or too rich to say his own prayers, or to bless his own table."—Milton, Iconoclastes (1649), xxiv.

REVART, "that oath again revart" (128*b*), take back.

REWETH (78*c*), rues.

RHYME, "it may rhyme but it accordeth not" (44*c*; 221*a*). "It may wele ryme but it accordith nought."
—Lydgate, MS. poem, "On Inconstancy."

RICHES, "riches bringeth oft harm and ever fear, where poverty passeth without grudge of grief" (46*d*).

RICHESSE, "beauty without riches" (14*b*), riches: properly a singular, but now used as a plural.

RID, see Rock.

RIGHT, see Might, Nothing.

RIGHT SIDE, "you rose on your right side" (62*c*), a happy augury: the modern usage speaks of the reverse or "wrong side of the bed." "C. What! doth shee keepe house alreadie? D. Alreadie. C. O good God: we rose on the right side to-day."—Terence in English (1614).

RIME, see Rhyme.

RING, "I hopping without for a ring of a rush" (9*a*), see Rush-ring.

RINGETH, "she ringeth a peal, a larum" (78*b*).

RINGLEADER (24*d*), originally one who led a ring, as of dancers, &c.

RIPE, "soon ripe soon rotten" (27*c*): this proverb also occurs in Harman, Caveat, &c. (1567).

RISE, see Sit.

RIVELED, "with riveled old face" (142*b*), wrinkled, shrunk. "Grumbates . . . a man . . . of middle age, and with riveled lims, but carrying with him a brave mind, and ennobled for the ensignes of many goodly victories."—Ammianus Marcellinus (1609).

ROAST, (a) "rule the roast" (13a), to have (or take) the lead (or mastery): roast=roost (probably). "But at the pleasure of me That ruleth the roste alone."—Skelton, Colyn Cloute (c. 1518).

(b) "he looked like one that had beshit the roast" (89c).

(c) "roast a stone" (56c), i.e. one may put warmth into but can never get heat out of a stone. "They may garlicke pill Cary sakes to the mil Or pescoddes they may shil Or els go roste a stone."—Skelton, Why come ye not to Court? (1520).

ROB, see Peter.

ROBBERY, "change is no robbery" (204b), see Change.

ROBIN HOOD, "tales of Robin Hood are good among fools" (94c), the story of Robin Hood ultimately grew so misty and traditional that the name became a generic byword for the marvellous that was not believable. Thus Robin Hood, subs.=a daring lie; Robin Hood's pennyworth (of things sold under value); "Good even, good Robin Hood" (said of civility extorted by fear); "Many talk of Robin Hood that never shot in his bow" (75a)=many speak of things of which they have no knowledge; and "Tales of Robin Hood are good enough for fools." "I write no ieste ne tale of Robin Hood."—Barclay, Ship of Fooles (1509), fol. 250 (1570).

ROCK, "thus rid the rock" (92b and 186d), i.e. so was the distaff managed, manipulated: rock=the distaff or frame about which flax, wool, &c., was arranged and from which the thread was drawn in spinning. Hence here the meaning is "So managed you your thrift badly." "I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you."—Shakspeare, Twelfth Night (1602), iii. 4.

ROD, (a) "when haste proveth a rod made for his own tail" (7a).

(b) "beaten with his own rod" (7a). "— don fust C'on kint sovent est-on batu."—Roman du Renart (c. 1300).

ROLLING STONE, "the rolling stone never gathereth moss" (31c). "I, thy head is alwaies working; it roles, and it roles, Dondolo, but it gathers no mosse, Dondolo."—Marston, Fawn (1606). "Pierre volage ne queult mousse."—De l'Hermite qui se désespéra pour le Larron qui ala en Paradis avant que lui (13th century).

ROME, "Rome was not built in one day and yet stood till . . . finished" (36d; 223a). "Hæc tamen vulgaris sententia me aliquantulum recreavit, quæ etsi non auferre, tamen minuere possit dolorem meum, quæ quidem sententia hæc est, Romam uno die non fuisse conditam."—Queen Elizabeth, Extempore speech before the University of Cambridge (9th August, 1564).

ROOF, "he is at three words up in the house roof" (66d): nowadays we say "up in the skies."

ROPE, (a) "as meet as a rope for a thief" (24c).

(b) "he haleth her by the boy rope" (78c), see Boy rope.

ROPE-RIPE (281a), fit for (or deserving) the hangman's rope. "Lord, how you roll in your rope-ripe terms!"—Chapman, May Day (1611), iii.

ROUGH BIT, "I will bridle thee with rough bit" (181d).

ROUTING, "routing like a hog" (30a), rout=snore.

ROVERS, "ye pry and ye prowle at rovers" (31c)—"letnot your tongue run at rover" (69a)—(also 99b), at rover=wild, unrestrained, at random.

ROWLES, "at rowles" (280b), a precinct situated between the cities of London and Westminster, enjoying certain immunities, and hence called the Liberty of the Rolls: the name being derived from the rolls or records deposited in its chapel.

ROYALS (i.e. RIAL), "a bag of royals and nobles" (97a), royal=an old English gold coin, of varying value, from 10s. in Henry VI.'s time to 15s. in Queen Elizabeth's, whilst in the reign of James I. the rose-rial was worth 30s., and the spur-rial, 15s.: see Noble.

ROYLE, "by your revellous riding on every royle" (81a), royle=a Flemish horse: this would seem to echo the alleged contempt of Henry VIII. as regards Anne of Cleves, whom he described as "a Flanders mare."

RUB, see Horse.

RUIN, "ruin of one ravin was there none greater"
 (93c), see Ravine.

RULE, "better rule than be ruled" (13a; 185c).

RULED, see Dame.

RUN, (a) "he may ill run that cannot go" (94b; 189b).

(b) "ye run to work in haste as nine men held ye"
 (42c).

(c) "she thinketh I run over all that I look on"
 (77c), examine, "possess," have to do with.

(d) see Cat, Hare.

RUNNETH, (a) "he runneth far that never turneth again" (90b; 182a).

(b) see Tongue.

RUSH, "care not a rush" (95a), rush=low standard of value. "And yet yeve ye me nevere The worthe of a risshe."—Langland, Piers Plowman (1362), 2421.

RUSHES, "green rushes for this stranger, straw here" (59b): it was usual, before the introduction of carpets, to strew rushes on the floors of dwelling-houses; and on the entrance of a visitor, hospitality required that they should be renewed. "Where is this stranger?
 Rushes, ladies, rushes: Rushes as green as summer for this stranger."—Beaumont and Fletcher, Valentinian (1617), ii. 4.

RUSH-RING, "a ring of a rush" (9a), a rush ring=a symbol of a mock marriage. "As fit . . . as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger."—Shakspeare, All's Well (1598), ii. 2, 22.

(b) see Day, Mum, Nay.

SAYING, "saying and doing are two things" (73*b*); 171*c*).

SCABB'D, SCALD, see Horse.

SCARBOROUGH WARNING, "Scarborough warning I had" (43*b*; 223*d*), no warning at all; a blow before the word. Fuller in his Worthies says: "The proverb took its original from Thomas Stafford, who in the reign of Queen Mary, 1557, with a small company seized on Scarborough Castle (utterly destitute of provision for resistance) before the townsmen had the least notice of his approach." "I received a message from my lord chamberlaine . . . that I should preach before him upon Sunday next; which Scarborough warning did not only perplex me, but so puzzel me."—Mayhew, Letter (1603, 19th January).

SCRATCHING, see Cat.

SEALED, see Butter.

SEE, (a) "see me and see me not" (69c; 211c).

SHEAF, "take as falleth in the sheaf" (64b; 213a).

SHEATH, "she maketh so much of her painted sheath" (26d; 180c).

SHEEP, (a) "as rich as a new shorn sheep" (42d), penniless, "fleeced." "The nexte that came was a coryar And a Cobelar, his brother, As ryche as a new shorne shepe."—Cocke Lorelles Bote (c. 1510).

(b) "subtilly like a sheep thought I" (20b).

SHEEP'S EYE, "he cast a sheep's eye at her" (185c), ogled, leered: originally to look modestly and with diffidence but always with longing or affection. "That casting a sheepe's eye at hir, away he goes; and euer since he lies by himselfe and pines away."—Greene, Francesco's Fortunes (1590), Works, viii. 191.

SHEEP'S FLESH, "he loveth well sheep's flesh that wets his bread in the wool" (70c): Sharman thinks this refers to a broth or jelly made from the sheep's head boiled with the wool; as also witness the following from a poem attributed to Lydgate—"Of the shepe is cast awaye no thyng; . . . Of whoos hede boyled, with wull and all, Tere cometh a gely and an oyntment ryal."—Treatyse of the Horse, Shepe, and Goos.

SHIFT, "shift each one for himself as he can" (96d).

SHILLING, "to bring a shilling to ninepence" (66c).

SHINS, see Cast.

SHOD, see Shoemaker's wife.

SHOE, (a) "the shoe will hold with the sole" (67c; 197b).

(b) "now for good luck cast an old shoe after me" (21d), an old and still intelligible bit of folk-lore:

allusions to it are very numerous in old writers. "Captain, your shoes are old, pray put 'em off, And let one fling 'em after us."—Beaumont and Fletcher, Honest Man's Fortune (1613).

(c) "myself can tell best where my shoe doth wring me" (69*d*), the moderns substitute "pinch" for "wring." "I wot best, wher wringeth me my sho."—Chaucer, Cant. Tales (1383), 9426.

(d) "who waiteth for dead men's shoes shall go long barefoot" (45*a*), it is tedious looking forward to inheritances. "You are my maister's sonne, and you looke for his lande; but they that hope for dead men's shoes may hap go barefoote."—Two Angry Women of Abington (1599).

(e) see Gosling.

SHOEMAKER'S WIFE, "who is worse shod than the shoemaker's wife" (39*d*; 223*c*), an excuse for lack of something one ought to possess: compare Slipper.

SHOON, "clouted shoon" (145*d*), shoon=shoes: still good Scots.

SHOOT, (a) "ye shoot nigh the prick" (15*a*), prick=point, dot, mark, "bull's-eye."

(b) "he shooteth wide" (205*c* and d).

(c) "whom ye see out of the way, or shoot wide, over-shoot not yourself any side to hide" (58*c*).

(b) see Face.

SHORT, see Cow, Horse.

SHOT, (a) "pay the shot" (45*d*), shot=reckoning, share of expense. "Well at your will ye shall be furnisht. But now a jugling tricke to pay the shot."—Chettle, Kind Harts Dreame (1592).

(b) see Coming, Fool.

SHREW, "every man can rule a shrew save he that hath her" (75a).

SHREWD COW, see Cow.

SHRIFT, "at shrift" (136b).

SIDE, see Bread, Hear.

SIGHT, "out of sight out of mind" (8d; 172d), a saying which is found in Thomas à Kempis (1450), and earlier in Prov. of Hendyng (c. 1320)—"Fer from eye, fer from herte, Quoth Hendyng."

SILVER, see Farthing.

SIMPER DE COCKET (52b), found as a subs. as well as an adj.=coquettish, wanton. "I saw you dally with your simper de cocket."—Heywood, Play of Weather Works, I. 122d). "And gray russet rocket With simper the cocket."—Skelton, The Tunnyng of Elynoure Rummyng (1520).

SING, see Thieves.

SINK, (a) "sink in thine own sin" (28c; 217c).
(b) "sink or swim" (92b).

SIR JOHN (66d), generic for a parish priest: our universities . . . confer the designation of Dominus on those who have taken their first degree of Bachelor of Arts; the word Dominus was naturally translated Sir, and, as almost every clergyman had taken his first degree, it became customary to apply the term to the lower class of the hierarchy.

SIT, "better sit still than rise and fall" (68c; 210d). "Oh Cousin, I have heard my father say, that it is better to sit fast than to rise and fall, and a great wise man who knew the world to a hayre, would say, that the meane was sure: better be in the middle roome, then either in the Garret or the Sellar."—Brereton, Court and Country (1618).

SIX, "a six and seven" (38d; 20c), in confusion, at loggerheads. "Alle in sundur hit [a tun] brast in six or in seuyn."—Avowynne of King Arther (c. 1340), 64 [Camden Soc., Eng. Meln. Rom. 89].

(d) "she lacketh but even a new pair of sleeves" (28a).

(e) see Dagger.

SLEEVELESS ERRAND (17d), the origin of "sleeveless" is a matter of conjecture, though its meaning is tolerably clear: thus "a sleeveless (=inadequate) reason" (Relig. Antiq.); "a sleeveless (=trifling) excuse" (Lyly); "sleeveless (=aimless) rhymes" (Hall); "a sleeveless (=objectless, wanting cover or excuse, fruitless, fool's) errand" (Chaucer, Shakspeare, &c.). Sharman suggests the mediæval custom of favoured knights wearing the sleeve of their mistress as a mark of favour, aspirants failing to obtain the badge being dubbed "sleeveless"—"Sir Launcelot wore the sleive of the faire maide of Asteloth in a tourney, whereat queene Guenever was much displeased" (Spenser).

SLIPPER, "let not the cobbler wade above his slipper" (Epigrams). "Heere are the tenne precepts to be observed in the art of scolding: therefore let not the cobler wade above his slipper. The cobler above his slipper, said Chubb, hee is a knave that made that proverb."—Simon Snel-knave, Fearefull and Lamentable Effects of Two Dangerous Comets (1591).

SLIPSTRING, "a waghalter slipstring" (86*d*), a gallows-bird, one rope-ripe but who has cheated the gallows. "Thow art a slipstring I'le warrant."—Lyly, Mother Bombie (1594), ii. 1.
